DECEIT, LIES USED IN RCMP QUIZZINGS

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Mountie always gets his man — apparently even if it means using brainwashing, lies, decit and sexism.

In a 39-page manual used by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police's training and development branch in Ottawa, officers are instructed to use a variety of techniques to break down a suspect.

They are told to start questioning with everything that is "legal and right." But, if this fails, "I suggest the Marquis of Queensbury rules go out the window and the interrogator must open up his bag of tricks," the book's preface says.

The booklet written by Calgary police inspector A. B. Roberts, was introduced in the Commons Tuesday by conservative member David Macdonald. Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said he would investigate it.

Macdonald, who charged the interrogation methods led to a "perjured information base," said he had an affidavit from RCMP headquarters that the manual was being used.

"To have this book as procedure for our national police is repugnant," he said.

The manual covers a wide variety of techniques, including brainwashing, which it says is designed to make the subject feel "completely foresaken and forgotten."

Once the suspect "is at the lowest depths of despair," after long hours of isolation and questioning, the interrogator is instructed to start "the heaven and hell technique." The prisoner then is offered comforts such as coffee, cigarettes, or an opportunity to see family and friends.

In emphasizing the heaven and hell possibilities, the booklet reminds the reader of the persuasive powers of such men as Adolf Hitler, John Wesley and Billy Graham.

The manual also includes various known police methods such as planting officers in cells, building a "pyramid of lies" to break down an alibi and promising that a secret deal can be made.

But it makes a special point of dealing with sex offenders and women suspects and stereotypes persons according to physique to determine what approach the officer should employ.

Officers are told they can gain confidence with sex offenders by telling them either

ALTA. VOTES

EDMONTON (CP) — Albertans choose today from 293 candidates and six political parties in a provincial election but they will upset tradition as old as the province itself if they decide to switch governments now.

Before the Conservatives first gained election in 1971, the average life span for uninterrupted rule by a governing party in Alberta had been 22 years.

Fight to the Death, Thieu Tells Men

Times News Services

SAIGON — South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu today commanded government troops to stand and fight to the death at their present positions.

Thieu, reading an order of the day over the radio, said the Indochina war had reached a final, decisive phase.

"Starting today, fellow soldiers, you must at all costs interdict the enemy advance over your actual position and our actual front," he said.

"You must mobilize all your initiative and ability to destroy as many enemies as you can and to counterattack strongly."

North Vietnamese troops, meanwhile, captured the former imperial capital of Hue today and advanced toward isolated Da Nang, the last government bastion in upper South Vietnam.

Sources said a North Vietnamese armored column rumbled into Hue and the last government troops surrendered South Vietnam's third largest city without a fight.

Communist rockets bombarded Da Nang this morning, threatening the start of a giant American air and sea evacuation of one million persons from the refugee-swollen city.

Communist gunners ringing the city fired a barrage of 14 rockets at the Da Nang air base, killing six persons and wounding 34. Most of the victims were civilians.

Civilian-piloted, stripped-down American jetliners packed with refugees were to begin flying 10,000 persons a day to Cam Ranh Bay, a U.S.-built base on the central coast.

But U.S. ships will carry the bulk of the refugees from Da Nang, the second largest city in South vietnam, to the Cam Ranh sand dunes along the South China sea.

The most spectacular plans for evacuation called for the use of a Boeing 747 jumbo jet stripped of every amenity — seats, toilets, gallies. Officials hope to jam as many as 1,200 to 1,600 persons aboard each flight for Cam Ranh.

On the political front, deposed vice-president Nguyen Cao Ky emerged from political retirement today to lead a meeting in Saigon of officers and politicians opposed to Thieu.

Meeting behind closed doors, the group was discussing a proposal for Thieu to cede power to a National Salvation Front of moderate and radical opposition groups, informed sources said.

2 Quit to Protest Food Council Bias

Two consumer representatives have resigned from the B.C. Food Council and accused it of being weighted in favor of agricultural interests.

In a letter to Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich this week, Ada Brown and Ruth Lotzkar of Vancouver, members of the Consumers Association of Canada, said it would be jeopardizing their integrity to remain on the provincially-funded council.

The women said it was impossible to have the consumer viewpoint even considered at council meetings and membership in the group was weighted in favor of agricultural-related interests.

"However, our major concern was related to the lack of action and direction of the council," said the letter.

The women accused the council of refusing to tackle issues in depth or to take any investigative action in the food industry.

They "seriously questioned" the impartiality of council chairman Maurie King, associate deputy minister of agriculture.

The food council was often asked to rubber stamp ideas initiated by the department, they told Stupich.

The two consumer representatives had expressed their concern about the council last fall and in February Stupich himself chaired a meeting of the council at which time he said problems seemed to have been solved.

But the two women said no significant changes have been made as a result of that meeting and expressed disappointment that Stupich had accused them of deliberately causing confrontation.

"You seem to have failed to understand that to truly represent the consumer interest, particularly at a time when food problems and prices are major public concerns, we must question and challenge decisions and practices which do not appear to be in the public interest."

The council was set up by the provincial government to consider problems in the food industry, make recommendations to the government and conduct their own investigations. The membership is chosen from organizations with involvement in every facet of the food industry.

Oil Nations Said Short Of Cash

LONDON (Reuter) — Several Middle East oil-exporting countries are running short of ready cash, bank sources here report.

Some of the smaller Persian Gulf countries have even sought bridging loans on the international capital market to pay for their ambitious development programs, officials say.

The problem is that falling demand for oil and the need to extend customer credit, for up to 90 days in some cases, to avoid further production cuts has thrown budgets out of balance.

Oil states are cashing part of the short-term certificates of deposit on the international capital market into which they channelled vast sums of surplus oil revenues after the five-fold increase in prices.

Bankers said they had previously expected the oil producers to renew almost all these certificates as they mature.

The oil-exporting countries find that inflation has made their bills, particularly for industrial goods, much higher than they expected a year ago, the bankers said.

NEWS BRIEFS

More Geneva Talks?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today the U.S. soon will contact the Soviet Union to prepare for resumption of the Geneva peace conference on the Middle East.

Describing the situation as "a moment of potentially grave danger," Kissinger told a news conference the U.S. was engaged in a total reassessment of its approach.

Kidnap Deal Near

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Southern Yemen bowed to a new French plea tonight and agreed to give shelter to the kidnappers of France's ambassador to Somalia.

The move paved the way for the release of the envoy, kidnapped Sunday night as he was leaving church services.

$150,000 Extorted

MONTREAL (CP) — Three men extorted $150,000 from a downtown Bank of Montreal branch Tuesday after holding the bank manager's wife and another woman hostage in their home, police said.

Indians Picket On Land Claims

Native Indian representatives converged on the Legislature Tuesday to pressure the government for action on the settlement of claims on cut-off Indian reserve lands.

They met opposition leaders, talked with Atlin NDP MLA Frank Calder, picketed outside the building and sat in the house while opposition members questioned the government on their behalf.

The Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs has given the government an April 1 deadline to change its policies on the question of cut-off lands.

If they don't hear from the government by that date, more militant action is planned and could involve highway blockades and sit-ins.

Union spokesman Adam Eneas, of the Penticton Band, said his people are growing more militant as they become increasingly frustrated about government inaction on 36,000 acres of cut-off lands.

"It is difficult to keep them under control," he said. "There is always the possibility of bloodshed."

The union has proposed a tripartite commission be established, with one provincial, one federal and two Indian representatives. The commission would establish general principles for settlement and then work out details of individual land settlements for the 23 different bands involved.

In the legislature, Human Resources Minister Norm Levi said he was not prepared to deal with ultimatums but a lengthy meeting between cabinet ministers and the Indians was held earlier this month.

Those communications with cabinet will continue, said Levi, but he will not recommend a meeting between the Indians and a full cabinet group before April 1.

Levi also said he would comment on the merit of the cut-off lands claims.

Opposition leader Bill Bennett, who questioned Levi in the house, said earlier his nett, who questioned Levi in the house, said earlier his party has had a series of meetings with the union on the question of cut-off lands.

"As a government," he said, "we would be prepared to meet in negotiations with the Indians.

"We told them we couldn't guarantee them a settlement if we were government because that would be decided in negotiation," said Bennett.

The problem with the NDP government is they made a lot of promises beforehand, said Bennett, and now have not delivered. The Socreds will not make the same mistake, he said.

Casa Loma Probe Sought by Gov't

The provincial government has requested an RCMP investigation into the construction of the controversial Casa Loma housing development in Burnaby, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Tuesday.

The RCMP commercial fraud section has been asked to look into charges of irregularities made by one of the sub-contractors in the complex purchased by the government for $3.17 million for senior citizens' housing.

Macdonald's announcement was lauded by Liberal leader David Anderson as "marking the turning point."

"At last there's some sort of an inquiry into Casa Loma. It's quite a breakthrough," said Anderson who in February asked Macdonald about the charges by one of the subcontractors.

Anderson said Neville Barnard, of N.B. Electric Ltd., had written to the attorney-general's department asking for an investigation into certain alleged fraudulent actions which took place in development of the complex, by Casa Loma Ltd.

The attorney-general, in the house, said Barnard charged there was preferential treatment among lien-holders and claimed some funds were spent on other premises and charged to Casa Loma.

"I don't order investigations without evidence," said Macdonald, adding that Barnard has admitted he has no evidence to back up his charges.

"But I've asked the commercial fraud section to look into it."

Macdonald said Barnard could seek civil remedies but they would have to be considered separate from the RCMP investigation.

Last month Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson drew opposition fire on the government's purchase of the complex.

Since then representatives of 40 subcontractors who were paid off as low as 42 cents on the dollar have launched an action in the B.C. Supreme Court.

Wailing Arabs Mourn Faisal

Times News Services

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Thousands of wailing Arabs mobbed the coffin of assassinated King Faisal, 69, before the world's richest monarch was buried in an unmarked grave today. (See obituary page 12.)

If was the only public portion of the simple funeral rites prescribed by the puritanical Wahabi sect of Islam.

A radio announcer reported Faisal's brother King Khaled burst into tears as he prayed over the body, starting a chain reaction among the audience.

There was no official word on the fate of Faisal's assassin, who the Saudi radio said earlier was a mentally deranged nephew of the king. Some Beirut newspapers said Faisal's bodyguards killed him. Others said he was arrested and would be beheaded in public after the funeral.

Saudi Arabia applies the Koranic law of the Sharia, which calls for murderers to be beheaded. Trials in the kingdom are brief and devoid of many of the legal touches of the West.

Radio Riyadh said the assassin gunned down his uncle during court ceremonies marking the birthday of the prophet Mohammed.

The radio said the American-educated prince walked the length of Faisal's palace in Riyadh, greeted the monarch with kisses on both cheeks, pulled a revolver from beneath a robe and fired three shots into the king.

Palestine guerrilla chieftain Yasser Arafat was standing at King Faisal's side when the monarch was assassinated, the Palestinian news agency WAFA reported today.

"It was the will of the Almighty that Palestine was the last to see the king and the first to bid him farewell," said Arafat.

Acquaintances in Berkeley said the accused assassin dropped out of the University of California in 1973 because of "scholastic difficulties" and was "worried about returning home in disgrace."

Two years before, he had

CLRA Seeking Picket Removal

The Construction Labor Relations Association applied late Tuesday to the B.C. Labor Relations Board for removal of pickets from three construction sites in the area.

The association has asked the board to order Canadian Union of Public Employees pickets removed from the James Bay Plaza, Spectrum community secondary school and the Juan de Fuca Ice Arena.

Board registrar Ron Bone said the application is being investigated, but no hearing has been set.

Broadbent to Run For Leadership

OTTAWA (CP) — Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, said today he has decided to seek the NDP leadership despite an announcement two months ago that he would not be a candidate.

MISSED PLANE

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — B.C. longshoremen will take an extra day to return to work because officials in Ottawa serving legislation on the union missed a plane.

The 4,000 men at 11 ports were to be back on the job Tuesday night but instead will go back Thursday at 8 a.m.

The emergency legislation, rushed through parliament Monday night was to have arrived in Vancouver Tuesday morning.

But by noon Tuesday still hadn't arrived.

"Anyone can miss a plane," explained Gerard Bertrand, assistant secretary to the cabinet and the man in charge of getting the legislation out to the longshoremen.

Union leaders had refused to order their membership to obey the legislation and return to work until they had studied the document.

However, one union spokesman described the legislation as "very repressive', leaving 'everyone of us liable to prosecution."

Home Ownership Plan Most Popular as Tax Shelter

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Most Victorians buying registered home ownership savings plans are using them as a tax dodge rather than being concerned about buying a house, according to a spot check by the Times.

The program was designed by Ottawa to help couples or young single people put aside $1,000 a year to a maximum of $10,000 towards buying a first home.

However, the regulations finally agreed upon by Parliament were so broad that anyone could participate as long as he did not have real estate in his or her name during 1974 or in 1975.

This meant that executives who had previously put their house in the wife's name became eligible for a tax saving although in reality they already have a house.

The $1,000 put into the plan can be deducted from taxable income. If both husband and wife are working and neither owns real estate they can each put in $1,000 per year. There is no tax advantage for a wife to contribute if she has no taxable income.

"Most of the people taking out these plans are middle aged or older who are using them for a tax advantage," said Hamish Manson, manager of the Victoria branch of Canada Permanent Trust Co.

"A few of these people are renting but many have a husband or wife who already own a home."

Allan Mactier, trust development manager for Royal Trust Co. in Victoria, said the average couple taking out the plans were in their thirties and well aware of the tax advantages.

E. T. M. McBride, manager of the main Victoria branch of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, said a tax shelter was the main goal of those taking out plans at his bank.

"This is due in part to the fact that most young people just don't have $1,000 to set aside. Maybe next year after they have had time to save money they will be in a position to participate."

The bank and trust company spokesmen agreed that while the plans were mainly being used as a tax shelter this year, the situation might change in 1976.

"Older people are more aware of the importance of exploring every avenue of tax saving," McBride said.

"It is a matter of education. I expect there will be more young people taking out a plan next year."

The money collects an annual interest and the principal and interest can be withdrawn tax-free at any time as long as the cash is used to buy a house or furniture.

Once the money has been withdrawn, however, the contributor can not begin a new plan.

MOUNTIE MANUAL TERMED REPUGNANT

"everybody's doing it," blaming either their spouse or boss for provoking them, or justifying an act by saying "she was asking for it."

With women suspects, the manual suggests the interrogator "use the emotions of love, jealousy and fear.

"Love for her child, love for her parents, jealousy of the husband or boyfriend — how he will be enjoying himself if she goes to jail — (and) fear of jail."

In breaking down into physical stereotypes, the booklet says short, fat persons "are usually the happy type. Eat, drink and be merry ... humor them." Tall and slender citizens "are usually withdrawn and introverted ... the interrogator must pull them out by appealing to their intellect."

Of slightly built persons, the interrogator is reminded of Napoleon, Mussolini, Hitler and Stalin.

"All were men of relatively short stature ..., it is always the little guy who caused the trouble and caused the fight."

The manual concludes: "We, as police officers, must constantly remind ourselves that we are servants of the public and not its minister, and we must never overstep the boundaries pertaining to the human dignity of man."

OTTAWA (UPI) — Science Minister C. M. Drury has offered to convene a closed session of Parliament to reveal the operations of the secret communnications branch of the National Research Council to questioning members.

Drury said Tuesday any MP attending the meeting would be under obligation not to use any of the information "in a public sense."

Opposition MPs had protested they were unable to adequately review government spending on the CBNRC because they had no details of its operations.

Drury disclosed Tuesday that the federal government hides the spending of the communications branch in various other departments estimates as a security precaution.

The minister said, however, "the government is prepared to disclose the whole gamut (of the operations of the communications branch) to members of Parliament in a closed session."

Drury had earlier revealed the communications branch was being transferred away from the National Research Council and into the Department of National Defence April 1.

The communications branch of the NRC has been the subject of some controversy in recent years because so little was known about it.

According to a magazine article, the CBNRC was set up during the Second World War as a code-breaking unit.

Drury said the CBNRC was still involved in "monitoring" embassy radio operations in Canada.

The article said the communications branch operated under the so-called "UKUSA Agreement" which included the United States, United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

Drury confirmed the existence of this treaty. He explained "the purpose of the agreement is to ensure collaboration, effective collaboration between these countries in security matters."

In the Commons, Drury said he could not make public the operations of the communications branch.

"In order for a national security program to be effective, it must be prepared to counter, under cover, hidden, clandestine operations of other people, such as those intelligence services which operate against the interests of the national state, or against the interests of Canada.

"The counter intelligence movement, or the security apparatus which is countering interests which are inimical to Canada, must, in order to be effective, itself be under cover and not known to the enemy."

Child Abuse Toll 141

Of the 141 cases of child abuse reported to the department of Human resources last year, four involved death and 21 children required hospital treatment, Human Resources Minister Norm Levi told the legislature Tuesday.

He said police investigations were conducted in only 24 of the cases, but advised that it was not department policy to recommend the laying of criminal charges. He said the department assisted the families involved in all but 11 cases, which were handled by other professional workers.

PLAGUES OF PASSOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — A crawling, buzzing plague of locusts, frogs and mice was let loose on a Pan American World Airways ticket office by pro-Israeli demonstrators protesting the airline's flights to Syria.

The raid Tuesday sent screaming customers fleeing the office in the Pan Am Building at 45th Street and Vanderbilt Avenue. Gallons of cattle blood also were splashed on the office and its windows.

A telephone caller told The Associated Press the attack was staged by Betar, a militant Zionist organization, and symbolized "plagues of Passover because Pan Am is the only American airline to fly to Syria."

He said Syria was holding 4,500 Jews as political prisoners.

A Pan Am spokesman said the airline makes two flights to Damascus each week, but he added: "We also fly Soviet Jews out of Russia. We don't feel we should be involved politically."

The caller said the lunchtime plague included 1,000 locusts, 50 frogs and 100 mice.

Windows were smashed at the office two weeks ago and the name Betar painted on the walls. Last week another Pan Am ticket office at 41th Street and Fifth Avenue had its windows smashed. Betar claimed responsibility for the vandalism.

Cambodia Troops Reluctant to Go

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH — Three hundred government soldiers today walked away from a defensive position east of here while troops west of the capital are reluctant to fight because of a possible cutoff in United States aid.

Meanwhile, Communist-led insurgents hit Phnom Penh and its airport with 64 rockets, killing eight persons and wounding 20.

The U.S. airlift of rice, fuel and ammunition continued without interruption.

Military sources said the insurgents also drove government forces from more than half a dozen positions east and west of Phnom Penh.

Riverside outposts were overrun at Muk Kampul, eight miles north of Phnom Penh, and Prek Tam Erk, 15 miles to the northeast, they reported.

The insurgents took over another stretch of the east bank of the Mekong across from the city and also overran several government positions in an area 20 miles west of the capital, where government troops — most of them local militia — are strung out thinly.

On the political front, President Lon Nol's powerful younger brother, Brig. Gen. Lon Non, resigned from the army to give his full attention to politics.

Observers say he will try to strengthen rightist elements of the ruling government.

been charged with drug violations while attending the University of Colorado in Boulder. The charges were later dismissed.

One Beirut newspaper reported that Faisal pardoned him as he lay dying, saying:

"Have mercy on him. I feel no hate for him."

King Khaled in the first public statement of his reign pledged to follow Faisal's policies.

Khaled, 61, has long been rated by diplomatic analysts as a much weaker figure than Faisal. Kahled underwent open heart surgery in Cleveland in 1972 and since then has devoted himself more to light sports than to affairs of state.

Effective power is expected to settle on Fahd Ibn Abdel Aziz, who was named by Kaled as crown prince Tuesday. After a period of political readjustment Fahd, now interior minister, is likely to be named prime minister, diplomatic sources said.

The rapid transfer of power, agreed on by the five senior royal prince sand approved by the entire royal family, seemed to be designed to emphasize the government's desire for continuity. No immediate change in Saudi policies, which are strongly pro-American and conservative is expected.

But the 52-year-old Fahd, whose French Riveria gambling exploits have been publicly reported, does not command the respect Faisal held during his 11-year reign.

Diplomatic observers feel Fahd will have more difficulty in establishing firm control over an essentially Bedouin tribal society that has been transformed in a few years into one of the world's wealthiest nations.

Long-submerged conflicts in the large Saudi royal family, the country's only effective political body, and the growing contrast between the society's puritanical religious code and its private affluence and modern education system are major problems likely to confront Faisal's successors.

MD Abortion Appeal Fails

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada upheld today by 6-3 a decision of the Quebec Court of Appeal which ruled that Dr. Henry Morgentaler (right) was guilty of performing an illegal abortion.

Dr. Morgentaler, a Montrealer, who has admitted performing thousands of abortions, now faces a jail sentence of 18 months.

The majority decision, written by Mr. Justice Louis-Philippe Pigeon of Quebec, rejected defence arguments that section 45 of the Criminal Code dealing with surgical operations was a defence in abortion cases.

Section 45 says a doctor who performs surgical operations with due care is immune from legal action.

The majority decision also said that Dr. Morgentaler's defence, that the operation he performed on a student in Montreal was necessary for the health of the mother, had not been proved.

Anti-abortion groups had claimed that to allow either argument would mean that women would be entitled to "abortions on demand."

Chief Justice Bora Laskin was one of the dissenters.

"In my opinion, there was such evidence . . . of the accused (Dr. Morgentaler) that he feared that the pregnant woman would do something foolish unless she was given immediate professional medical attention to relieve her condition and her anxiety," he wrote in a minority report.

The jury was entitled, if it so chose, to consider this evidence as raising an emergency situation in the light of the fact that the woman was a friendless stranger in this country, adrift more or less in an unfamiliar locality.

It was for the jury to decide whether in such circumstances the harm sought to be avoided was an immediate and physical one and whether there was enough of an emergency in this respect facing the accused as to make it certain that there could be no effective resort to the machinery of the abortion laws . . . to cope with the emergency," stated Chief Justice Laskin.

Approved by Parliament in 1959, abortion laws permit abortions in hospitals with the approval of special hospital committees.

Opponents of the laws say that many hospitals across Canada have not set up the special committees to consider requests for abortions.

Rifle Mystery

A valuable target rifle found leaning against the back wall of a washroom in Beacon Hill Park has Victoria police baffled.

The rifle, worth more than $500 and equipped with a $200 scope, was stolen from Gordon's Sporting Goods, 1030 Hillside overnight March 21. Three of four boxes of ammunition were also taken.

Intern Strike Likely To End on Thursday

There is a possibility the 10-day strike by almost all interns and residents in B.C.'s seven teaching hospitals, including Victoria's two general hospitals, will end Thursday.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke proposed non-binding arbitration of their salary dispute and an in-depth study of their working conditions in meetings with both sides in the labor dispute Tuesday.

The indications today are that the B.C. Health Association, bargaining for the hospitals, favors that solution and the Professional Association of Residents and Interns (PARI) will decide its position tonight.

One source said Dr. Noel Hall, a UBC economist, may be the arbitrator if both sides agree to Cocke's recommendations.

The health minister said Tuesday he is confident both sides will recommend acceptance of his proposals to their members.

The interns and residents want wage parity with their counterparts in Ontario who earn between $12,250 and $16,750 a year. B.C. interns and residents now earn between $8,000 and $12,000.

The BCHA has offered an increase of 18 per cent over one year plus a 10 per cent cost-of-living increase but had refused the binding arbitration which interns wanted.

Under Cocke's proposals the doctors, who are taking post-graduate training in hospitals, would return to work and an independent committee would study the "human aspects" of their work but not their training.

Cocke said he recommended non-binding arbitration because results of the study might affect the way other issues are dealt with in future. The arbitration will deal only with salaries.

He said he would appoint representatives from both sides to the study group as well as UBC and health department representatives.

The 315 interns and residents in PARI began an escalating walkout March 17 in Vancouver and the following day the 13 interns and one resident at Royal Jubilee Hospital and the eight interns at Victoria General joined in.

Doctors working in the emergency departments at both hospitals have been handling the emergency work normally done by the interns, with assistance from doctor volunteers from the hospitals' medical staffs.

POLLUTION AWARD OVER-RULED

OTTAWA (CP) — A multimillion dollar award by the Manitoba Court of Appeal against Interprovincial Co-Operatives Ltd. and Dryden Chemicals Ltd. for pollution of Manitoba waters was wiped out today by the Supreme Court of Canada.

The suit was brought against the companies by the government of Manitoba and was based on the common law as well as a provincial act known as the Fishermen's Assistance and Polluters Liability Act passed in 1970.

Six of the nine high court judges agreed that because the pollution was caused by dumping mercury from company plants in Ontario and Saskatchewan and carried by river flow into Manitoba, the matter was for federal, not provincial remedies.

40 DIAMOND RINGS SEIZED IN CITY

Forty diamond rings valued at between $100,000 and $200,000 and $98,000 in cash have been seized from a safety deposit box in a bank in Victoria, as police continue to investigate a Canada-wide diamond smuggling operation centered in Regina.

An 82-year-old man is being held by RCMP in Regina in connection with what police believe to be an international diamond smuggling ring.

A large number of diamonds valued at between $500,000 and $1 million have been seized already by police following the search of 24 homes and banks in the Regina area.

Superintendent Jim Nelson, head of Victoria RCMP, declined to name the bank here or give any details, as the investigation in continuing.

Juggling Statistics

There are lies, damned lies and there are statistics, goes the saying about using figures to buttress an argument. It comes to mind after reading of Premier Dave Barrett's use of numbers to praise his government's record in getting people off welfare.

He told an audience of NDP members on the weekend that in the last days of Social Credit some 6.4 per cent of the population of British Columbia (about 130,000 individuals) was receiving social assistance — welfare cheques. Now the number on welfare has declined to 4.9 per cent.

If this is so, the premier deserves a pat on the back and a handshake. But a look at some other figures — the percentage of the provincial budget which goes toward welfare — throws a different light on the accomplishment.

Back in fiscal 1968, welfare payments formed just over six per cent of the budget which totalled $758.6 million that year. Three years later, still under Social Credit, the proportion had increased to 8.8 per cent, or $106 million out of $1.2 billion. In 1974, when the NDP was first in office for an entire year on its own, the figure jumped to 10.6 per cent of the budget and in the current fiscal year, which ends next week, it is pushing 11 per cent.

It may be even higher, but it's difficult to determine because Mincome and Pharmacare (which are estimated at a total of $124 million for the current fiscal year) are no longer considered by the government as "welfare" as such and have their separate budget items. In previous years, they were lumped in with social assistance.

(Even social assistance, the term invented to replace the old names of 'welfare and the dole which had such hang-dog, handout connotations, isn't social assistance anymore. The weekly welfare cheque is an "allowance to British Columbians who are unable to provide for themselves.")

Maybe calling it Mincome and not welfare removes the stigma. But claiming credit for chopping the number of people on welfare, when a large part of the reduction came about because many elderly now get monthly Mincome cheques instead of semi-monthly social assistance vouchers, is only juggling statistics and definitions. It doesn't change the bottom line. The funds for Mincome, Pharmacare and welfare all come out of the same pocket, and the bill is going up all the time.

"... I thought you'd never leave ..."

Senate Conflict of Interest

The Canadian Senate, the red carpeted "other place" which boasts more corporate directorships than common sense, acted against the public interest in watering down the government's business competition policy proposals. The bill expands misleading advertising legislation and makes a number of business trade practices subject to Combines Commission review. Senator Salter Hayden, a man who boasts more than a dozen corporate directorships himself, and who chairs the committee which reviewed the competition proposals added 13 major changes that homogenized the bill.

Among the proposals which Senator Hayden's committee questioned — the right of consumers who have suffered loss or damage because of unfair business practices to recover damages; new civil regulatory powers for the restrictive trade practices commission to review trade practices and issue remedial orders against business; broad discretionary powers to be granted to the restrictive trade practices commission. In this case the committee appears to be in a direct conflict of interest. Did the senators react to what they believed was bad legislation or were they thinking of their corporate interests?

It is impossible to divine the truth in this situation. Since 1967 the government has been trying to win parliamentary approval for a revamped combines law to regulate business. The current bill is only the first step in legislation governing mergers, monopolies and interlocking directorships expected to be introduced within the year. Clause by clause, draft by draft the legislation has been scrutinized and watered down over the years. Now some senators want even less in the bill. At the same time government ministers cry out to control labor's increasing demands.

In the past we have seen the Carter Commission tax reform proposals followed by the white paper on taxation end up as pale imitation of their original selves. Is the competition legislation destined for the same fate? If labor is to be "controlled" then it should be quid pro quo for the corporate sector, in order that justice is done and government respected. The senators should wake up to the 20th century before it blows their house down.

Re-open Schools

As a member club of the Canadian Federation of University Women whose major interest is education at all levels, we would like to add our names to the growing list of those who are upset by the current school dispute. It is important that our children, who cannot speak for themselves, shall not be deprived of their right to education for which taxes have already been designated. While admitting that there is right and wrong on both sides we would strongly urge resumption of talks at once in good faith with reason and restraint on both sides and the re-opening of schools on a full-time basis while negotiations are proceeding.—Mrs. W. D. Marshall, President, Mrs. M. C. M. Matheson, First Vice-President, University Women's Club of Victoria, 202-1470 Dallas Road.

Desperation

In answer to a question from the opposition, Resources Minister Robert Williams said he learned of a committee of B.C. Hydro that had been struck to investigate ways of re-allocating expenses. At first, Mr. Williams was accused of incompetence because he was unaware of this committee, formed some years ago. Then, in a weird piece of doublethink, he was accused of muck raking, as if he had hatched the whole revelation.

On this same subject, the Colonist then lent itself to a piece of twisted journalism that left me both dismayed and appalled.

Newspapers would like us to consider them "responsible." Yet how can we respect our newspapers if they behave so irresponsibly, resorting to such hostile bias. I can do no better than quote from Jack Scott's column (Victoria Times, Dec. 19) "It seems to be a campaign of such constancy and intensity that it requires a close examination by everyone who is dedicated to that other consideration of democracy known as fair play."

Human Resources Minister Norman Levi received a political donation; under the circumstances it was not handled with legal exactitude. Nevertheless, on moral and ethical grounds, Mr. Levi cannot be faulted.

The individuals and groups who oppose our present government are approaching desperation. For never before has so much been done for so many of us in such a short time. And they know it. — (Mrs.) Margaret A. Smith, Ladysmith.

Defeat Unions

From the Times of March 20, I wonder how many readers realized that the most vital information therein contained was the article by Peter Thomson relative to the statements made by Bank of Canada governor Gerald Bouey who declared that: "Nothing would do more to improve the prospects for the Canadian economy than a rapid slackening in the tempo of this race for higher money incomes."

Mr. Bouey must be one of the most highly qualified of all Canadians to assess our current situation. A further statement of his was: "There is a race going on between various groups for larger increases in money incomes. Since the race is occurring in a period in which there is no real increase in average income per capita being achieved in the economy, none of the participants can gain except at the expense of others."

Both the federal and provincial governments take full-page advertisements to tell us what wonderful "big brothers" they are, how the interests of Canadians are geared to their thinking, plus all the hogwash which is driven down our throats. Is it not time that both federal and provincial governments take full page advertisements, backed up by the statements of the governor of the bank of Canada, to let us know that the union leaders, supported by the avarice of union members who seek wage increases far beyond the rate of inflation, will force Canadians into a state of depression?

Strikes have impeded the shipment of grain to countries with whom we had legitimate contracts, they have fouled up our harbors and internal essential services from east to west. I believe there are many employees who have no wish to strike as they need their monthly income — they are forced into a situation by the loud-mouthed, vicious and greedy union members who give no thought to anybody but themselves. They do not realize that our cost of production will considerably reduce our exports, on which we depend, and will inflate every item we ourselves have to buy. There is a time to call a halt, which is now if the federal and provincial governments have the guts to face the union leaders, and, by legislation, defeat them. — Hopeful, Victoria.

. . . wants race to slow down

Fair Wage Base

The current round of strikes and threatened strikes should be regarded as unacceptable by both the public and the workers involved. A better means of matching wage levels to advancing living costs must surely be found.

A step toward this goal would be to eliminate catch-up wage demands by tying the wage level directly to the cost-of-living level with appropriate adjustments being automatically made at frequent intervals. Compulsory, binding arbitration (on the wage level only) based upon the same formula should be the only alternative to this procedure.

Establishment of a fair wage base could be managed by taking wage and cost-of-living figures for several years back into consideration. Where disagreement existed arbitration procedures could be invoked with appeals to an impartial board being provided for. This board could also hear applications to vary the wage level in future years where inequities were thought to exist.

It is not intended that this plan would end all strikes since disputes relating to working conditions would remain. But removing the money question from the haggling process we now have would certainly eliminate many strikes. The increased security this would bring for the employers, the wage earners and the public would appear to make this plan worth trying.—Elton A. Anderson, 3904 Benson Road.

NIP Criticism

Alderman Young's statement to the press on March 10 to the effect that James Bay and Victoria West rushed into NIP (Neighborhood Improvement Program) astounds a lot of people. City hall knows full well that it sat on this program for at least six months before they insisted the neighborhood make immediate decisions in six weeks, which we all thought maniacal to say the least. A task force of at least 100 people gave up a beautiful summer to get these needs to city hall on city hall's questionnaire.

The people know times have changed since NIP was first conceived, the priorities have changed. The overriding response to the city hall questionaire was — a community centre and low cost housing, not cosmetics. In any case the taxpayers felt tax money is paid to maintain a neighborhood and that the NIP money should be spent on priorities. One item on the city's shopping list showed that they were attempting to charge the NIP program for work already done (street paving on a part of Simcoe). If city hall does not agree that housing is needed under NIP either, we would point out that it makes little sense to put all low-cost housing on the periphery of the city thus causing further traffic problems as workers return daily.

If Alderman Young and others who live in Oak Bay would invite the citizens of Victoria to use their expensive community centre, maybe the problem would be solved. — Kay Lines, former member, James Bay NIP Committee, 620 View Street.

Socred Mistakes

For the last short while, the newspapers seemed to have been full of stories about Social Credit MLAs apologizing for their inaccurate statements. Such examples of these readily spring to mind and include the juvenile delinquents in the Empress Hotel, the Lorne Nicolson letter and the Duncan welfare case.

The most serious Socred mistake of recent days has not been widely reported locally. It concerns a Social Credit caucus executive assistant by the name of Arthur Weeks. It appears that Mr. Weeks wrote things on the back of the infamous $200 "Levi cheque" and didn't tell anybody about it. Needless to say the things he wrote did not put Mr. Levi in a good light.

I could imagine the uproar which would have been created had the media learned that Mr. Levi's assistant had doctored the cheque.

Perhaps the lack of concern over these Social Credit "mistakes" indicates that we really don't expect any better of them. — John Owen, 1930 Crescent Road.

Dolle Minas Whistled at Men

THE HAGUE, Holland — When Meta van Beek smiles, it seems as if none of the problems that burden the modern Dutch woman cannot be solved. When she frowns, it is said that government ministers urgently ask aides with what new failure she may be about to confront them.

For this articulate, fortyish social worker has become a political force in Holland, a one-woman irrestible force that is easing Dutch society towards a fairer deal for its female population.

She has done this in less than 18 months, since she was unilaterally declared the world's first ombudswoman by a band of militant Dutch feminists known as the Dolle Minas.

Her major achievement has been the simple one of acquainting a large number of Dutch women with their basic legal rights.

But she has also caused the finance minister to promise removal from Dutch tax laws of certain sections that he has admitted to be discriminatory. The social affairs minister has given special instructions to unemployment offices to ensure that they extend full legal rights to part-time women workers, after pressure from Ms. van Beek.

No Bank Account

It has been a matter of some embarrassment to the socialist government ruling Holland that she is needed at all. On the surface, life is good for everyone in this industrious, well-manicured country, with its progressive social welfare programs and employments laws.

Dutch law, however, still contains a statute which permits an employer to require a woman employee to sign a contract that means instant dismissal if she marries or has a baby.

In 1889, Dutch women made up one-quarter of the work force and the proportion is the same today. No Dutch woman could hold a bank account in her own name until 1959.

While 12 per cent of Dutch married women go out to work, government surveys show one-third would like to do so, but cannot for a variety of reasons. This 12 per cent figure compares with 26 per cent in the United states and 32 per cent in Germany.

Wilhelmina Drucker led the campaign that resulted in Dutch women getting the vote just after the First World War. She was called Mad Mina, Dolle Mina in Dutch, and she supplied the name and inspiration of the Dolle Minas.

This group of predominantly middle-class, university-educated, young girls, who dress in the world uniform of jeans, tee-shirts and steel-rimmed, army issue style spectacles, has made an energetic contribution to the national debate on women's rights.

Part of their campaign to make

AMSTERDAM
. . . Dolle Minas spark reforms

Dutch women equal consisted of whistling at men in the streets.

They also supported factory women striking for equal pay and this was where Meta van Beek's life crossed with theirs. She was sent out to work as a housemaid at the age of 17 by her father, who over-ruled her desire to train as a midwife. Later she took nursing training and became a nurse in a tuberculosis clinic in a working-class district of Amsterdam.

While there she was offered an opportunity to study to become a social worker at Amsterdam's Social Academy.

But the clinic refused her time off to study, so to finance her way through the course she became a bank clerk three days a week and a factory social worker half a day a week.

Once qualified, she became a working conditions inspector specializing in factories, hospitals and laundries, where many women were employed at low wages.

The Dolle Minas asked her to give them a talk on working women's conditions and liked it so much that they asked her to become an unpaid, part-time ombudswoman to help Dutch women.

She agreed, but made it an organization separate from the Dolle Minas. Today she has volunteer helpers, a widely-known telephone number in Holland and a sporadic counselling service for troubled women, all run out of her apartment behind the large congress centre in this coastal city.

Real Equals

"What I love about it is that I can say what I like in public and get action instead of writing dull official reports nobody reads," she says. "There is a lot of reform needed in Holland and this is the feeling of all women's age groups, not just the Dolle Minas. An equal pay law was passed last month, but what does it really mean? It means higher salaries for middle-class women with professional qualifications. But what about women in clothing factories who are too afraid of being dismisssed to demand their rights in wages?

"Women who want to work part-time should be helped by provision of children's nurseries and by an understanding by employers that flexible working hours do not mean an employee is unreliable or worthless."

A government spokesman here said: "All of us, and especially ministers, have developed a healthy respect for Meta van Beek. It is very likely that we will give her a grant this year to help to finance the very worthwhile work she is doing."

Says Miss van Beek: "All I want is for Dutch women to become real equals to Dutch men."

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of March 26, 1915

OTTAWA—British Columbia premier Sir Richard McBride, after a brief conference wth the prime minister, Sir Robert Borden late on Thursday night, left for Montreal and New York. It is understood that Sir Richard could get little satisfaction from Borden as to federal help in getting him out of his financial and railway troubles in British Columbia. How Sir Richard is viewed here in Conservative quarters can be seen from the following editorial which appeared in the Conservative Ottawa Citizen: "Sir Richard McBride as a private citizen will be a very welcome visitor to Ottawa at any time. But as premier of British Columbia, the Dominion government would seem to have good reason to look upon Sir Richard's periodic visits with anything but an ardent desire to kill the fatted calf. . . . Sir Richard McBride's administration of provincial affairs in B.C. hardly can be said to have done much to strengthen the credit of Canada in Britain or elsewhere. . . . The natural resources, the birthright of the people of the coast, would seem to have been squandered to the limit."

'Our Greatest Need Is to Know There Is Place Where We Belong'

By POLLY FRANCIS

What a baffling thing old age is. It doesn't bring the peace we were led to expect.

I find it hard to drift with the stream; all along the way there are problems which obstruct the smooth flow of life. The area that lies between the "here" and the "hereafter" is a difficult passage to travel. One must make the journey to fully understand it.

The pattern of life today is such that, at a certain point, it seems desirable that we should leave the mainstream and be channeled into a small tributary where the flow is at a gentler speed.

But even here there are obstacles. While our responsibilities lessen, our limitations and frustrations increase — and certain humiliations can be painful.

Our young folk want to be kind to us, I'm sure. But they don't know what we want, and they don't know how we feel. What I crave is withheld, so I go on winnowing my way around problems and trying to avoid a head-on crash.

The young people may think that we are unreasoningly demanding. It seems to them that all our needs are met. We are comfortably housed, well fed, protected from hazards, provided with companionship and diversions. What else do we need?

Our greatest need is not met. It is one that we never outgrow; it is the need to feel cherished by someone —to know that there is a place where we belong.

This is something that no retirement home, nursing home or hospital can provide. These institutions are staffed by dedicated people, but it is not their function to soothe our yearning hearts. The emotional strain would be too heavy.

I've been told that I must not succumb to the facts of age. But why shouldn't I? I am now in my 91st year, and I doubt that any activity, for example in civic affairs, could restore my spirits to a state of bouncing buoyancy.

Lack of physical strength alone keeps me inactive and often silent. I've been called senile. Senility is a convenient peg upon which to hang our noncomformity.

Age creeps up so stealthily that it is often with shock that we become aware of its presence. Perhaps that is why so many of us reach old age utterly unprepared to meet its demands.

We may be a bit rebellious about accepting it; I want to cry out that the invisible part of me is not old. I still thrill to the beauties of this world — the dew upon the rose at dawn, the glow reflected by the sun on passing cloud when day is done — but unremitting age goes on.

My interest in the goings on in the world outside my ever-tightening barriers has not been withdrawn. It is not interest that I have lost, but rather the means of getting around and the physical stamina to sustain me as I go.

It is my task now to build a new life. My renunciations are many. The component parts with which I shall build are sometimes unfamiliar, and often unappealing. At first a bleak stretch of nothingness seemed to lie before me; I yearned for my comfortable, deep furrow dug by my habits of many years.

In earlier times I didn't look beyond the move of the moment. Each move seemed almost fixed and final. But now all feeling of permanency has slipped away.

The thought of where I shall go from here lurks in my consciousness. Will it be to a nursing home, or to a hospital or shall I go directly, with no stopovers? Whichever it will be; I shall look upon it with no dread.

My new life is taking shape. The barriers of my little world are closing in on me. I am not sad or discontented — just very tired. If I sit alone at twilight, it is because I need solitude and rest.

My solace is my memories, left untouched by the devastating hand of time. Tears, too, help — tears of tenderness; tears of grief have dried away. I do not mourn the "good old days." I've had them, I've enjoyed them and my memory will preserve them.

The room in which I spend my days and nights is quiet, pleasant and comfortable, with a large window looking out over the treetops toward a distant, jagged horizon.

It is not merely an enclosure where my few remaining possessions are stored, and where I am safe from the common hazards of living alone; it is the setting of a new kind of life to which I am trying to adjust.

A new set of faculties seems to be coming into operation. I seem to be awakening to a larger world of wonderment — to catch little glimpses of the immensity and diversity of creation. More than at any other time in my life, I seem to be aware of the beauties of our spinning planet and the sky above. And now I have the time to enjoy them. I feel that old age sharpens our awareness.

I sit by my window and watch a thing of great beauty die with the setting sun. It is gone forever. Time loses its importance. On a bright, clear day, what challenge to my imagination is the sight of an azure sky with balls of white fluff tumbling and rolling and gathering and dispersing and endlessly forming fantastic patterns.

In the quiet of the night a siren sounds. A pang of compassion strikes into my heart. I want to rush to the scene of distress, but how utterly useless I've become. I look out at the red lights blinking reassurance to the night travellers streaking through the sky. What emotions these planes carry!

My window has become a showcase of ever-changing wonderment. The objects in my room take on different aspects with the shifting sun. Like an actor on a stage, each thing has its moment in the limelight.

I pick up a much-read book, and in it I find new delights. I watch an ant persistently toiling with a tiny bit of something, and I realize that a spark of the Great Universal Will keeps it going undespairingly. I look at a cobweb and wonder at the spider's weaving skill and engineering know-how.

The telephone rings. My heart leaps. For a few minutes I listen to a beloved voice. Distance is wiped away. I am no longer on alien ground. I am where I "belong."

When my courage turns limp, I ponder my past. I try to find a yardstick with which to measure the merit of a life. I become so confused that I cannot tell right from wrong. They come so close together and dance so fast from side to side that I am unable to grasp them firmly.

And that is where faith comes in. We cannot know; we can only believe.

Old age is not all pain and limitations. It holds its own joys and satisfactions. The time has come when musing replaces activities — when the sleepless hours are filled from the harvest of a well-stored mind. Even though our means are scant, we know that our material needs will, somehow, be met. But an impoverished soul is a saddening thing.

One of my joys is the spontaneous kindness of people everywhere — in the home where I live, in the shops, in the street — wherever my faltering step is noticed. It fills me with a warm glow. The quickness of the young boys and girls, and the ease and nonchalance with which they offer help give me the feeling that they are trying to minimize my helplessness. I admire them without reservation.

The common expression, "so-and-so is failing," is tossed around too freely. In aging we gain as well as lose. The autumn of human life, like the autumn of nature, can bring richness of beauty. It's a time when our spiritual forces seem to expand. A life of the heart and of the mind takes over while our physical force ebbs away.

I find my thoughts reverting more and more to days long past. I relive so many poignant experiences, brief and fleeting, the insights of which lie deep and clear in my heart. I have outgrown my morbid sensitiveness and have broken away from the bondage of my vanities. I look upon the follies of my fellow men with a more tolerant eye, without denying all evil.

Considering the inequalities of man's capabilities, I have come to a more benevolent attitude toward the world. I've learned also that "success" is a vague term and dwells, not always at the lofty peaks, but often at our feet in the fertile valley.

What time is it? I don't know. My life now is regulated largely by impulse. The clock plays a minor part. Routine has been done away with. I have nothing to do, no one is waiting for me, I am needed by no one. Soon another day will be here, and another and another — all alike. One thing old age teaches us is to tolerate monotony.

Length is only one dimension of life. So I try to avoid an exaggerated concern about my state of health — and I refuse to deny myself some little pleasures I am told what are not good for me. If I want to drink a cup of coffee at midnight, or go without my rubbers, what of it?

A little private rebellion now and then can relieve a harmful tension. I've been indiscreet all my life, and I'm still around.

Pain and struggle have not been lacking, but on the whole my life has been a rich experience. As I travel on toward the unknown, the winds of change sweep through vast areas, and I am aware of the death agonies of an obsolete civilization. While my confidence in many of my old beliefs is crumbling, I cling to the belief that the destiny of man points upward.

When the bell tolls for me, I shall go willingly, with no bitterness, but with tenderness toward my fellow travelers on my long journey.

OLD AGE: Science Is Trying to Make It Longer

By VICTOR COHN

"There are no immortal animals."

"Aging is normal. It is not, though some people in the field of gerontology like to think so, a disease that we can somehow cure."

"We are not interested in our laboratory in increasing the life span. I don't buy that as a legitimate goal. I'd rather make the years that we have into good years."

These are the words of Dr. Nathan W. Shock, dean of American Gerontologists and one of the earliest practitioners of the young science of aging.

He envisions a time when the illnesses that afflict the elderly might not appear so soon, or be as debilitating. In effect, middle age would be lengthened. In the words of Dr. Alex Comfort, another leading gerontologist, we might "take 30 years to reach 60."

"I will grant you that some people do want to add years to our lives," Shock says, "and this is currently the subject of a hell of a debate among gerontologists. But I don't foresee any sudden increase to a 140- or 150-year life span. I think we will avoid that catastrophe."

Extending old age would be just that — a "catastrophe" — Shock argues, "unless we can make a dramatic improvement in the living conditions and social status of the aged. I'm not looking for the Fountain of Youth."

Dr. Shock, 63, is director of the U.S. government's pioneering Gerontology Research Centre, which is about to become the key laboratory of a new National Institute on Aging.

His thoughts contrast sharply with those of the field's Ponce de Leons, who almost vie with each other to predict immortality.

For example, Isaac Asimov, the science writer: "If we come to understand the biochemical and biophysical charge involved in aging, and if we learn how to delay or even reverse the process, by 2000 we may face a future society in which men and women will routinely live to be over 100; perhaps far beyond 100."

Dr. Bernard Strehler of the University of Southern California: "Someday we may live almost indefinitely."

N. M. Amosoff, Russian heart surgeon, believes physical immortality will "soon" be achievable.

Pierre Auger of France: "Death may be a manipulable genetic characteristic."

F. M. Esfandiary of the New School of Social Research seems to be calling for Project Immortality in the same way that Wernher von Brauns once called for Project Apollo: "It is outrageous that such a beautiful phenomenon as intelligent, sentient life should be encased in such fleeting, vulnerable bodies. We who in this late 20th century send spacecraft to interstellar space and decode light coming from the presumed edges of the universe 10 billion light-years away can now also marshal our genius to achieve the most transcendent and liberating freedom of all: physical immortality."

Shock, a gerontologist since 1941, is closer in opinion and philosophy to Comfort, who, though now best known as an exponent of the "joy of sex," was head of a research group on aging at University College in London until 1974.

Comfort predicts that by 1990 "we will know of an experimentally tested way of slowing down age changes in man that offers an increase of 20 per cent in life span. We will know whether it works only when all the subjects have died, but judging by the tests we now have, we should not be far off in predictions."

Shock says only, "I think the average age will creep up a little." He believes it is even possible that the average life span of American males — 69 years — has reached about as high a value as we can expect.

Still, he has predicted in one of his more optimistic moments that "in the next 10 to 20 years or so, U.S. life span will probably increase by 5 to 10 years."

Americans' life spans have increased remarkably in this century. In 1900 the average age of death was 47.9 for men and 51.1 for women; the figures are 69.5 and 75.8 today.

But these increases result mainly from eliminating childhood deaths. A man who had managed to reach age 65 in 1900 could expect to live 11.5 more years on the average; a woman; 12.2 years. The same figures today are only 14 and 17, a fair increase for women but not even a 2-year improvement for men.

Since 1960, moreover, even the improvement in average life span has been leveling off for men, improving by only one and one-half years. Women's span is still improving at a faster rate; it gained two years in the same period.

Why then are there so many older Americans? With a population of more than 200 million, it does not take much improvement in the averages to add millions, especially when the main improvement is to keep babies alive. The 22 million Americans over age 65 now make up 10 per cent of the population.

What would it take to make really spectacular gains in longevity? Cancer and diseases of the heart, blood vessels and kidneys are the main categories of death for the old.

To add 10 years to the average life, all such deaths would have to be eliminated. No one can say anything like this is probable in the foreseeable future.

For an individual, even coming from a genetically long-lived family does not make more than four to five years' difference, on the average.

"If your parents live a long time, you've got better odds," Shock points out. "But one son or daughter may live a long time, another less. It's the ones who live 15 years longer that we tend to remember."

But he also says: "None of us reaches our full potential life span as determined genetically. Some disease or combination of diseases shortens our life.

"It is here that I think we're going to improve. It is here I think we can learn to relieve disability and improve health so later years are not so related to long-term illness. I think research will reduce the number of people who end up in nursing homes" — in proportion to the aged population, if not in total numbers — "and reduce the length of their illnesses."

Could we accomplish something like this for the aging or aged now?

"No," Shock says, "though many could receive much better medical care. I have in mind techniques that are not yet developed. We cannot apply them yet, but remember, 10 years ago we hadn't been to the moon yet."

That analogy may not really be apt. Ten years before going to the moon, scientists could build rockets and launch objects into space. The gerontologists have not yet built their launch pad.

Yet we all grow older and, as Shock points out, most of us age too early. Why the slow growth of so pervasive a field?

Many reasons, he reports, for example, the early lack of any firm, factual base — "There was so much myth, and so few facts. We had to start out asking, 'How do we age?'

"And 'What is the basic physiology? What is aging?' Something happens that makes older animals more susceptible to disease than younger ones, but what?

"Also, any field with so little knowledge and so much emotion attached always attracts the people who are chasing the Holy Grail instead of doing real research. We've had a lot of them. In 1941 I don't think there were more than 100 of us working in the field at all. Even now, I'd guess there are not more than a couple of thousand."

There was also the myth that "nothing could be done about aging, the fatalistic view that it was there, and any research was useless. We had to fight that. But now things are changing. Good, young scientists, not enough of them yet but some, are starting to come in."

Shock studied the physiology of the aging heart, kidneys, lungs, nerves and brain and other organs, and how they all worked together or, gradually, failed to do so. Not just in myth but in tested facts, he and others have demonstrated that:

● Aging and habitual disease are not synonymous. The aged most commonly seen by doctors, those disabled by illness who need institutional care, are only some five per cent of all those over 65.

● Different people age at vastly different rates, removing any physiological reason for saying everyone should retire at age 65. Different organs age at different rates too, and most have large reserve capacities, giving the body time to adapt to age's slow changes.

● The changes of aging occur at no specific times but are usually gradual and slow. Both the physical and mental changes can be minimized by use — physical exercise, mental activity.

● The aged can often continue to work effectively, but many need more time, just as their organs need more time to heal and their hearts take more time to return to normal after exertion.

"All this," Shock points out, "gave us clues to research — for example, on why some individuals do resist the changes of age better than others.

"Now, with some knowledge, the researcher can begin to form hypotheses. He can design and carry out critical experiments that fall into a theoretical framework. And this has attracted many new and youger people."

A number of molecular biologists have been asking: Why do some cells in an organ or tissue die and some not? Is there an inborn genetic program coiled into their DNA, or genetic material, that dictates their life span, just as other DNA dictates their eye color?

Or, do errors occur when the DNA transmits information to dictate the formation of essential proteins?

Dr. Leonard Hayflick of Stanford University favors the genetic program theory, and it was he who discovered the best evidence for it when he was doing cancer research on human cells grown in laboratory cultures.

Since Alexis Carrel grew a bit of chicken tissue in his laboratory and kept it alive and its cells multiplying, biologists had believed that cells in laboratory culture could theoretically divide and redivide indefinitely.

But Hayflick found that cell populations from a human embryo lung divided only about 50 times and then stopped, as though regulated by a program or clock. Adult lung cells divided only 20 times.

Hayflick believes aging may involve changes inside cells governed by the same kind of genetic or biological clock that stopped the cell growth in his labs.

Other scientists have found that as we age, we suffer derangements in our immune system, the system that produces disease-fighting antibodies.

Still other scientists seeking some other "youth factor" have made permanent connections between the blood vessels of old and young rats, and the young blood seemed to have a rejuvenating effect on the old animals to make them survive beyond their normal spans.

There are other theories of aging: wear and tear, the cumulative effect of waste products inside cells, the loss of elasticity of body tissues or molecules by senile, cross-molecular linkages.

But aging, Schock believes, is probably not the result of any one such cause alone, but "a complex phenomenon which may require different explanations for different aspects."

Could we ward off the changes by diet? Still another class of biological suspects in aging is a class of chemicals called free radicals. And these fragments of molecules that have broken up may, it is theorized, impair cell growth and cell function.

Dr. Denham Harman of the University of Nebraska has accordingly given mice another group of chemicals called antioxidants that combat free radicals, and he has improved their life span by 30 per cent. Vitamin E, popular with some megavitamin-lovers, is an antioxidant, but so far there has been no laboratory evidence that it does the same trick.

None of these studies has yet produced a specific human diet or pill guaranteed to lengthen life span. But one could, and it is such studies that have made Comfort say, "We hope to find a technique for interfering with human aging within the next four or five years, not for stopping the process but for slowing it down."

Shock agrees that "the more we know about the underlying causes of aging the more apt we are to be able to devise a drug or pill or experimental condition that can have an impact. I think there are some promising things that need more animal studies. And some may pan out.

"Still, I don't think there's going to be any single youth pill, any more than any single cause that will account for all the biological changes."

Meanwhile, Shock stresses, "We could do some things right now to improve health and life span."

At the top of the list he puts: reduce obesity, "because the fat population by any measure doesn't live as long. They develop diseases from arteriosclerosis to high blood pressure to diabetes to joint and back problems.

"The other big thing is cigarette smoking. If we could wipe out obesity and cigarette smoking, it might have a bigger impact than anything we've got yet in the research labs. The nub of the problem is that we haven't found out yet how to change human customs."

He also recommends reduction of fat intake in the diet to lower blood cholesterol, exercise and, for old people who tend to eat less as they age, vitamins and minerals to make for any losses in the diet.

Let's End the Old Rush

I don't know why old people ought to be an exploitable business commodity, but the lesson of the nursing-home scandals is that they are. I think there ought to be an age at which everybody draws the line — maybe 70-75 — and says, "All right, your reward for making it this far is that nobody else can make a profit on you."

This is probably sentimentality. In our kind of economy everybody probably has to keep yielding a return to justify his existence and keep things booming, but I don't look forward to serving the upper years as a Klondike for entrepreneurs working the old-people business.

There has probably always been money to be made in old people — they must account for a big part of the drug industry's profits — but the nursing-home scandals are the first evidence that they can be a bonanza for operators with piratical instincts.

I don't fancy hitting 75 and having some brilliant, dynamic geriatrics tycoon tell me, "Cheer up — there's gold in them thar wrinkles."

I don't like the thought that two or three generations after he's gone his heirs will be sitting around the Riviera on yachts and appearing at fundraising benefits for the needy and being described in the newspapers as heirs to this or that old-people fortune.

At the age of 75 a person shoudn't have to start all over again being the base of somebody else's fortune. People who intend to use you to get rich ought to have to do it to you before you get to be that old.

I have some trouble justifying this rationally in a market economy, and it may even be that a lot of people who are already well gone in years and, therefore, more qualified to speak on this subject enjoy being a source of somebody else's wealth.

I can imagine a sales pitch you might make to these people if you wanted to mine them. "Look," you might say, "productivity is the key to American prosperity. If you don't produce, you don't deserve to be here, and look at you — you haven't produced since you retired. You ought to be ashamed of yourself. Well, in my nursing home you can hold your head up again because you'll be contributing to the creation of wealth."

Economically and ideologically, the pitch is very good. I have loaded the dice against it by stating it somewhat baldly, but the fact is that the country in general buys it, because the nursing homes boom, although everybody knows how rotten the bad ones are, and the government doesn't care much. In New York, the politicians' chief response to the scandals has been to try closing down the investigations. Somebody's buying that pitch.

I am not radical on this. I am not saying people shouldn't turn people into commodities. I don't even say that young people shouldn't be exploited for profit. Young people, in fact, seem to like it.

I remember in the 1960s, when the young-people business was hotter than Xerox, going to see "The Graduate" and laughing along with the young-people audience when corrupt, middle-aged parenthood advised idealistic, young Dustin Hoffman to get into plastics.

I wasn't laughing at the same joke the young people enjoyed so much. I was laughing because they had paid about $3 a head for tickets, and paid it over and over again because it was a youth-cult film which they kept going back to. I was laughing at the joke which the makers of "The Graduate" were playing on the young people. The film's makers had gone into young people and made a mint by deceiving them with bad advice.

A truly corrupt, middle-aged parent of that epoch would not have advised Dustin to get into plastics. The time for plastics was passing. He would have said, "Get into young people." Young people, not plastics were the hot new commodity of the 1960's, and they sat in the audience laughing happily at $3 a time. Young people didn't mind being the new plastics.

Well, as James Thurber said, "youth will be served, frequently stuffed with chestnuts." In any case, young people are only getting an earlier start than their parents did at being a gold mine, for the enterprising. It is the destiny of most of us to be other men's Klondikes for most of our lives.

I don't look forward to it in the late afternoon, however. I want to be able to walk on the beach and watch the sun go down without having some guy in an expensive suit nagging me to come back and turn him some profit before it gets dark.

Bell Canada

Total consolidated revenues for Bell Canada and its subsidiary companies reached $2.6 billion in 1974, and increase of 26.8 per cent from the 1973 figure of $2.1 billion, the company announced in its annual report.

Consolidated net revenue improved in 1974 to $224.4 million, up 9.3 per cent from $205.4 million in 1973, while operating expenses rose 30.7 per cent.

The 1974 earnings were substantially reduced by the 10-per-cent federal surtax on non-manufacturing profits.

Bell Canada and its telephone company affiliates, which operate approximately phone kompany jffiliates, 70 per cent of Canada's estimated 12 million telephones, spent about $993 million in 1974 to replace or modernize existing installations.

Bell Canada and its subsidiaries, with assets of more than $5.8 billion, is the nation's largest industrial entity.

Pacific Pete

Pacific Petroleums Ltd. reports net earnings for 1974 of $45,395,000 or $2.13 per share, an increase of 50 per cent over net earning figures for 1973.

Total revenue total revenues were $244,739,000 or 40 per cent more than in 1973.

Merrill Rasmussen, president and chief executive officer of Pacific Petroleums, said in a report to shareholders that the financial record was "once again gratifying" but said the performance was tempered by rising costs due to inflation.

Van City

Rising interest rates and other costs were blamed by Vancouver City Savings credit union for a drop in consolidated net earnings last year.

Although revenue rose to $18.8 million in 1974 over $11.8 million in 1973, net earnings declined to $1.5 million from $1.8 million.

The directors' report said that the spread betweeen average rate of interest charged on first mortgages and average rate of interest paid on term deposits shrunk to 1.03 per cent at Dec. 31, 1974 from 2.68 per cent two years previous.

Van City is Canada's largest credit union and the second-largest in the world with assets of $197 million, the report said.

Has the Great Bull Market Now Gone Out to Pasture?

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Whatever happened to the great bull market of 1975?

The Toronto Stock Exchange industrial index this morning opened at 177.96, down 5.93 points from the beginning of the month. The western oils index was at 150.30, down 15.65 points since March 1.

This decline follows huge price gains in January and a continuing rise in February.

Why the change?

Market analysts are divided into two camps. Some look upn the present slump as merely a pause before a return to an upward swing. Others believe stock prices rose too high too quickly in January and must fall to more realistic levels.

Whatever the reason, the delcine in March has been small but steady.

Last week four trading days out of five were losers. This week the industrial index fell 2.44 points on Monday and 364 TSE issues were down while only 103 were up.

On Tuesday the industrial index finished ahead by one-fifth of a point but 262 issues on the TSE list were losers while only 172 were on the upside.

Even gold issues, the big winners during the slump of 1974, were under attack. Holders of gold shares are believed to be becoming disillusioned about the lack of new dramatic price increases in the bullion.

The major gold companies Campbell, Dome, Paramour, East Malartic and Dickenson have been among the heaviest losers in the last seven trading days.

The erosion in the industrial stocks is more difficult to pinpoint. Usually it is a case of down 75 cents one day and up 37 cents the next. Some banks have been slipping along with major industrial companies.

Oils have been down since the dispute between Ottawa and the provinces over first right of taxation. This problem might be resolved in April when first ministers meet in Ottawa.

In New York, the Dow Jones industrial index finally had a winning day on Tuesday after losing 43.10 points in the previous five sessions.

Like the Toronto index, the Dow Jones had enjoyed a two-month surge that carried over into early March before the slip began. The index of blue chip U.S. stocks had risen over 200 points in just over two months.

Vancouver trading continues to be in the doldrums with total volume being under 2 million shares on a typical March day. The slump in mineral exploration programs has ended the string of discoveries that normally spur the local market.

The only action in the Vancouver market involves B.C. companies seeking properties elsewhere. Not all the companies are ooking for a more favorable tax advantage, however.

For example, Decade Development of Vancouver has acquired a working interest in claims in the Duddridge Lake area of Saskatchewan, a province that also has a policy of high resource taxation.

Northern Homestake of Vancouver has acquired a 90 per cent interest in mineral claims in the Lardner Lake area of Ontario.

Geo-Star of Vancouver has started an exploration program seeking gold in Arizona. The compnay has been listed on the Vancouver Curb Exchange after a suspension. The company went into bankruptcy last August as a result of a movie-making venture. At a meeting in January, creditors agreed to accept Geo-Star shares as settlement of their accounts.

NO DIVIDEND IN GIBRALTAR

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gibraltar Mines Ltd. will not pay a dividend for the current quarter, it was announced at the annual meeting of shareholders.

Thomas McClelland, company president, said because of depressed conditions in the copper mining industry he could not speculate on whether the company would pay any dividends during the remainder of the year. Last year the company paid four quarterly dividends of 25 cents each.

The company said gross revenue declined to $62 million in 1974 from $96 million in 1973 and per share earnings declined to $1.52 from $4.60 during the same period.

McClelland said Gibraltar is accepting a request by Nippon Mining Co. Ltd. of Japan for a 15-per-cent cutback in copper concentrate this year because of economic pressures on Japanese smelters and a worldwide imbalance between supply and demand. He said market conditions have driven the price of copper down to about 60 cents a pound and there is no likely change before 1976.

Gibraltar's president said the tax struggle between the federal and provincial governments is overshadowing the problem of overtaxation of the mining industry in British Columbia. He said the problem is threatening the existence of the industry.

McClelland said a report by Price, Waterhouse and Co. says B.C. Mining Taxes in 1974 were $157 million, almost double the $81 million figure for 1973. He said each 10-cent-a-pound increase in copper prices above the super-royalty cut-in figure will result in the super tax claiming five cents and other taxes claiming four cents of the increse.

The annual meeting approved conversion of Gibraltar to a limited company status from a specially limited company category. The new status permits the company to lend money, guarantee contracts and raise or assist in raising money for others.

Injunction Opens Door to Cleaners

Tuesday's injunction limiting picketing around local schools could lead the way to hiring people to clean the schools, greater Victoria school board chairman Bill Ross said today.

Ross said there are no immediate plans to hire anyone, but added "that is one of the possible outcomes of the injunction."

B.C. Supreme Court Judge R. A. Wootton's decision means schools should be free of harassment from pickets and they should be heated, Ross said.

"The court might be indicating that schools should also be clean," he said.

A regular court case will be needed to establish clearly whether or not the Public Schools Act takes precendence over the provincial Labor Code, he said, and whether people hired to clean the schools would be considered strikebreakers.

The Labor Code prohibits employers from using or permitting the use of professional strikebreakers. The code defines a professional strikebreaker as a person not a party in the labor dispute whose primary object, in the opinion of the Labor Relations Board, is to prevent, interfere with, or break up a lawful strike.

"I'm happy with this decision," Ross said of Wootton's action. "It's a pleasing outcome."

The school board had applied for an injunction limiting pickets to three at each access to school or school board property.

Wootton more than granted the board's request, by limiting pickets to two at any school site, prohibiting picketing at schools from 8 to 10 a.m. and from 3 to 4 p.m., and prohibiting interference with fuel oil deliveries to schools.

The injunction granted does not solve the major problem hindering the resumption of normal classes, the problem of keeping the schools clean, Ross said.

Parent volunteers have been cleaning many schools, but some principals have asked that volunteers not be used and in other schools there is a shortage of volunteers.

However, the injunction does make the possibility of extending school hours from the present one to three hours to the normal five-hour day a stronger one, Ross said.

The board will meet Thursday evening to discuss the possibility of extending classes to five hours daily.

The school district's custodians and maintenance staff, local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, have been on strike since Feb. 24.

District secretaries and school aides, members of CUPE local 947, have been honoring the picket lines.

Ross said the injunction preventing picketing between 8 and 10 a.m. could mean shcool secretaries and aides will be at work each day for that period.

However, CUPE local 947 president Kay Cleghorn said today that as far as she knows, there are no secretaries in the schools today.

She said a membership meeting will be held tonight to decide whether local 947 members should go into the schools.

Jobless Outlook Gloomy

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Increased unemployment rising continuously throughout the year to an average of 8.5 per cent in the fourth quarter, is predicted in a gloomy appraisal of the Canadian economy's performance issued Tuesday by the Conference Board of Canada.

The report also predicted there will be no over-all growth in the economy this year, despite expected gains in the last half, and inflation will be about 10 per cent.

The private economic research organiztion added that the economy now is in a recession but it will soon be over.

The report is more pessimistic than the organization's previous prediction and recessions in other countries are given as a major factor in the reassessment.

While the average inflation rate for the year is projected at about 10 per cent, it is expected to be well below this figure by the end of the year.

The annual rate at the start of the year was about 12 per cent and it is expected to be cut about in half during the year.

The Conference Board sees these factors trimming the inflation rate:

—Food prices will not rise as rapidly as in 1974.

—Prices for many basic commodities will decline.

—There will be strong productivity gains to offset high wage settlements.

The reason unemployment will go up is that few new jobs will be created, the forecast says. Employment is expected to grow by about one half of one per cent, which is well below the expected growth in the labor force.

The report says consumers and business are expected to spend their way out of the recession that began in the last half of 1974.

As a result, corporate profits are expected to dip about 10 per cent this year.

One of the major weak areas will be residential construction. The report forecasts start of construction on 188,000 housing units this year. The total for 1974 was 228,000 and for 1973 it was 268,000.

The volume of exports is projected to drop by 6½ per cent.

Partly due to stronger demand here for many goods compared with other countries, demand for imports is expected to be off by only 3½ per cent.

Job Offer Out

Slavko Brajkovich told Mr. Justice J. G. Gould Tuesday he doesn't think he will be able to accept a job offer from the company he is suing for damages for injuries suffered in a 1973 industrial accident.

D. H. Gray, lawyer for Capital Builders, asked the 34-year-old former masonry contractor if he would be prepared to accept a job if offered one for $6 an hour to coordinate supplies at building sites.

Brajkovich said he didn't think so. While he could do certain tasks, such as driving and doing orders on the telephone, he wouldn't be able to go into buildings on a construction site.

"If I do work for them ... sooner or later they will send someone to bug me, make me quit. I'm sure I'll have to quit sooner or later," he said.

Brajkovich was left with crippled hands and his right leg was amputated below the knee after the main line of a crane came into contact with high-voltage power lines at a construction site at Craigflower and Carrie June 2, 1973, court was told earlier.

He told the court he took hold of both 25-foot slings hanging from the crane's main line to hook on to pallets being used to raise masonry material from the ground to the third floor where his company was building a fire wall.

He is alleging negligence and claiming damages from Capital builders, framing contractor at the site and owner of the crane, and crane operator Richard Kruysifix.

Dr. J. J. Gow is representing Brajkovich and Edward Pollard is appearing for Krusifix.

A fellow worker at the building site, bricklayer Brian Helgesen, testified he was on the roof directing the crane and the distribution of concrete blocks for the firewall.

"I heard a sort of explosion," he said, while standing eight or 10 feet from the edge.

"I went to the edge of the building and seen sparks coming from the bottom of the crane," he said.

"I saw Brajkovic start slowly going backward with two cables, one in each hand."

He jumped down a chute and ran out to help.

"He still had the slings in his hands, leaning against a pile of gyproc. I found a 2-by-4 and I knocked the cables out of his hands," said Helgesen.

He added that the crane cable was attached to the power lines.

Library Alarms Eyed

Alkarm systems may be installed in Greater Victoria branch libraries after three break-ins occurred in the past few months.

Library director Don Miller told board members Tuesday he is looking into the possibilities and costs of a system.

He said Victoria area branches have reported three instances of petty thievery in 1975.

"We are concerned about the possibility of real vandalism," he said.

Smugglers to Die

DAR ES SALAAM (CP) — Zanzibar high court has sentenced four men to death for smuggling cloves, Agence France-Presse reports.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 23-year-old man, who had two months left on a six-month jail term for mischief, told Victortia provincial court Tuesday he fled the new Jordan River forestry camp because he wanted to see his girlfriend who had jilted him.

The first inmate to leave camp without authority, Christopher Wayne Holhauser was sentenced to three extra months in jail.

Judge William Ostler said higher courts have viewed such escapes as serious matters but noted that Olhauser had no record fo rsimilar offences.

"I see no reason to be harsh ... but you'll just have to stay at camp for a longer period of time," Ostler said.

"I knew I'd get caught ... that's why I did it," a 24-year-old man told police after he was caught shoplifting.

Joseph Orland Negus, of 710 Fort, pleaded guilty to stealing 79 cents worth of batteries from Shopper's Drug Mart, 1302 Douglas, on March 24.

"Why did you make such a curious remark when you astute enough to push the batteries down the front of your trousers?" Ostler asked in reference to crown's allegations.

Negus declined to answer.

Ostler fined Negus $200 only to discover the accused was a welfare recipient.

"Any fine paid will in any event be paid out of the public purse," noted Ostler.

He gave Negus a suspended sentence instead and placed him on six months probation.

A 62-year-old woman received a suspended sentence and was placed on three months probation after pleading guilty to shoplifting groceries from Safeway, 3958 Shelbourne.

Antonia Trapler, of 1571 Pembroke, admitted taking $20.49 worth of groceries Nov. 26.

Antoinette Bear, 44, charged March 20 with the March 12 stabbing of her common-law husband Lavern Bird, elected trial by county judge and jury.

Trial date was set for May 2.

Bear, of 50 Simcoe, was released on her own recognizance in the sum of $1,500 on March 21.

Fined $350 and given a driving licence suspension for impaired driving were David J. Brown, 22, of 612 Wilson, and Kenneth Tait, 27, of Granisle.

Baldiv Singh Sandhu, 22, of 402-2310 Quadra was fined $400 for impaired driving and had his licence suspended.

Sandhu was also fined $150 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident, after his car hit a parked truck on Quadra Sunday afternoon.

Judge F. S. Green sentenced Yvon Poulin Dubord, 19, of no fixed address to 10 days in jail for possession of a small amount of marijuana Friday night.

Dubore had received a conditional discharge in Manitoba last year for possession of a narcotic, and about two months later in Victoria was fined $75 for a smiliar offence.

Third On Police Board

Geoffrey Mortimer, director of B.C. sheriff services, has been appointed the third member of the B.C. Police Commission.

Mortimer came to live in Victoria a year ago from Ottawa where he was RCMP deputy commissioner.

His prime responsibility on the commission, created under the B.C. Police Act last year, will be to establish uniform standards of policing throughout the province.

He joins commission chairman Dr. John Hogarth, and Rev. Bob Burrows.

Mortimer, 56, has been responsible for organizing sheriff services in B.C. since last July and will remain as a senior consultant in that division until a new director is appointed.

He has served 35 years with the RCMP and prior to 1970 was in Victoria as chief superintendent in charge of administration and finance.

The duties of the new commissioner will be to oversee introduction of uniform standards for uniforms, rank structure, weapons, police strength, equipment and costing agreements in all police forces across the province. He will also oversee management training to upgrade supervisors and administrators in municipal police departments.

Clerical Salaries 'Unfair'

Clerical workers are discriminated against in salary scales and the provincial government should take the initiative to grant higher wages to staff, B.C. cabinet members were told Tuesday.

The Business and Professional Women's Clubs of B.C. and the Yukon met Premier Barrett and other cabinet members and presented a 10-page brief with five requests.

Clerical jobs require a high level of dexterity, responsibility and initiative, said the association which represents 26 organizations, but the salaries they receive do not reflect those requirements.

Comparing clerks with laborers, the brief said laborers, who have no special training or skill, receive an average of $4.52 to $6.06 an hour from school boards, while clerks receive between $3.81 to $4.73 an hour.

The public service now recognizes the prineiple of equal pay for comparable work, said the brief, and so the government should lead the way for private business to correct unfair salary scales.

Among the other recommendations of the group, is a request for adoption of a provincial funeral act.

The act they envision would allow for "the right of self disposition, planned in a calm and rational state of mind."

It would eliminate much of the expense and protect consumers from deceptive trade practices.

—To implement a province-wide emergency number of "911"

The women's group also urged the government:

—To support the inclusion of a bill of rights into the British North America Act.

—To place the women's bureau of the department of labor into the human rights branch.

7-Day Debate Ends

After seven days of debate, often punctuated by Premier Barrett's growing impatience over what he termed stalling tactics, estimates on the premier's office finally were approved Tuesday in the legislature.

The Socreds resisted to the end. James Chabot (Columbia River) put forward a new series of questions for the premier to answer but Barrett had left the house.

Committee of supply chairman Gerald Anderson (NDP-Kamloops) proceeded to call for a vote on the estimates despite Chabot's protests that his questions were unanswered. He urged a delay until Barrett returned.

Chabot was overruled in this request and in another that the sitting be adjourned.

The vote on the estimates then followed.

Earlier, Barrett threatened to change the rules of debate because of the difficulties of having his office's estimates put to a vote.

"I'm seriously considering a debate schedule for every minister so they will be able to do their duty and answer opposition questions," said Barrett, charging the opposition was trying to thwart democratic proceedings by filibustering debate.

The government may set an allotted time on estimates so every mininster can be heard, if the opposition continues its irresponsible tactic, said Barrett.

"I'm enjoying the opportunity of pummelling the opposition. I've never had such frequent opportunity to let them expose themselves."

Brunt of his attack was aimed at the Liberal party which has dominated much of the debate on the premier's office estimates by attempting to introduce discussion on natural gas export price increases.

But debate on Barrett's office estimates died late in the afternoon and moved on to other estimates in the finance department.

All the finance department estimates were passed fairly quickly during the evening sitting and Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich had his department's estimates passed within 12 minutes — one of the shortest debates on record.

MISSILES PROTESTED

A group of church members met with the NDP caucus Tuesday to express concern about the Trident missile base in Bangor, Washington.

The six delegates, from different religious denominations, presented a brief expressing concern about four separate issues.

The first involved the location of the long-range undersea missile system just 60 miles south of Victoria.

"We are alerting church people to write for federal protest but we're also here to urge the B.C. government to make formal protest on its own part," said the brief.

On provincial plans for developing the northwest sector of B.C., the brief urged the government to insure full public discussion and consultation with people in the north before any plans are undertaken.

The group urged the caucus to be as open as possible about all the development plans.

The brief also called on the government to provide full public funding to subsidize the operation of government and non-profit housing programs for low income people, and urged the NDP to become actively involved in negotiations to settle the Indian cut-off lands claims.

Two-Year Time Limit Set To Launch Damage Suits

Legislation which extends the time limit in which B.C. residents can launch legal suits for damages to two years from one was introduced in the legislature Tuesday by Attorney - General Alex Macdonlad.

"The Limitations Act," said Macdonald, "is another effort to make the law of B.C. understandable to the people of B.C."

New legislation, he said, is an effort to codify limitations on many sections of the law.

Previous law is one of the most obscure and archaic areas of law in B.C.

"You can't sue a doctor if you let so many months go by; you can't sue a municipality unless such and such a time goes by," he said. "That's what we're talking about, statutory bars, after which you can't maintain your lawsuit.

"It's all very well to say that ignorance of the law is no excuse but that's the way it's been, so the only answer . . . is to make law understandable."

Lawsuits will be allowed after a uniform two years and special extensions will be provided in certain areas.

Amendments to other acts which allow conformity include the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority Act, 1964, the Credit Unions Act, the Families' Compensation Act, the Minimum Wage Act and the Official Guardian Act.

Additional legislation introduced by the attorney-general enables a public trustee to take control of an estate to prevent dissipation of assets for a patient in a small community health centre.

Man Jailed For Raping Nun

NEW YORK (AP) — A Bronx man has been sentenced to up to 25 years in jail for raping an elderly nun in a convent corridor as she returned from evening mass.

The rapist, Samuel Kelly, 22, is a previously convicted felon and must serve at least 12½ years of the rape sentence before becoming eligible for parole.

A jury convicted Kelly of threatening the nun, aged 63, with a butcher knife, raping her and then gagging her with her veil.

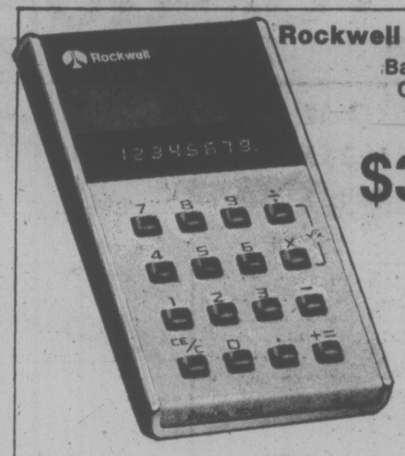
"The Answers"

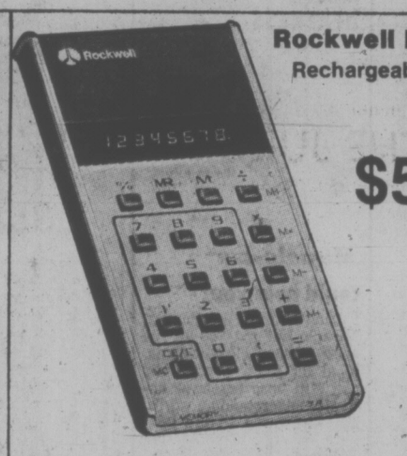
Willson's introduces the answers with a versatile new line of electronic calculators from Rockwell

Rockwell



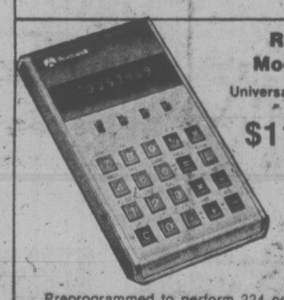
Rockwell Model 12R
Basic Electronic Calculator with Square Root
$34.95

Particularly useful for household calculations — from balancing the checkbook to checking school assignments and counting calories — this economical calculator is ideal for everyday figuring. It has: • Addition, subtraction, multiplication, division, square root. • Algebraic logic (enter 5–3 =, receive answer 2). • Floating decimal (positions decimal point automatically). • Repeat function (a timesaver for consecutive calculations repeating the same number). • Duel clear entry/clear key. Battery operation. • AC adapter included. • Lightweight, just 5 ounces. • Carrying case (Model 205R) is also available.



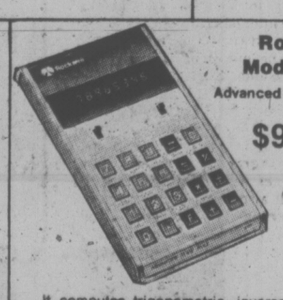
Rockwell Model 21R
Rechargeable Calculator with Memory and Percent
$59.95

Its addressable memory and percent key make this model especially handy for figuring income tax, commissions and all calculations involving percentages. The automatic mark-on and discount are of great value to retailers. And the addressable memory allows simultaneous performance of separate calculations which can later be intermixed. The 21R features • Addition, subtraction, multiplication, division and percent. • Fully addressable memory (allowing m+, m–, m×, m÷, mc and mr operations). • Overflow protection with wrap-around decimal. • Automatic constants. • Repeat function. • Duel clear entry/clear key. • Rechargeable batteries, AC charger and vinyl carrying case included.



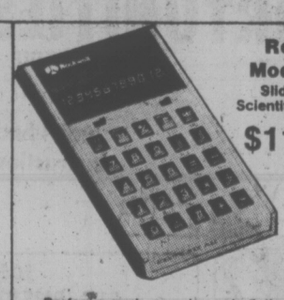
Rockwell Model 51R
Universal Converter
$119.95

Preprogrammed to perform 224 conversions involving U.S., metric and imperial units of measure (feet/meters/nautical miles/etc.). It can be user-programmed for special problems. There is no limit to the number of conversion factors the 51R can handle. And much more: • Addition, subtraction, multiplication, division. • Two addressable memories. • Fraction calculations. • Two-place or floating decimal selection. • Automatic constants. • Repeat function. • Dual clear entry/clear key. • Extra-large display. • Rechargeable batteries, AC charger and vinyl carrying case included.



Rockwell Model 61R
Advanced Slide Rule
$99.95

It computes trigonometric, inverse trigonmetric, logarithmic and inverse logarithmic functions and calculates roots, powers, reciprocals and sum of the squares. It also has: • Extra large 8-digit display. • Addressable memory. • Automatic floating decimal. • Degree/radian mode selection. • Memory/display exchange. • Automatic constants. • Register exchange. • Sign change. • Constant pi. • Duel clear entry/clear key. • Rechargeable batteries, AC charger and vinyl carrying case included.



Rockwell Model 63R
Slide Rule with Scientific Notation
$119.95

Performs such complex calculations as factorial computations, degree/radian conversions, parenthetical operations, exponent capabilities for working in scientific notation. It features: • Extra-large 12 digit display with scientific notation (dynamic range 10^{-99} to 10^{99}). • Fully addressable memory. • Two levels of parenthetical operations. • Enter exponent key for scientific notation. • Degree/radian mode selection. • Memory/display exchange. • Automatic constants and repeat function. • Register exchange and sign change. • Factorial • Constant pi. • Duel clear entry/clear key. • Rechargeable batteries. • AC charger and vinyl carrying case.

WARRANTY

Electronic calculators from Rockwell are warranted to the original purchaser for a period of one year from the original date of purchase — under normal use and service — against defective materials or workmanship. If the machine fails within 90 days of purchase Willson's will replace it on return.

$2,000 GRANT TO FLAG SNAGS

The Council of B.C. Youth Clubs has received $2,000 from the province to begin a program of snag flagging.

Resources Minister Bob Williams said the program is an interim measure to provide warning of low floating logs and deadheads for commercial and pleasure boats.

The money will help the council assemble 2,000 flags for distribution to fisherman and members of boating associations in Alberni, Nanaimo and Victoria.

Welfare Office Moves 'Strike-Breaking'

Conservative leader Scott Wallace has accused the provincial government of strike-breaking in the current labor dispute in the Capital Regional District.

Wallace said Tuesday three welfare offices in the Victoria area moved just before the first pickets went up in the dispute between the region and locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The Victoria welfare office on Cook St. moved to Blanshard St., and although the move was planned previously, it was not to take place until April, he said.

"They moved into an office without any phones or anything," said Wallace.

But the other two offices, in Saanich and Sidney, moved to new locations at Glendale Hospital and West Saanich Road respectively, purely for temporary purposes, said Wallace.

It is strike-breaking, said Wallace, on the part of a government "which is always so sensitive about anybody else strike-breaking."

The Oak Bay MLA said he did necessarily disagree with the move, since it insures welfare recipients will receive their social assistance.

But if the NDP is willing to sidestep its principles in this area, he said, why will they not take similar steps in the Victoria schools affected by the strike-lockout.

There's half a dozen ways to provide alternative education, said Wallace, but the government has refused to take those steps.

"What about our school children?" he asked.

Large Firms 'Favored'

Forest tenures in B.C. are granted to large integrated companies at the expense of the smaller operators, says a provincial government task force report released Tuesday.

The report is the third study on Crown timber disposal headed by Dr. Peter Pearse, a University of B.C. economist.

Unlike the previous two reports, it makes no recommendations but provides background on the existing forest tenure arrangements.

"The very extensive tracts that are licensed to large integrated companies, such as pulp leases, tree farm licences and pulpwood harvesting agreements provide rights to crown timber on generally more favorable terms than tenures held by smaller operators," says the report.

The old temporary tenures, held mainly by large firms, have provided better timber at considerably lower prices than tenures typically available to small operations.

Large firms have also acquired a large proportion of Crown granted timberlands which carry little or no royalty, subject to less regulation.

"The position of the small firms has eroded significantly," says the report.

Resources Minister Bob Williams, who released the report, said documentation will be used primarily as background for tenure discussions by government committees.

Concentration of timber rights in integrated companies has tended to constrain the marketing of intermediate products such as logs and pulp chips, "which in turn has impeded unintegrated manufacturing and logging enterprises."

Current privileges accorded established operators have largely eliminated competition for crown timber, the task force reports.

The B.C. Forest Service is understaffed for dispatching its responsibilities in management and surveillance over the vast forests of B.C. and in some respects the tenure system complicates the task.

Obvious problem is the "sheer complexity of the system," it said.

Concern has been raised over restricted powers of government on the use and forest management on these lands and management varies considerably.

Food Union Wage Rates Up 60-80%

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union has negotiated new contracts in the frozen food business, increasing comparatively low wage rates 60 to more than 80 per cent over two years.

Al Peterson, union business agent, reported the settlements at Delnor and Safeway increase general help categories $2 on rates of $2.55 and $2.84 an hour.

Production laborer levels increase $2.50 an hour on rates of $3.05 and $3.61. Classified jobs such as fork lift operators, truck drivers, warehousemen and machine operators, increase $2.75 on rates of $ 4.07 and $4.85.

The companies agreed to pay the full cost of health and welfare benefits, granted an extra statutory holiday and improved vacations, Peterson said.

The contracts cover about 100 persons working now, but the number swells to 400 or more in peak seasons when vegetables are being harvested.

AA Plans Weekend Rally

Up to 400 people are expected to take part in the 24th annual rall yof Alcoholics Anonymous, to be held at the Westwind International Motor Inn at Langford over the Easter weekend.

The rally will feature two public meetings, Friday evenigns and Sunday afternoon, although the public can attend any meeting during the three-day program.

Among associated groups taking part are Alanon and Alateen.

Alanon family groups help a problem drinker's family adjust to lead more normal lives. Alateen helps young people, aged 12 to 20, cope with problems caused by drinking habits of parents, relatives or friends.

The open meeting Friday evening at 7 p.m. will be based on the rally theme, "The Joy of Livng," while the public meeting Sunday at 1:30 p.m. deals with "As Others See Us" and will include clerical, medical and legal speakers from the community.

The first meeting Friday, from 2 to 4 p.m. is on the topic: "There is a Solution." Speakers will be from Port Alberni.

Alanon and Alateen meetings will be held Saturday, at 10 a.m., 1:30 and 3:30 p.m. and Sunday at noon.

Council Quiet on TV Bid

Pacific Rim Broadcasting Ltd., a Vancouver-based group which is one of the applicants for the last remaining televison channel in the Vancouver-Victoria area, requested but didn't receive a commitment of support from Victoria city council on Tuesday.

However, after the delegation had left the caucus meeting Ald. Mike Young remarked that the group's plans for local news coverage and programming were a big improvement on the submission of another competitor for Channel 10, Ten Television Ltd.

Use of the channel will be awarded by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission following a public hearing in Vancouver next month.

Among the parties interested in obtaining the channel for Victoria-based stations, are the CBC and the B.C. government, but the federal cabinet announced last week no special consideration would be given to either.

Pacific Rim spokesman Seymour Epstein told council his group's transmitter would be in Vancouver although Victoria programming via cable would originate from studios in the Empress Hotel, and within the first five-year licence period the company would install full transmitter service in Victoria.

The station's philosophy would be to "try to be an alternative station," with strong Canadian content in peak viewing hours but also providing many good programs from Commonwealth and European countries that are now not available for Canadian viewers.

After Epstein had stressed some of the advantages the station would offer to local advertisers, Mayor Peter Pollen said it was a fallacious assumption that businessmen want more advertising opportunities.

"I say this as a plea — for God's sake save us," he added. "It's not just back-to-back (commercials) any more; I saw six in a row the other night."

"That's why they call it Channel 6," quipped Ald. Malcolm Anderson.

Council finally agreed Ald. Young should draft a letter to the CRTC, asking that the commission give serious consideration to the applicant providing the best Victoria coverage.

Average Paycheque $191.62

OTTAWA (CP) — Average weekly earnings for about 4.2 million workers rose by 3.6 per cent in January to $191.62, Statistics Canada reports.

The average for January wage figures to discount sea-January, 1974.

The consumer price index was up five-tenths of one per cent in January and it rose 12.1 per cent during the 12 months to January.

Statistics Canada adjusts wage fitures to discount seasonal factors and on a seasonally-adjusted basis there was a 1.6-per-cent rise in January.

The highest actual average is for construction workers, up 11.2 per cent in January to $267.01.

WATER SUPPLY ENOUGH

A water availability study of the Dean Park area of North Saanich shows a 113-house development project planned for the area is compatible with existing water supplies.

North Saanich council will likely consider final approval for the subdivision at its April 7 meeting.

The whole subdivision plan, to be developed by Dean Park Developments Ltd., includes a 600-acre site which stretches north from Dean Park on East Saanich Road and west from the federal agriculture department's research station.

The 113-houses are only the first phase of the development plan.

Final approval on the project was withdrawn until the completion of the water study.

INJURIES UP 12%

On the job injuries in B.C. last year resulted in 1.5 million days lost from work, according to recent figures released by the Workers' Compensation Board Tuesday.

The WCB's annual report listed 145,908 work injuries during 1974, a 12.9 per cent increase over 1973.

Claims for which first payments were made in 1974 totalled 56,124, a 10.7 per cent increase over the previous year.

Total expenditures for those claims amounted to $79,920,126 and 89 per cent of those funds went to men.

Enforcement of accident prevention regulations is a major activity of the board and 24,668 inspection reports were filed last year containing 44,417 orders for the correction of unsafe working conditions.

A total of 228 accident investigations were undertaken and penalty assessments were levied against 230 employers.

6 All-Party Committee Heads Named

Five NDP MLAs and one Socred member were elected chairmen of six all-party legislative committees Tuesday.

Alex Fraser (SC-Cariboo) will be chairman of the Public Accounts and Economic Affairs committee and Roy Cummings (NDP—Vancouver Little Mountain) was elected secretary.

Heading the environment and resources committee is NDP backbencher Bob Skelly (Alberni) and Gay Lockstead (NDP—Mackenzie).

Chairman of the transport and communications committee is Harold Steeves (NDP—Richmond) and Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst is secretary.

Others elected are: Carl Linden (NDP—Delta) chairman, municipal affairs and housing, Karen Sanford (NDP—Comox) secretary; Rosemary Brown, chairman of health education and human resources, Peter Rolston, secretary; Colin Bableman, chairman of labor and justice committee, secretary, Rosemary Brown.

Chairmen are paid $1,000 plus a per diem rate to cover travelling expenses.

King Who Earned His Keep

United Press International

Dressed in flowing white robes, his dour face seldom smiling, King Faisal of Saudi Arabia combined ambition, strength and deep religious principles behind the romantic facade of a desert monarch of sand and oil.

The 5.7 million Saudis he ruled autocratically from his ascension to the throne in 1964 until his assassination Tuesday knew him as a young, fiery prince who led an army out of the desert to capture the holy city of Mecca for his father, King Abdul Aziz, in 1925.

They knew him as a warrior, as a shrewd businessman and, above all else, as a godfather whose stern yet benevolent concern symbolized the aspirations of a land struggling to buy its way into the 20th century with its vast oil wealth.

When Faisal ousted his inept half brother Ibn Saud from the Saudi throne in 1964, he inherited a poor, illiterate and backward nation whose oil wealth up until that time had been squandered on Cadillacs, palaces and the expensive egos of his 3,000 fellow princes.

He had to borrow money to keep his bankrupt throne going.

Today, Saudi Arabia is among the world's richest states, with reserve holdings almost as large as those of the U.S. and burgeoning industrial, educational and social development schemes.

Western visitors to Faisal's capital of Riyadh once described the king as a "reckless conservative and a cautious liberal."

The balance Faisal managed to strike between modernism and conservatism was the key that helped dispel the lethargic feudalism barring Saudi Arabia's entry into the 20th century without risking the political instability that plagued his Arab neighbors.

Early in his reign, Faisal abolished slavery and introduced mass education, not only for men but, at the urging of his fourth wife Iffat, for women as well.

He introduced television over the objections of religious leaders who proclaimed "the devil is at work" in every set. Today, Saudi Arabia has 300,000 television sets which entertain viewers with nothing more sinful than "I Love Lucy" and "Bonanza."

He stoutly refused to establish a parliament, which he called the "crutch of a weak ruler," and strictly enforced bans against drinking or smoking in public.

Laws calling for death by stoning for adultery and the loss of a hand for thievery remain on the books to this day and are sometimes still enforced.

He was a deeply religious and regal man, committed both to the teachings of Mohammed and the principles of rule by the elite.

"Faisal believed that royal birth guaranteed one special status, yet he also knew that kings had to earn their keep," an observer once said.

Faisal had the reputation of being the world's hardest working king. His biggest personal setback was when he had to trim his 18-hour working day to 14 hours because of ulcers that plagued his health constantly and helped to impart the somber, unsmiling expression that became his trademark in later years.

Under Faisal's direction, Saudi Arabia built schools and factories, sent its princes off to Oxford and Harvard to become skilled technicians capable of earning their keep and abolished unemployment.

Asked by conservative Arabs about the sudden changes in lifestyle, Faisal liked to remark, "revolutions can come from thrones as well as conspirators' cellars."

But King Faisal's revolution was not confined to the desert out of which he rode on a white horse at the head of 45,000 Bedouin tribesmen to drive the Sharif Hussein out of Mecca and help establish the dynasty of Saud for his father early in this century.

Faisal's greatest reputation, both at home and abroad, was for the power he seized and wielded in controlling the supply of the world's most vital form of energy — oil.

The ascension to that power came late in Faisal's life. It was not until 1972 that Saudi Arabia, under Faisal's direction, became the first oil-exporting country to take over a share of the equity of its foreign oil operator, the Arabian American Oil Company.

SUCCESSOR to Faisal is Crown Prince Khaled Ibn B Abdul Aziz, brother of the assassinated king.

Saudi Arabia initiated and conducted the negotiations that saw it and other oil states gain a 20 per cent interest in the foreign oil companies. It was the first to move to 60 per cent control a year later to negotiate for full ownership — a precedent that the other states soon followed.

In the past two years, the price of oil has jumped more than 400 per cent to more than $10 per barrel — largely because of a decision by Faisal.

The era in which giant American and European oil companies dominated the politics of the Middle East is over — again, largely because of the decisions of Faisal.

The U.S. motorist who ran out of gas, the European housewife who was forced to lower her thermostat during the 1973 oil embargo, did so largely because of decisions by Faisal.

At the time of his death, Faisal held more power over the lifestyle of the western world than any other contemporary in the Arab world.

Both for his own power and that which he symbolized, Faisal became a household word in New York, London, Tokyo and in cities and in towns far removed from the bleak desert out of which the daring young prince rode to his throne.

Faisal was born in 1906, the third son of King Saud, the founder of the modern Saudi state. As a boy Faisal was set to three tasks. The first was to learn the entire Koran (Moslem holy book) by heart, the second to study the Sharia, the system of Moslem law, and the third to swing a sword in the name of his father and the prophet Mohammed.

He made the transition from warrior prince to king first as viceroy, then as prime minister and finally as regent in 1963.

Faisal's position in the Arab world was unique. Although his political influence increased as his bank account grew, his primary status was derived from being spiritual leader of the world's 600 million Moslems.

Every year Moslems by the thousands flock to Mecca and Medina — two of the Moslem world's three holy cities into which no non-Moslem has ever been allowed.

It was Faisal's fate that the two cities fell within the bounds of what he and his father forged into the modern Saudi state.

It was what he considered as his curse that the third holy city, Jerusalem, lay inside the boundaries of another Middle East state — Israel.

Since the 1967 Middle East war, Faisal became one of the principal movers of Arab unity and the main Arab financier of the war effort against Israel.

He rarely spoke in public, preferring to listen, but one of his often-declared vows was to pray in Jerusalem before he died.

Angered by American aid to Israel during the October 1973 war, he played a key part in the Arab oil embargo and bankrolled the Egyptian and Syrian war effort to the tune of more than $5 billion in 1974-75 alone — all to achieve his dream of praying in Jerusalem.

It was a trip he was not destined to make.

SOCIAL WORKER SEES ELDERLY MILITANT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Old people are becoming militant, Mary Hill of the University of British Columbia school of social work says.

Ms Hill, author of a recent report on old people for the Social Planning and Review Council of B.C., told a group of 20 social workers that old people have learned the value of confrontation from their juniors.

The social workers agreed that old people will soon demand more benefits and tolerate less neglect than they do currently.

NOBLE . . . bit like a war

JUVENILE DELINQUENTS

Not Punks But Casualties

Hanged by a commitment to persevere.

Sounds like a quirk of justice, but that's just how John Noble feels.

It's a hell of a mouthful, but right now Noble is executive director of social services and income security for the B.C government's Department of Human Resources.

And before that job, after coming from his native Scotland in 1966, he was director of the Island Youth Centre at Brannan Lake, near Nanaimo, for seven years.

Now the centre is in the news, as it has often been before, of course, because of the exploits of a few runaways and the recent outcries of Duncan Mayor Kenneth Paskin.

Paskin laid the blame on the department of human resources and on minister Norm Levi after some youths, said to have been from the centre, stole a car recently and were involved in a high-speed chase by police. But that was only one incident among several involving juveniles in the Cowichan Valley during recent months.

Levi, under heavy pressure in the house all last week because of Brannan Lake and the question of what he did with a $200 campaign donaton, manages a wry smile and says: "Has there been trouble there lately?"

"Kids have been running away from there for 20 years, it's no new phenomenon," adds Levi, who says that it comes down to the issue of whether there should be a place where kids can be locked up.

"At no time in 20 years and under any government, as far as I am aware, has there been a locked prison for juveniles in B.C.," says Levi.

It's obvious Mayor Paskin thinks there should be since he has been threatening to file criminal charges against Levi for contributing to juvenile delinquency in allowing youths to "escape."

Although there has been no locked prison, as Levi says, there was a "security wing" in the old days at Brannan Lake which, according to both the minister and Noble, was pretty frightening.

Then, behind the doors of their locked rooms, many boys tried to slash their wrists or hang themselves with their belts.

"The trouble with containment is that you condition a kid for a life in prison," says Noble. "Records show that a kid who has been locked up continues in a life of crime."

"I'm not opposed to containment," adds Noble, "I'm just opposed to the way containment has been used. I'm opposed to its over-use for kids who don't need it."

Opened in 1954 with 128 youths, Brannan Lake was supposed to hold a maximum of 150. But there was a constant battle with overcrowding, with often as many as 220 boys there from all over the province.

In 1969, the department

changed the setup so radically to incorporate a community care-type system that the name was changed to Island Youth Centre. However, and this has created a little confusion for both the news media and the public, the junior high school within the premises retained the name Brannan Lake and is now administered by the Nanaimo School District. And it is staffed by principal Frank Murphy and six teachers who are not responsible to the human resources department.

The youth centre became something completely new. No longer was it a dumping ground for the courts where "kids were sent by court order and just turned up at the door in a police car." It became a place where social workers could refer youths.

And it no longer catered to the whole province. It became a centre with a capaity of only 48 youths in residence — 12 in the reception and assessment building run by Tom Williams, 16 in the Vancouver Island youths' program handled by Joe Sasvari, and 20 in the program for youths from the Lower Mainland, run by Joe Alexis.

Students from both the youth centre and from outside attend the Brannan Lake School.

To understand the centre, you have, says Noble, to understand the kids.

"Juvenile delinquents are from families where parents are in conflict on how to bring up the kids. Many of the kids are not deterred by punishment — they're hooked on punishment. They have been told all the time, by parents and by police, if you do this . . . then you will go there.

"These are kids where the only guaranteed thing is punitive rejection. They run away from the centre to go home and pretty soon they run away from home, too.

"The public gets an impression over the years that running away is a continuing problem. If only people would realize that if they cleaned up juvenile delinquency in their own areas, they wouldn't have runaways from Brannan Lake.

"To my mind, nobody has come up with an answer to juvenile delinquency. It's a problem of our urban society and it's one that won't be solved by our institutions.

"It's a bit like a war — the stretcher-bearers can save a few casualties, but you can't save them all. Unfortunately, the public doesn't see them as casualties but as punks."

John Noble pauses to smile a sad kind of smile.

"You know, a lot of people say we should send the kids off into the bush somewhere but it's unrealistic. You have to have staff working with them — and staff doesn't want to live in the bush — and there has to be access to medical and psychiatric services. People just want them to be far away from them, out of sight out of mind. It doesn't matter what they are doing.

"We could have a very nice program for the mayor of Duncan and the mayor of Nanaimo and the mayor of everywhere," says Noble with another smile, "simply by not taking the kids who are persistent runaways."

LEVI
. . . nothing new

"Yes, if we took only those who had no history of running away, everyone would be happy with Brannan Lake. But no one would be looking after the difficult kids. The whole emphasis, the pressure from the news media and from the community, is on us to say 'No' to the kids who really need us, who really need help.

"We have committed ourselves to take difficult kids and to persevere with them, even if they run away and get into trouble again.

"And it's that commitment we've been hanged with."

Gunman Hits Drugstore

A slim, gaunt man in his early 20s this morning held up Morley's Five Point Pharmacy, 1273 Fairfield, the second armed robbery in Victoria within 15 hours.

Pharmacist Clare Morley, who was in a back room talking to a friend, said the purple-jacketed man entered the store at 10:30 a.m. and presented a note to a clerk.

The note read he had a gun and ordered her to hand over the money in the till.

There was no one else in the store at the time.

No gun, however, was produced.

Morley said the girl momentarily balked and the man, who appeared nervous, told her to hurry up and fill a bag he was carrying.

Morley said there was about $366 in the till at the time.

Morley said he caught a glimpse of the man as he left the store and chased him down Cornwall to Carnsew where he lost him.

Within minutes Victoria police were on the scene and began a search of the area but at noon had no suspect in custody.

The robbery was the second in Victoria in the past 15 hours.

On Tuesday night a man between 18 and 20 held up Oxford Foods, 271 Cook, and fled with $410.

Police said the man, who wore a wide-brimmed black felt hat and dark clothing, entered the store shortly before 7:30 p.m. and after five minutes shopping went to the counter with about $3 worth of goods.

He handed the cashier Anna Louie $4 to pay for the items. When she opened the till he looked around furtively and then produced a six-inch hunting knife placing it against her right shoulder.

Police said he told her not to make a move or say anything as he reached over and took the bills from the till.

When he pulled away with the money, the cashier screamed for help.

Three customers rushed to the front to see the robber run off. As he went out the door he brushed against a man who was about to enter. The man chased him down Cook and caught him by the coat.

The suspect turned and still brandishing the knife warned the man to let go, which he did. The robber escaped down a back alley between Oxford and Chapman.

Leak, Log Disrupt Ferry Runs

A leak and a log caused temporary disruption of the B.C. ferry service today.

The Sechelt Queen left Long Harbor on Salt Spring Island this morning on her normal run through the Gulf Islands to Tsawwassen but had to drop her passengers off at Swartz Bay.

A ferry spokesman said she had buckled a plate during heavy weather on Tuesday and this would be repaired alongside at Swartz Bay.

The Tsawwassen, scheduled to be on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen run today, was diverted and was due to take on the 4:40 p.m. sailing from Long Harbor.

The Queen of Saanich was put into action to help fill the gap but the noon sailing from Swartz Bay and the 2 p.m. trip from Tsawwassen had to be cancelled.

The Queen of Nanaimo had just set out on her 7:15 a.m. run from Horseshoe Bay to Nanaimo when a log became jammed under her hull near the propeller.

She was forced to return to Horseshoe Bay, where the log was cleared and she was able to carry out her 11:45 a.m. sailing.

Ministers Agree With Parents Children Pawns in Dispute

Fifty concerned mothers gathered at the Legislative Buildings Tuesday to protest the continuing labor dispute constricting Greater Victoria schools.

Mothers led by Sharon MacBain, 1679 Kisber, met Education Minister Eileen Dailly and Labor Minister Bill King to press for provincial government intervention.

Dailly and King agreed that children were the pawns in the five-week old dispute, but said responsibility for coming to some agreement rests with the school board and Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, bargaining for school custodians.

King said the government had offered the assistance of an industrial inquiry commissioner, but the employers turned it down.

He said the government feels deep concern for the school students and suggested mothers take their demonstration to school trustees and the union.

"The government cannot be used as a tool to settle every dispute," said King, urging the two parties accept the responsibility and reach some settlement.

Settling the strike is beyond the power of the government, said Dailly. She said the only option open to her is to refuse grants to school boards, a route she is unwilling to follow.

The delegation asked the government to outlaw such future strikes.

"We don't care about management or the union," said Mrs. MacBain, who has four children in school. "We just don't want the children used as pawns."

Admitting she was nervous, Mrs. MacBain said 166 parents had indicated support for provincial government intervention.

"Let's pass a law that this can't happen in our schools," she said, requesting that some measure be taken so schools could be open from 9-11 a.m. and 1-3 p.m.

The majority of schools are open three hours each day, but 17 without heat are limited to one-hour.

King, responding to Mrs. MacBain, said compulsory arbitration was adopted in Australia and now that country "has a sorrier record than us."

Dailly said there is no point in electing trustees to local school boards if she is expected to make all decisions.

The mothers then drove to Greater Victoria school board offices, where they crowded into the board room for a 45-minute meeting with community relations officer Bill Stavdal.

The group was told district superintendent Jake Longmore was too busy to talk to them, Mrs. MacBain said.

The mothers repeated their demand that regular classes be somehow resumed, but Stavdal told them he could make no promises.

"You're asking me policy questions that are going to have to be decided by the board," he said.

He said the situation regarding the strike is changing daily, particularly with Tuesday's court injunction limiting picketing.

"We can expect changes in the bargaining situation very soon," he said.

Stavdal met with two groups of concerned parents the same afternoon.

All will be invited to present their concerns to the board at its special meeting Thursday evening, he said.

About 25 irritated parents confronted Local 382 officers at the Union Centre Tuesday afternoon demanding a return to full school days.

Union vice-president Bob Cunningham told them if they didn't want another strike in nine months — when a new contract would expire — they had better take the matter up with Education Minister Dailly, Labor Minister King or Premier Barrett.

Chamber Finds Jobs For Young

Victoria Chamber of Commerce announced today it will co-ordinate two new government programs that could provide summer employment for several hundred young people in the Victoria area.

Robert Harvey, chairman of the chamber's education and youth committee, said Victoria has been selected as a pilot project for a new federal government program that will provide three weeks employment this summer for 50 young people.

In addition, the chamber will co-ordinate a provincial government program to place young people in small businesses or farms in the Victoria area for two months this summer. There is no limit to the number who can be hired under the provincial program.

Harvey said the projects will be co-ordinated with the schools and Canada Manpower.

The chamber's role will be to locate employers in the district who are willing to hire the young people and then to assist with placing the students in appropriate jobs.

Announcement of the two programs was made to a meeting of chamber directors today.

The federal program will provide three weeks work at jobs selected by the young people in the 14 to 19 age bracket.

The federal department of manpower will pay 50 per cent of the wage cost up to $500 with employers paying the other 50 per cent.

One aim of the federal program is to demonstrate to young people the value of education in preparation for work. The government program is designed to discourage students from dropping out of school.

Canada Manpower and school counsellors will screen potential students for this program.

The provincial government program is designed to locate summer jobs for those who might have difficulty finding them on their own. The high rate of unemployment among young people is a factor in restricting the program to that age group.

The total number of young people hired will be limited only by the number of jobs available for them. In most cases these will be new jobs created because of low cost to the employer.

The provincial department of labor will pay 50 per cent of the salary to a maximum cost to the department of $300 per student.

The chamber has been asked to screen potential recipients of the jobs according to a priority list established by the provincial government.

Fix Lights, CUPE Urged

Victoria Chamber of Commerce today called upon the Canadian Union of Public Employees to repair traffic lights despite the current strike-lockout.

Chamber transportation committee chairman Ron Campion said motorists face a severe hazard because some lights are not operating.

He said the left-hand turn signal at Douglas and Hillside, the left-hand turn signal at Hillside and Cook and the traffic light at the corner of Douglas and Finlayson have not been repaired due to the labor dispute.

"I am sure that a fatality or any accident for that matter caused by these signals not being operational due to the strike would weigh heavily on someone's conscience," Campion said.

The chamber directors voted unanimously to send a letter to the union requesting that repairs be made to the lights.

Police Sketch Abductor

Saanich police Tuesday issued a composite drawing of a young man who abducted a 17-year-old Saanich girl last Thursday and forced her to commit an indecent act.

The drawing was prepared by newly-appointed RCMP composite artist Cpl. John Faux, from the description provided by three witnesses.

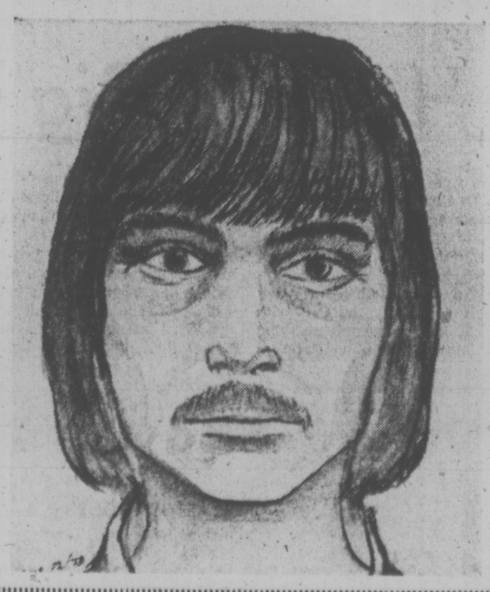
The man is described as 5'10", tall, medium build, with a Fu Manchu style moustache, and between 19 and 25 years of age.

He abducted the girl as she and a friend were jogging along Tillicum near Burnside at 9:45 p.m.

Police said the man, believed to be named Marty, approached them driving a "dirty red" Toyota.

He forced one of the girls into his car at gun point. The other girl, age 16, managed to get away and hid in some bushes.

The man drove the girl to the rear of Spectrum Community School, 3814 Carey, where he stripped her and tried to rape her, police said.



He then drove to her to Marigold elementary school, and did the same thing, then after forcing her to commit an indecent act, took her back to where he had picked her up, and released her.

He threatened to kill her on both occasions, police said.

"The girls noticed he had a slightly protruding mouth, very soft voice and excellent diction," said Detective David McGregor, heading the investigation.

Police said they think the man is driving a 1973 to 75 dirty red Toyota two-door Corona with defroster wires in the back window, black but clean interior and bucket seats with high backs.

An attempted abduction of a 16-year-old Esquimalt girl occurred at 9:30 that same evening in the Tillicum - Gorge area.

A Change of Address Suits Morris

PETER MORRIS

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Solitary confinement doesn't appeal to Peter Morris.

The Victoria Cougar winger is breaking out against Western Canada Hockey League goaltenders once again, and it may be because of a recent change of residence.

The breakout signs showed again Tuesday night when Morris scored three times at Memorial Arena to spark the Cougars to a 9-3 victory over Medicine Hat Tigers. The three makes it seven in the last three games for Morris.

The 19-year-old pepperpot's recent success, a return to the form he showed in the first half of the season, is a contrast to the past several weeks.

"I've had the chances," he reflected after Tuesday's game, "but the puck wouldn't go in for me. But I have to admit I feel better, physically, than I had been. I can feel it in my skating."

And while he didn't want to make an issue of it, Morris also "feels better" about his recent change of address. He had roomed alone but moved into new quarters with teammate Jim Gustafson as a roommate.

"It makes a difference," he confided. "Instead of looking at four blank walls, I'm able to talk to someone now."

While Gustafson draws an assist that won't show on any scoresheet, the breakout by Morris is helping Mel Bridgman pile up the points that count.

The centre on Victoria's big line with Morris and Dan Lucas, Bridgman has virtually locked up the league scoring championship. Bidgman has counted 10 points in the last three games, including four assists Tuesday, to run his leading total to 152, 11 more than Bryan Trottier of Lethbridge Broncos.

The Cougars play their final game at Memorial Arena on Thursday against Lethbridge and Trottier plays his last one the following night in New Westminster.

Big Eric Sanderson added two goals while Lucas, Rick Martin, Tim Williams and Gord Foberts contributed one apiece in Victoria's 46th triumph of the year.

Cliff Lane, Greg Carroll and Morris Lukowich scored all three Tiger goals in a 40-second span late in the second period. All came while the Cougars were playing shorthanded.

Victoria counted four power-play goals in the rough game.

Actually, the Cougars scored 10 goals. Don Cairns came out of the penalty box to connect at the 15:58 mark of the second period to send Cougars into a 6-0 lead but referee Kerry Fraser took away the goal 44 seconds after play had resumed.

Cairns went to the box to serve out two majors and a minor assessed teammate Curt Fraser. Fraser drew the second major for also drawing a match penalty in a fight with Tigers' Greg Vaydik.

The Cougars should have sent a second player to serve the minor while Cairns sat out the two majors. After the minor penalty was served, the timekeeper allowed Cairns to return to the ice.

Tigers brought the mistake to the referee's attention later and Fraser had no alternative but to nullify Cairns' goal.

ICE CHIPS: Morris' first goal, at the 1:58 mark of the second period, was Victoria's 400th of the season . . . But for the 40-second stretch when the Tigers scored their three goals, Victoria's defence came up with one of their strongest efforts in recent games . . . Tim Williams and Gord Roberts were especially effective . . . It was a rough game with Medicine Hat taking 70 minutes and the Cougars 47 . . . Tigers' total included a misconduct to Barry Dean and a misconduct and game misconduct to defenceman Bryan Maxwell . . . Maxwell was ejected after a fight with Victoria's Al Hill.

The loss put a serious crimp in Medicine Hat's hopes of finishing second . . . Tigers, one point ahead of New Westminster, play the Bruins tonight and then complete their schedule in Kamloops on Thursday . . . Kamloops decided second place in the Eastern Division on Tuesday . . . By defeating the Regina Pats 4-3, the Chiefs enabled Lethbridge to claim second . . . Winnipeg Clubs also were officially eliminated from the playoffs when the late-chargers tied Edmonton Oil Kings 5-5 . . . Winnipeg is three points behind Brandon with one game left . . . In Tuesday's only other game, Flin Flon Bombers upset the Eastern Division-leading Saskatoon Blades 6-4.

Islanders Nip Ranger Heels

By The Canadian Press

Five days ago, New York Rangers had to give up any hope of winning the National Hockey League Patrick Division title when Philadelphia Flyers clinched the crown.

Now, the Rangers may be hard pressed to hang on to second place with the cross-town rival Islanders breathing down their necks.

The Islanders moved to within one point of the idle Rangers in the scramble for second place with a 3-3 tie Tuesday night against Montreal Canadiens.

If the Rangers lose to Minnesota tonight, second will be at stake when the Rangers and Islanders meet Saturday night, or when they play in Madison Square Garden on Sunday, April 6, the final day of the season.

The tie Tuesday night moved the Islanders closer to clinching the first playoff berth in their brief history. They can lock it up with a sweep of their two-game series of fourth-place Atlanta Flames next Sunday and Tuesday night. The Flames, with seven games to play, two more than the Islanders, trail them by seven points.

In other NHL games Tuesday, Philadelphia beat Vancouver Canucks 5-3 and Minnesota North Stars defeated Kansas City Scouts 2-1.

"It was a good point as long as it helped the club," said Islanders defenceman Dave Fortier who beat Montreal goalie Ken Dryden with a high shot for the tying goal at 18:55 of the third period.

The Islanders defenceman has spent most of the season on the bench, seeing spot duty. "I don't need goals and don't think this one will help my situation any. It's not gonna help me at all. I don't like the fact that I'm not playing. But if we're winning, I can't complain too loud."

With Fortier's goal, the Islanders finished unbeaten against the Canadiens this year, winning two games and tying two.

Murray Oliver and Ernie Hicke scored less than a minute apart in the first period and goalie Pete LoPresti held off the Scouts to give Minnesota the win over Kansas City.

LoPresti was particularly busy in the second period when the Scouts had a 20-3 advantage in shots and got their only goal from Ed Gilbert.

Ross Lonsberry's 21st and 22nd goals of the season and his fourth and fifth in the last three games, led Philadelphia against the Canucks at Vancouver.

Bill Barber added his 30th goal of the year and Reg Leach his 39th.

The Canucks had a 2-1 lead after the first period and then went in front 3-2 midway in the second period before Lonsberry and Leach scored within a 16-second span to put the Flyers in the lead.

SKATING STARS from across country will be presenting this kind of action Saturday and Sunday at Memorial Arena in the Canadian indoor speedskating championships, being held in Victoria for first time. Sheila Thompson of Winnipeg is setting pace around turn in recent contest, followed by Debbie Dietiher of Ottawa and Marjolaine Gagnon of St. Foy, Que. All three are scheduled to compete in weekend meet.

★ Scouts Eye Goalies

By The Canadian Press

Professional scouts preparing for the June draft of junior hockey players have been drooling this season over graduating goaltenders in the Western Canada Hockey League.

Larry Hendrick of Calgary Centennials, Doug Soetaert of Edmonton Oil Kings and Ed Staniowski of Regina Pats have been scrutinized by scouts from almost every team in the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association.

Hendrick surrendered an average of almost six goals a game for the feeble Centennials, but had to face far more shots than his WCHL peers.

Another goaltender with good credentials is Bill Oleschuk of Saskatoon, who developed late but leads all graduating netminders in goals-against average.

Almost every WCHL club has an under-age prospect attractive to professional scouts. Notable are versatile Clayton Pachal of New Westminster Bruins and defencemen Reg Kerr of Kamloops Chiefs, Gord Roberts of Victoria Cougars and Kevin McCarthy of Winnipeg Clubs.

Meanwhile, there have been suggestions that the league's top three scorers—Mel Bridgman of Victoria, Bryan Trottier of Lethbridge and Don Murdoch of Medicine Hat Tigers—will not be early selections.

Bridgman has 62 goals and 148 points, seven more than Trottier, but the nimble centre is considered too small to warrant a high draft pick. Trottier, a winger, has signed with New York Islanders.

SIZE A FACTOR

Murdoch has set a rookie record with 81 goals, but he stands only five-foot-nine and weighs 160 pounds and his defensive abilities have been questioned. He has eligibility remaining and may be a high selection in future.

Kamloops has two possible top selections in right winger Neil Lyseng and left winger Brad Gassoff.

Victoria presents defencemen Rick Lapointe and Kim Clackson.

Defenceman Jerry Rollins set a WCHL record with 469 penalty minutes for Winnipeg and, along with forward Kelly Greenbank, has drawn notice of the pros.

Forwards Dale McMullin, Derek Spring and Rick Blight are listed as Brandon's best. Blight, drafted under-age last season by Michigan Stags, now Baltimore Blades of the WHA, stayed in the junior ranks and compiled 109 points this season.

Centre Don Ashby has 120 points for Calgary and Bryan Maxwell of Medicine Hat and defenceman Robin Sadler of Edmonton also are high on some lists.

U.K. Rugby Side Wins With Speed, Mobility

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

More speed, mobility and a greater understanding of the game enabled Whitgift School of England to trounce Greater Victoria high school Selects 35-12 in an exhibition rugby match Tuesday night at Royal Athletic Park.

A crowd of about 450 fans didn't get much to cheer about from the Victoria players but were rewarded with a fine display by the squad from Croydon in South London.

Several of the tries, particularly the last two by centre Andrew Eckton and substitute Stephen Buckley, who came on late in the game, were the rewards of superb backing up and teamwork by both backs and forwards.

Eckton also scored in the first half, which ended with Whigift ahead 19-6, and the other tries were by Neil Paton, John Chandler and Andrew Glynn. Fly-half Adam Sawyer, who devastated the Victoria backs with his running, kicked four conversions and a penalty goal.

Winger Jamie Attenborough and centre Doug Angrove of Esquimalt High both showed bursts of speed but they were largely unsupported and there was little effort made to feed them the ball.

Fullback Ed Murray of Spectrum kicked two long penalty goals to put Victoria on the board and it wasn't until the dying seconds of the match that Angrove made a fine run down the centre, ending in a try by Attenborough.

The Victoria forwards were completely outclassed by the visitors, apart from Rick Lamirande of Vic High and Paul Mulholm of Claremont, who never gave up trying, and hooker Matt Lowther of Vic High, who worked hard throughout and won several scrums against the head.

Kelowna Wins First

KELOWNA (CP) — Archie McKinnnon's four-goal performance led Kelowna Buckaroos to a 10-5 win over Bellingham Blazers in the first game of their best-of-seven British Columbia Junior Hockey League final Tuesday.

Doug Berry scored twice before 2,100 fans while Bill Haynes, Mark Schnarr, Gord Gibson and Rick Benningshof fired the others. Blazer goals came from Murray Beck and Randy Rudnyk — who each scored twice — and Stan Smyl.

Hotelmen Deadlock Final

Hotel Douglas sent the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League playoff right down to the wire Tuesday night by tripping London Boxing Club 71-62 at Belmont High School to square the best-of-three final series.

It also posed a problem for league scheduler Dave Wirtanen, who has to find an open gymnasium for the deciding game this week or wait until after the Easter holidays.

Hotelmen moved into a 33-28 lead by half time and increased the margin to 60-43 going into the final quarter. Boxers attempted a rally but couldn't penetrate the tightened Hotel defence.

John Lauvaas set the pace for Hotelmen with 19 points while three of his clubmates — Tom Hatcher (15), Mike Taaffe (12) and Corky Jossul (10) — also hit double figures.

Jim McKay topped Boxers with 21 points.

HOTEL DOUGLAS (71) — John Lauvass 19, Tom Hatcher 15, Mike Taaffe 12, Corky Jossul 10, Dan Wade 7, Don Horwood 4, Garry Turner 2, Al Huddleston 2, Bruce Vallor.

LONDON BOXING (62) — Jim McKay 21, Bob Wiley 11, Dave Wirtanen 10, Sid Chow 6, Jack Robinson 4, Loris Corlette 4, Rich Connolly 4, Alfred Hass 2, Duff McCaghey.

Host Curlers Extend Streak

Gordie Moore of the host club and Fred Harris of Kelowna emerged Tuesday as the only unbeaten skips after five of the seven rounds in the B.C. senior men's curling championship at Victoria Curling Club.

The eight-rink, round-robin playdown between the four zone winners of the Pacific Coast Curling Associaiton and the four representatives of the B.C. Curling Associaiton was scheduled to wrap up this afternoon.

Moore and Harris weren't slated to meet until the final draw.

The Victoria rink downed Harry Jackman of Summerland 9-7 Tuesday morning and kept its slate clean with an 11-4 decision over Jim Burrows of Fruitvale in the afternoon draw.

Harris had a little tougher time, beating Gerry Garoz of Courtenay 10-8 in the morning and then had to go to an extra end before disposing of Joe Hadfield of Chilliwack in the fifth round.

Following Tuesday play, Burrows and Hadfield have 4-1 records, Garoz and Al Lunn of Prince George are 1-4 while Hackman and Gordon Hewgill of Vancouver remain winless.

FOURTH ROUND
Hadfield 9, Hackman 7.
Moore 11, Lunn 6.
Burrows 11, Hewgill 10.
Harris 10, Garoz 8.

FIFTH ROUND
Moore 11, Burrows 4.
Harris 11, Hadfield 10.
Garoz 10, Hackman 6.
Lunn 9, Hewgill 6.

Ardent Fan Now Sated On Soccer

LONDON (AP) — Noel Conway thinks he may have set a soccer record.

Since the start of the season last August, he has watched games on the grounds of all 92 teams in the four divisions of the English League.

He reckons it has cost him at least $1,440.

"Has anyone else ever been to every club in the English League in the same season?" Conway asked.

The fair-haired accounts clerk completed his tally last week by seeing a Fourth Division game at Somerton Park, home of Newport County. Appropriately for the 26-year-old Irishman, it was on St. Patrick's day.

"I have planned it all the season that I should visit my 92nd and final stadium on St. Patrick's Day," Conway said. "And it has meant some careful and complex planning, believe me."

Conway planned to see the Arsenal-Newcastle game in the First Division on Tuesday. But at the last minute he said he couldn't face it.

"I've had a surfeit of soccer for the moment," he said. "I expect I'll start going to games again after a week or so."

George Jay Captures Elementary Crown

George Jay tripped Doncaster 17-12 Tuesday to win the Greater Victoria elementary school boys' basketball championship in the final game of a 14-team tournament at the University of Victoria's old gymnasium.

$25 Heap to Big Time's Top Rookie

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Like the girl in the cigarette commercial, Earl Ross has come a long way, baby — all the way from a $25 bucket of bolts to rookie of the year in stock car racing's big time.

Ross, top rookie on the Grand National circuit last year where he competed against drivers like Richard Petty, Buddy Baker and Cale Yarbrough, was in town yesterday to help enlighten the media on the stock car season opening Sunday, April 20, at Western Speedway.

The $25 heap, a 1953 six-cylinder sedan, was Ross' introduction to racing but even then, he didn't own it himself. He went halvers with a high school buddy to buy it a dozen years ago in his home town of Ailsa Craig, a pleasant rural community in southwestern Ontario.

Th other half-owner was Ron Ling, who is still with Ross as a mechanic working on one of the four Cameros operated by their sponsoring company, Carling O'Keefe.

It took another $43 each to get their first car in shape for hobby category races. Ross drove at Nilestown Speedway, located on one side of London, Ont., while Ling drove at Delaware Speedway on the other side of the city.

The venture was a resounding success. Ross won the hobby points championship his first year at Nilestown and Ling was second in points at Delaware.

It's been a non-stop success story ever since for Ross, although it's been anything but easy. A general foreman at the Ford assembly plant at Talbotville, just south of London, Ross campaigned for several years at tracks all over the area, including Delaware, Nilestown, Cayuga, Flamboro and Pinecrest, near Toronto.

"I'd have to get up at 5 in the morning to get to work and I wouldn't be home til 6:30 at night," he related Tuesday at the Tally Ho. "Then there'd be a race somewhere and it would be 1:30 in the morning before I'd get home. Lots of times we'd crash and I'd be up all night working on the car."

Somehow he found time to marry and help raise three daughters.

The hectic schedule ended two years ago when Ross signed with the Carling team and now he devotes his full time to racing.

Last year the team campaigned on the NASCAR circuit and Ross became the first Canadian to win a race and to take the rookie award. The victory came in the Old Dominion race at Martinsville, Va.

This year, Ross plans to limit his NASCAR appearances to four or five races, including the Old Dominion and a couple in Michigan, and will drive more extensively in Canada for his sponsor. He's promised to be in Victoria Sept. 6 for the Canada 200, driving one of his Cameros in what shapes up as the classic of the year on Vancouver Island.

Hershel McGriff, who outduelled Gary Kershaw in last year's Canada 200 before an overflow crowd of more than 5,000 at Western, will also be back along with his two sons, Hershel Jr. and Doug. And, of course, Kershaw will be in the starting grid.

Rule changes to make super-stock racing more competitive at Western were reviewed Tuesday. This year there will be no stock class but the claimers will continue.

Opening day April 20, featuring super-stocks and claimers, begins at 1 p.m. Second program is Sunday, April 27, followed by the regular Saturday night racing starting at 7. There will again be holiday cards.

The super modified sprint cars have four dates on the schedule — the Daffodil Cup May 17, the Carling Open International Drivers Challenge July 15, the Western Racing Association Strawberry Cup July 19 and another IDC special Aug. 12.

Goldstream Side Channel Slated for Improvement

Spurred by a successful 1974 operation and signs that its fry feeding program is starting to bear fruit, the Amalgamated Conservation Society is stepping up plans to help rehabilitate the spawning capabilities of the Goldstream.

The group, composed of various outdoor clubs on the southern end of Vancouver Island, has received permission from the provincial parks branch, fish and wildlife branch as well as federal fisheries to improve an old side channel on the well-visited stream.

Scheduled to be built later this year, the channel improvements will provide a controlled flow of water for both spawning and rearing and reduce flood damage during the winter.

Spawning gravel for 16 pairs of salmon and a hatching area for over 40,000 eggs will be produced by the project.

In keeping with conditions laid down by the parks branch, the emphasis will be on keeping construction as aesthetically natural as possible.

"It's got to be a natural type deal. We're going to take logs and stones and try to put them together in a natural way . . . we're not going in for a high-cost concrete raceway," said Howard English, one of the co-ordinators of the project, at a recent meeting of club and government agency representatives.

In a report tabled at the meeting, English stated:

"The potential of people to contribute to the solutions of resource and environmental problems in their community was again evident in this program in 1974."

Following severe flooding in the spring of '74, Amalgamated members decided fry densities in June weren't sufficient to continue their feeding program in either De Mamiel Creek (Sooke) or the Goldstream.

Consequently, an effort to improve fry production, and thus increase egg-to-fry survival through severe flood conditions, was launched. Flooding occurred during three of the past four winters.

With the blessings of fed fisheries, who are behind Amalgamated 100' per cent on this effort, two incubation boxes were built and installed in Mary Vine Creek (a tributary of De Mamiel) and Goldstream.

Co-operation among the various government agencies, club members and interested people from the general public reached an all-time high during the latter part of 1974.

The provincial government, through the public conservation assistance fund, provided money for materials to construct the two boxes; fed fisheries provided the box design, instruction in their operation and lessons in egg-gathering procedures; Sooke High School students built a box for Mary Vine; Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association members constructed the box and a holding pen for Goldstream; RCN Anglers' Association members installed the box and built holding and netting fences in Goldstream; Pacific Trollers Association members installed the box, nets and fences in Mary Vine; South Vancouver Island Rangers built a spawner tranquilizer box and everyone helped in the netting, transport of spawners, egg collecting and subsequent operation of the boxes.

In terms of providing water and a site for the Goldstream box, the Greater Victoria water board also lent a hand.

Last fall each of the mini-hatcheries was filled with alternate layers of gravel and about 50,000 coho eggs, which have now hatched out.

In order to take advantage of the increased number of fry in the streams from the boxes, Amalgamated expects to resume its fry-feeding program this summer.

The value of fry feeding proved out this past fall when nearly 500 coho returned to Goldstream. This escapement, composed of fish which were fed as fry during the first year of the project in 1972, compares rather favorably to approximately 100 spawners in each of the previous two years.

Sport catches of coho in Saanich Inlet, to which the Goldstream contributes, increased by nearly 3,000 fish from the same brood year.

Fred Fraser, a federal fisheries biologist who has been working closely with Amalgamated on all aspects of the program, told the meeting that incubation boxes have proved out for chum and pink salmon but this was a pioneering effort on coho.

"As far as the side channels are concerned, I'd like to see our involvement along the same lines," Fraser added. "I'd like to see our engineers involved — at least on a superficial basis."

Why the close watch?

It's conceivable that data compiled from this project might be applied to similar situations under the joint federal-provincial salmon enhancement program.

At the moment, at least, the future looks a little brighter.

NIBBLES: South Vancouver Island Rangers will hold a prize and practice shoot Friday from 10 a.m. to dusk . . . Besides the trap-shooting for scattergunners, running-deer and gong shooting will be available for riflemen . . . Everyone is welcome.

Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association riflemen stole a lot of the team glory at the annual spring opener of the Vancouver Island Shooting League last Sunday in Parksville . . . The squad of Walt Zozula, Barry Levi, Gord Johnston and Bob Reddin topped the three position match with a 1,079 aggregate while the VFGPA second team of Ray MacDougall, Garry Williams, Martin Evans and Ab Yates finished runner-up with 1,063 . . . McDougall, Johnston, Redden and Levi also won the prone position match . . . Individual winners from the club were Johnston (1st expert), Evans (1st sharpshooter-three position and 1st marksman — prone), Yates (1st marksman-three position) . . . Veteran shooter Gil Wood placed second to Yates and 15-year-old Billy Williams finished runner-up in both the three position and prone divisions.

Track Season's Here Again; Can Anyone Catch Mt. Doug?

SCHOOL SPORTS
jim crerar

If you were picking the top high school in track and field in B.C. over the last seven years, you'd be hard put to ignore Mt. Douglas. A look at the record shows why.

Since Stan Gill took over as track coach, Mount Doug has won seven straight city championships, six out of the last seven Island titles, two B.C. crowns and has added five second-place finishes in the province.

The only Island championship that escaped Gill's gang in the last seven years was in 1971 when Oak Bay nosed out Mount Doug by two points.

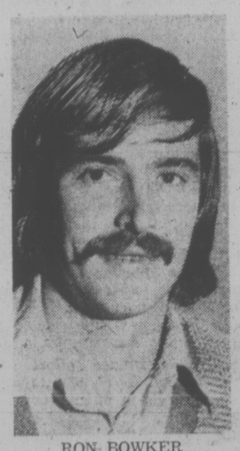
Mt. Doug was second in the B.C. championships in 1968, won the provincials in 1969 and '70, and has been second the last four years running.

Will this be the year Mt. Douglas forsakes the bridesmaid's role and regains provincial laurels? Gill, who's approaching the season cautiously for some obvious reasons, isn't sure. But he sees no reason why his athletes shouldn't wind up among the top three schools in B.C.

It's difficult to assess various teams before All-School. Relays are run. They're scheduled for Esquimalt Senior Secondary May 6, 7 and 8, provided the strike by school caretakers doesn't disrupt it.

After that, there is the Victoria and District meet May 12-15. Eliminations take place the first three days with the finals May 15 at Centennial Stadium.

Finally, and most important, there are the Island Championships May 23 and 24. Esquimalt is the host school and the meet will take place either at Esquimalt or Centennial.



RON BOWKER
. . . strike poses problems

. . . excellent record

The number of competitors a school places in the B.C. Championships depends on the number that qualify from the Island finals. Gill is hoping to qualify about 20 for the provincials May 30 and 31 at Swangard Stadium in Burnaby.

This marks the first time the B.C. finals have been held at Swangard since 1969 and, Gill points out, that marked the first year his school won the B.C. crown. A good omen, perhaps.

Gill expects his toughest opposition in the city to come from Claremont, coached by Peter Simmonds, and Esquimalt, coached by Ron Bowker. Like Mt. Douglas, both schools have year-round track programs.

He also expects an improved showing by Oak Bay, working out since Christmas under coach Peter Denby.

"They've been out of it the last couple of years," Gill advises, "but they should come back this year."

While the caretaker strike has had little effect on the training programs at most schools, Bowker has been handicapped because he's a teaching aid and cannot cross the picket line.

Most of his top school athletes train under him at the Esquimalt Athletic Club, but he has been unable to recruit additional bodies in the school to fill out this spring's team.

Gill has most of his girls back but has lost some of last year's boys. Gone are his entire 4x100-metre boys' relay team and three-quarters of his 4x400 boys' team, along with 3,000-metre and steeplechase man Mike Long, sprinters Bruce Bye, Robin Love and Mark Screech, and thrower Chuck Champion.

Back are Tom Griffin (800 and 1,500 metres), Larry Wheeler (400 and 800), Tony Elwell (1,500) and triple jumper Brent Foughner, who is also trying the sprints this year.

Newcomers include Jim Bissenden (long jump and sprints), John Phillips (high jump and hurdles) and Mark Nyhof (hurdles).

The major loss among the Mt. Douglas girls is long jumper and sprinter Alix Bawlf but Ulla Hansen (800 and 1,500) and Debbie Campbell (400) are back. They'll be augmented by Diana Rose (high jump and hurdles), Wendy Davies (hurdles and sprints) and Gayle Anderson (sprints ad relays).

HOMER HITTERS CONTINUE SPREE

By The Associated Press

The barrage of home runs in exhibition games at spring baseball camps is continuing.

Dave Kingman's eighth homer in 15 games, this one with two mates aboard, and Gene Clines' two-run blast lifted New York Mets to an 8-0 defeat of Pittsburgh Pirates on Tuesday. Kingman also added two singles, driving in another run, in three trips to the plate and lifted his spring average to .361.

Outfielder George Foster's homer led Cincinnati Reds to a 6-3 triumph over Baltimore Orioles. Baltimore's Don Baylor continued his hot hitting with his sixth home run in his last six games.

Montreal rookie Gary Carter's ninth-inning home run broke a 1-1 tie and the Expos went on to a 3-1 victory over Texas Rangers. The homer was Carter's third in four games against Texas this spring. The Rangers' lone run came when Cesar Tovar stole home.

Harmon Killebrew slammed his first homer for Kansas City, but the Royals needed a ninth-inning rally, highlighted by Frank White's double, to edge Boston Red Sox 5-4.

Chicago Cubs hit three home runs, including two by Rick Monday, but suffered their fifth successive spring defeat, losing to California Angels 8-5.

Sixto Lezcano drove in four runs—two on an inside-the-park home run—as Milwaukee Brewers toppled San Francisco Giants 9-5.

FABRIS COLLECTS

OTTAWA (CP) — The trip to Ottawa from his home in Creighton Mines, Ont., paid off handsomely Tuesday for 17-year-old Lucio Fabris when he became Canadian junior singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles champion.

Slight, fast and determined, Fabris defeated James Muir of Toronto 15-8, 15-9 in the singles and then teamed with Muir to win the men's doubles 15-14, 15-11 over Ian Johnson and Jeff Kent of Oakville, Ont.

In the mixed doubles, Fabris and Penny Parkes of Woodstock., Ont., defeated Angus Sutherland of Winnipeg and Kathy McGillivray of Calgary 15-12, 15-3.

Wendy Clarkson of Edmonton won both the women's singles and women's doubles titles.

She defeated Sharon Crawford of Calgary 11-3, 11-4 in the singles and paired with Tracy Van Wassenhove of Edmonton in the women's doubles to beat Miss McGillivray and Margot Mills of Montreal 15-11, 15-5.

The Canadian national championships open this evening with play daily until the finals, which start at 11 a.m. PST Sunday.

Filion Out

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Henri Filion has been suspended from driving for 10 days for failing to apply for his 1975 New York State driving licence and has been fined $500 for a racing infraction in the seventh race on Friday night's program at Roosevelt Raceway.

Filion, driving Dragline in a $10,000 pace, stepped on the right wheel of Pop Line's sulky, causing a flat tire.

Goalfest Cures Illness

Tom Simpson wasn't feeling well Tuesday and almost stayed home instead of going to work for Toronto Toros.

But after he got to work and scored four goals in the Tros' 8-4 World Hockey Association win over Vancouver Blazers, he felt a lot better.

While he was happy with his own performance, Simpson was disturbed by a promotional gimmick between the second and third periods in which motorcycle stuntman Evel Knievel donned skates for a penalty-shot contest. Knievel scored two goals in four tries at Toros netminder Les Binkley.

"When we have to use Evel Knievel to bring fans into the rink to see our games, something is wrong with them," said Simpson.

Battle Rages in Montreal Over Olympic TV Rights

MONTREAL (CP) — The battle between the organizing committee for the 1976 Olympics and European broadcasters about the price of television rights for the Games continues hotter than ever today.

The latest salvo was fired Tuesday when Roger Rousseau, president of the organizing committee, told a hastily-convened news conference the Montreal group had refused a joint offer from the 33-country European Broadcasting Union (EBU) and Eastern Europe's Intervision (OIRT) of $5,250,000 for the rights.

Rousseau said the following cable had been sent to EBU headquarters in Geneva and to Intervision headquarters in Prague:

"The executive committee of the organizing committee has confirmed that joint offer of $5,250,000 from EBU-OIRT for television rights and basic facilities is not acceptable.

"In determined effort to reach final agreement to insure television of 1976 Olympic Games for all Europeans, the organizing committee hereby reduces its offer from $20 million to $14,500,000 for EBU and from $10 million to $6,400,000 for OIRT for rights and basic facilities.

"Please advise when we can expect to receive your decision."

Earlier this month, Sir Charles Curran, head of the EBU, said he was "steadily building an expectation of no Games on television, and I'm absolutely serious about that."

Sir Charles, director-general of the BBC in addition to his duties with the EBU, said if Eurovision held firmly to its $5 million-plus offer, it will win the final showdown and protect the principle of "reasonable" rights fees for future sporting events throughout the world.

But Rousseau, along with Neil Asselin, in charge of negotiations for the organizing committee, disagreed with the stand taken by the EBU president.

They said the organizing committee's latest proposal "offers clear proof of its determination that all Europe has the opportunity to view the 1976 Olympic Games."

In December, 1972, just months after the Munich Games, the organizing committee signed a record $25-million contract for United States rights with the American Broadcasting Co., almost double the $13.5 million the network paid for the television rights in Munich.

The $25 million received from ABC has since been supplemented by a $250,000 contract signed with Hong Kong broadcasters.

The organizing committee maintains it is following its established policy of self-financing each project with the approval of the International Olympic Committee, and that it developed a scale of rates designed to spread the cost of television "fairly and equitably" among broadcasters across the world.

"This scale, based on the number of television sets in use, takes into account three significant factors," Asselin said. "One is the wealth of each country, two, its degree of interest in amateur sport, and three, the nature of its broadcasting system.

"The offer made today to EBU and OIRT represents a substantial concession by the organizing committee to guarantee television coverage to European viewers, who, as a group, have traditionally shown exceptional interest in the Games."

Asselin said that a daily average of nine hours television viewing would be available for 16 days to 500 million European viewers, with the average cost of roughly four cents per viewer.

"It is one of the most economical purchases of television programming available today," he said. "By the hour, the 16-day event which begins July 17, 1976 will cost Britain $21,000, France $23,000, West Germany $27,000, and Italy $10,000.

"In Britain alone programming costs are reported to be close to $80,000 per hour for drama and $46,000 per hour for football."

Neither Rousseau nor Asselin dismissed the possibility the committee could wind up negotiating with individual countries, but both agreed it would be better for all concerned if agreement could be reached with the broadcast unions.

Calgary, Miami In WHA?

CLEVELAND (CP) — The World Hockey Association is working on two franchise shifts for next season which could put teams in Calgary and Miami.

"We will know definitely about the status of these franchises by April 5," said Ben Hatskin, chief executive officer of the WHA, following a board of governors' meeting.

"Bill Hunter (general manager of Edmonton Oilers) and I are in charge of going after the Calgary franchise. We know people there who are interested in purchasing a franchise and if the deal can be worked out there will be a team there by the summer."

Calgary and Miami likely wouldn't have to start from scratch. It's believed that Baltimore Blades, formerly Michigan Stags, would be located in Calgary and Chicago Cougars in Miami.

It is the WHA's aim to have two more Canadian franchises in the league within a couple of years. Calgary is the first choice of the WHA's trustees. The WHA is also looking toward Halifax, Montreal and Ottawa.

Hatskin said a group of businessmen has expressed interest in keeping a franchise in Baltimore but he added that the trustees are more interested in Calgary.

There are two groups interested in purchasing the Cougars. The Torko Oil Co. wants to buy a majority of shares from owner-player-coach Pat Stapleton and keep the team in Chicago.

The other group wants to buy and move the franchise to Miami.

New Pair Tops Tennis Ratings

The First Chance tennis tournament is scheduled for Courtenay April 12 and 13 but don't let the name fool you — it's really the second tournament of the Vancouver Island Lawn Tennis Association season.

The first one, the Vancouver Island Indoor two weeks ago, produced two new names at the top of the VILTA rankings. Marty Taylor gained the top rating in the men's division by default over Tony Simnett and Barbara Johnson, a recent arrival from Vancouver, emerged as the top woman by defeating Brenda Cameron.

Doubles teams are also being ranked for the first time with Roger Skillings and Ernie Cockayne heading the men's list and Wendy Cuppage and Brenda Cameron topping the women.

The Courtenay tournament will consist of "A" and "B" events in men's and women's singles and open doubles. Entries, available at Beacon Hill, Henderson and Stadacona parks, Oak Bay Tennis Club, the Racquet Club and the Island Indoor Tennis Club, should be made before April 10.

First rankings for 1975:

MEN'S SINGLES: 1. Marty Taylor; 2. Tony Simnett; 3. Tim Cummings, Roger Skillings; 5. Neil Coutts, Ted Davies, Greg Miller, John Nichol.

WOMEN'S SINGLES: 1. Barbara Johnson; 2. Brenda Cameron; 3. Kathy Metcalfe, Sandra Moss.

MEN'S DOUBLES: 1. Roger Skillings and Ernie Cockayne; 2. Marty Taylor and Neil Coutts; 3. Ted Davies and Tony Simnett, Tim Cummings and Greg Miller; 5. Scott Braley and Steve Perks, Bob Hutton and John Nichol, Stewart Grainger and Peter Rassenti, Bruce MacKenzie and Ed Steele.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES: 1. Brenda Cameron and Wendy Cuppage; 2. Felicity Graham and Kathy Metcalfe; 3. Betty Hutton and Andrea Wiles, Sandra Moss and Renata Von Tiberg.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Don Nelson of Calgary bounced back after trailing 5-2 to defeat Harvey Uhryniw of Saskatoon, 12-6, Tuesday to win the Canadian firefighters' curling championship in a playoff.

The playoff in the 11-rink round-robin tournament was made necessary when each rink completed regulation play with a record of eight wins and two losses.

Nelson's rink consisted of third Chuck Braren, second John MacMillan and lead Tom Wych.

The playoff was set up when Saskatchewan lost, 9-4, to Harold Purpur of Winnipeg in the final round while Alberta defeated Northern Ontario, 9-4.

In another 11th round match Wayne Adams of British Columbia defeated Ed Werenich of Ontario 12-8, to finish at 5-5.

Title Fights: $1 Million Turkeys

By WILL GRIMSLEY

CLEVELAND (AP) — If it had been two ordinary characters, and not Muhammad Ali defending the world heavyweight championship, it would have been a stinking fight.

The question now is: How much can the fight fan endure? How often can he be pushed and insulted without revolting? How many times can slick promoters, with their rich angels and bottomless television reserves, go to the trough with million to purchase a turkey?

The Ali-Chuck Wepner fight was a bad matchup from the beginning, its multi-million dollar price tag a travesty.

For eight rounds here Monday night, it was an anesthetic. Ali covered up with his gloves and didn't fight. Wepner, an awkward street fighter who sells booze to make a living, tired. But he couldn't pop a balloon with his marshmallow blows.

It was not unfil the ninth round when Wepner sent the champion spinning to the canvas with a sweeping right hand to the ribs — more of a push than a punch and perhaps a trip, as Ali insisted — that the bout came alive.

His pride shattered, Ali went out like an enraged animal to redeem himself.

"I tried to kill him; I tried to annihilate him," he said.

Ali battered the lumbering New Jersey giant into the lower strands of the ropes where he hung like a broken kite on a tree until referee Tony Perez stopped the fight with 19 seconds remaining in the 15th and final round.

Ali's pride had been assuaged to an extent. But the champion was denied the prize he wanted — a clean knockout over the man who had never been kayoed in his unimpressive career.

Ali was livid. So he took out his venom on the courageous, broken-nose street fighter who never should have been in the ring with him. And also on the diminutive Puerto Rican referee.

"He was a dirty fighter," Ali said of Wepner. "I got knots on the back of my head where he hit me. He butted me. He kicked me. I wanted to kill him."

Ali sold his public short. He fought half a fight. At the same time, he showed that at age 33, victories can no longer be bought cheaply. No matter how many Wepners he fights, he must be ready.

His hands are still lightning fast, but his legs are beginning to show signs of wear. He must sweat, deny himself, fight and always be ready.

Joe Louis, sitting at ringside, sounded the warning:

"There's nobody left in the heavyweight field — only three: Ali, Joe Frazier and George Foreman. Ali should fight Frazier next and the winner should fight Foreman.

"I think Frazier would win, but Foreman is young. He will be champion again some day. Mark what I say."

CONNORS' TICKET REQUEST REFUSED

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The Las Vegas hotel which will hold the Jimmy Connors - John Newcombe challenge tennis match says it will probably not grant Connors' request to buy $53,600 in tickets.

Connors, who wants to buy 536 courtside seats, said he was insulted by courtside fans when he beat Rod Laver at the hotel a month ago.

"I want tennis fans in there, not clowns," he said.

A hotel spokesman said that Connors' chances of acquiring the tickets were slim.

ANOTHER REPLAY NEEDED

LONDON (CP) — Leeds United 0, Ipswich Town 0.

Another tie game and another replay between the First Division soccer clubs, hoping to advance to the English FA Cup semi-final series against West Ham United.

Tuesday's scoreless draw after 30 minutes of extra time meant the clubs will meet again Thursday in the third replay at Leicester — site of the second replay.

In the first game of the quarter-final the teams battled to a 0-0 draw at Ipswich. It was 1-1 in the first replay two weeks ago after extra time, at Leeds.

The winner is expected to meet West Ham in the semi-finals April 5. The other semi-final is between Birmingham and Second Division Fulham.

Canadian Tour Golf Purses Up

TORONTO (CP) — The total tour money for seven provincial golf tournaments has been increased to $120,000 this year with the Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia portions each worth $20,000.

The Ontario Open is scheduled for June 13-15 at Barrie and the Quebec Open will be held June 20-22 at Hull. The B.C. Open, set for Aug. 22-24, in Vancouver, winds up the provincial tournaments, sponsored by Peter Jackson.

The Atlantic Open is scheduled for June 27-29 in Truro, N.S., the Manitoba Open will be held Aug. 1-3 in Winnipeg, the Saskatchewan Open is set for Aug. 8-10 in Regina and the Alberta Open will be held Aug. 15-17 in Calgary. All are worth a total of $15,000.

There's one great reason why Acadian 400 is becoming so popular.

Chances are you can improve your gas mileage dramatically by following the ideas below. Better still, leave your car at home more often.

The average Canadian family spends about $500 a year on gasoline.

It could be a lot less.

We have about 8 million cars in Canada. Each one consumes an annual average of 700 gallons of gas. All together they guzzle about 15% of our total energy budget. Isn't it time for a change—a fresh look at the car's role in our life? Here's what you can do to slash your personal transportation costs, and Canada's energy bill:

THE AUTOMOBILE may be the ultimate in convenience, but it sure takes a backseat in energy efficiency. Buses are almost 4 times as efficient.

Our average Canadian car travels 12,000 miles a year and delivers 17½ miles to the imperial gallon. If it travelled only 8,000 miles, we'd cut gas consumption by 30%. If it delivered 24 mpg instead of 17½, we'd save another 25%.

The health of your car and the way you drive it can make a big difference to your mileage.

A poorly-tuned motor is a thirsty motor.

A dirty air-filter can cut mileage by 10%. So for every 100 miles you drive, you could be wasting enough gas to go another 10 miles.

A slow or stuck choke forces your engine to draw too much gasoline and increases consumption by up to 30% (and may damage your engine).

A single misfiring spark plug can cut mileage by 10%. Under-inflated tires increase rolling resistance. Poorly-aligned wheels drag and scuff on the road. Brake drag cuts mileage as well.

Find a good service man. As well as checking the points above, ask him to inspect the fuel lines, pressure cap and cooling system, and replace worn hoses and contaminated anti-freeze.

If you won't slow down for safety, do it for the money.

The faster you drive the more gasoline you buy. On average every 10 miles-per-hour over 40 cuts 2 miles-per-gallon off your car's performance.

If you follow the example of all Federal Government vehicles and drop your highway cruising speed to 55 you can cut gas consumption by up to 25%.

Use a block-heater with a timer so it comes on about 2 hours before start-up. Don't leave your motor idling to warm up; start off as soon as the engine is running smoothly.

How you shift gears can waste gas too. Staying in first gear too long can use 30% more fuel than if you had shifted to second. Too long in second can take another 15%. With an automatic, stomping on the accelerator delays gear changing and guzzles gas.

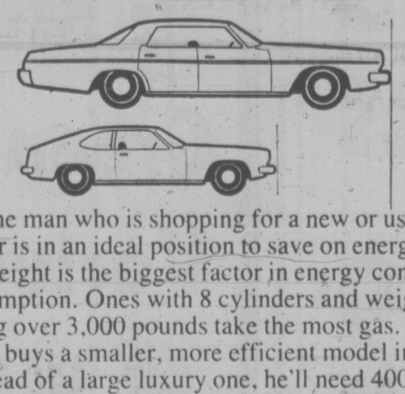
Here's a tip: pretend there's a ping-pong ball between your foot and the accelerator. A gentle, even pressure helps mileage. Avoid jackrabbit starts, gunning the engine, frequent stops and starts.

TRY A 3-MONTH MILEAGE TEST

You'll be surprised how quickly mileage will improve with good maintenance and careful driving.

Prove it for yourself. Fill the tank when you buy gasoline and mark down the mileage. The next time you fill up write down your new mileage. Divide the number of miles travelled by the number of gallons needed to fill the tank the second time. The answer is your miles per gallon. Keep a running "scorecard" in your glove compartment.

How much new car do you need?



The man who is shopping for a new or used car is in an ideal position to save on energy. Weight is the biggest factor in energy consumption. Ones with 8 cylinders and weighing over 3,000 pounds take the most gas. If he buys a smaller, more efficient model instead of a large luxury one, he'll need 400 to 500 fewer gallons of gas each year.

He'll save even more if he pays the extra for radial ply tires. They wear longer and reduce rolling resistance to deliver up to 6% better mileage.

Such options as air conditioning, power steering and power brakes are burdens on the engine and can cut mileage by as much as 25%.

2 healthy alternatives: feet and pedals.

When you think about pollution, traffic jams and the price of gasoline, leaving the car at home makes a lot of sense.

Have you given public transit a fair try? For travel to and from work it's usually cheaper and easier on the nerves and you might even have a chance to read a newspaper.

Why not walk or bicycle on short trips in your neighbourhood. It's one way to catch up to those physically fit Swedes we keep hearing about.

The automobile has a future, but—

It is not realistic to expect that we will live in the future as we have in the past. Our transportation will change.

For the automobile, new engine designs and electric propulsion systems may come on the scene.

Public transit systems—especially in urban areas—are being steadily upgraded to provide a convenient, efficient alternative to the private car. Saving energy is one benefit; they also reduce pollution and traffic congestion.

Car pools can also save energy and money.

In industry, new ways of moving raw materials and finished products are being explored. Piggybacking is a good example.

Right now, each one of us who drives a car has an opportunity to help Canada and ourselves. By relying less on the mighty auto, we can improve our environment, our health and our way of life.

Immigrant Policy 'Stupid'

VANCOUVER (CP) — An end to immigration is part of the solution to Canada's economic problems, Dr. Gordon Shrum said Tuesday.

"We could take in a million immigrants a year, but until all the major countries of the world act to stabilize their populations it won't mean a thing," said Dr. Shrum, who is a physicist, ex-chancellor of Simon Fraser University and former co-chairman of B.C. Hydro.

"I can't believe how stupid we can be — paying people to go around the world to bring immigrants to the country when there aren't enough jobs as it is. The taxpayers just end up supporting more and more welfare cases each year.

"I've never heard of a country with an immigration policy as just plain stupid as this."

Dr. Shrum told a service club luncheon that Canada's natural population growth, although relatively small, is more than adequate to fill future jobs. Bringing in immfgrants from countries where populations are increasing by tens of millions each year undermines Canada's economy.

At another public meeting, black activist Roosevelt Douglas, who is facing deportation, called for attacks on what he called Canada's discriminatory immigration policies and on the "fascist structure of the country."

Douglas said the federal government's recent green paper on immigration is "a deliberate attempt to preserve the racist nature of the country."

He said that because Canadian corporations are drawing "millions of dollars" in profits from Caribbean and other third-world countries, citizens of those countries have a right to emigrate to Canada.

Douglas, who also called for prison reform, spent 17 months in jail after the 1969 Sir George William University sit-in. He was classified by the government as a threat to national security after his release. An immigration appeal board is currently deciding on deportation.

Douglas is from the Caribbean island of Dominica.

TUGS TO AID SUPERTANKERS

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The Washington State senate transportation and utilities committee has endorsed legislation which would require that supertankers have tug escorts in northern Puget Sound if they do not meet stringent safety requirements.

Capping hours of debate, the committee approved a bill which sailed through the legislature 98 to 0 earlier this month. It would affect all tankers larger than 50,000 tons.

The measure drew support from the oil industry and Capt. Robert Deschamps of the Puget Sound pilots.

"This legislation will give us as close to a failsafe system as possible," said Vernon Lindskog, representing the industry. "Tankers have been plying Puget Sound waters for years without a major incident — a remarkable record."

Deschamps urged passage of the measure, but disagreed with Lindskog.

Strikes Worsen Slump

Strikes such as the one disrupting the school system in Victoria "should not be allowed to happen," says William Hudson, newly-elected chairman of the Employers Council of B.C.

Hudson, formerly of Victoria but now president of Burrard-Yarrows in North Vancouver, said work stoppages will intensify the effects of the recession if they continue.

"The Employers Council is not yet ready to propose solutions but we view with alarm the labor strife evident even so early in the year," he said.

"We are in a pretty desperate situation when children are not able to attend school full time because of a labor dispute. There must be a solution that doesn't involve strikes."

He said the Employers Council would be looking for a quick solution because 1975 is going to be a difficult year, with major contracts up for negotiation.

Hudson said 1975 is going to be a crucial year for business in British Columbia because companies are caught in a squeeze between lower revenues and increased costs of labor.

He said strikes and recessions are each serious problems in themselves but they have a devastating effect when they come together, as they are doing.

It was expected that there would be work stoppages this year because so many contracts were expiring but the high number of man-hours lost so early in the year was not anticipated.

A major worry on the horizon is the expiry of major contracts such as the IWA this summer, which often involves work stoppages.

This type of strike is not a surprise, however. What is surprising and worrisome is the increase in strikes by municipal, provincial and federal government employees, he said.

Hudson said the Employers Council agreed in principle with the Canadian Chamber of Commerce which has called for compulsory arbitration in labor disputes involving the government service.

"I think we can all agree on the idea that government employees should not strike."

The chamber last week in a submission to the Senate-Commons Special Joint Committee on Employer-Employee Relations urged some form of arbitration be used instead of strikes in negotiations with federal civil servants.

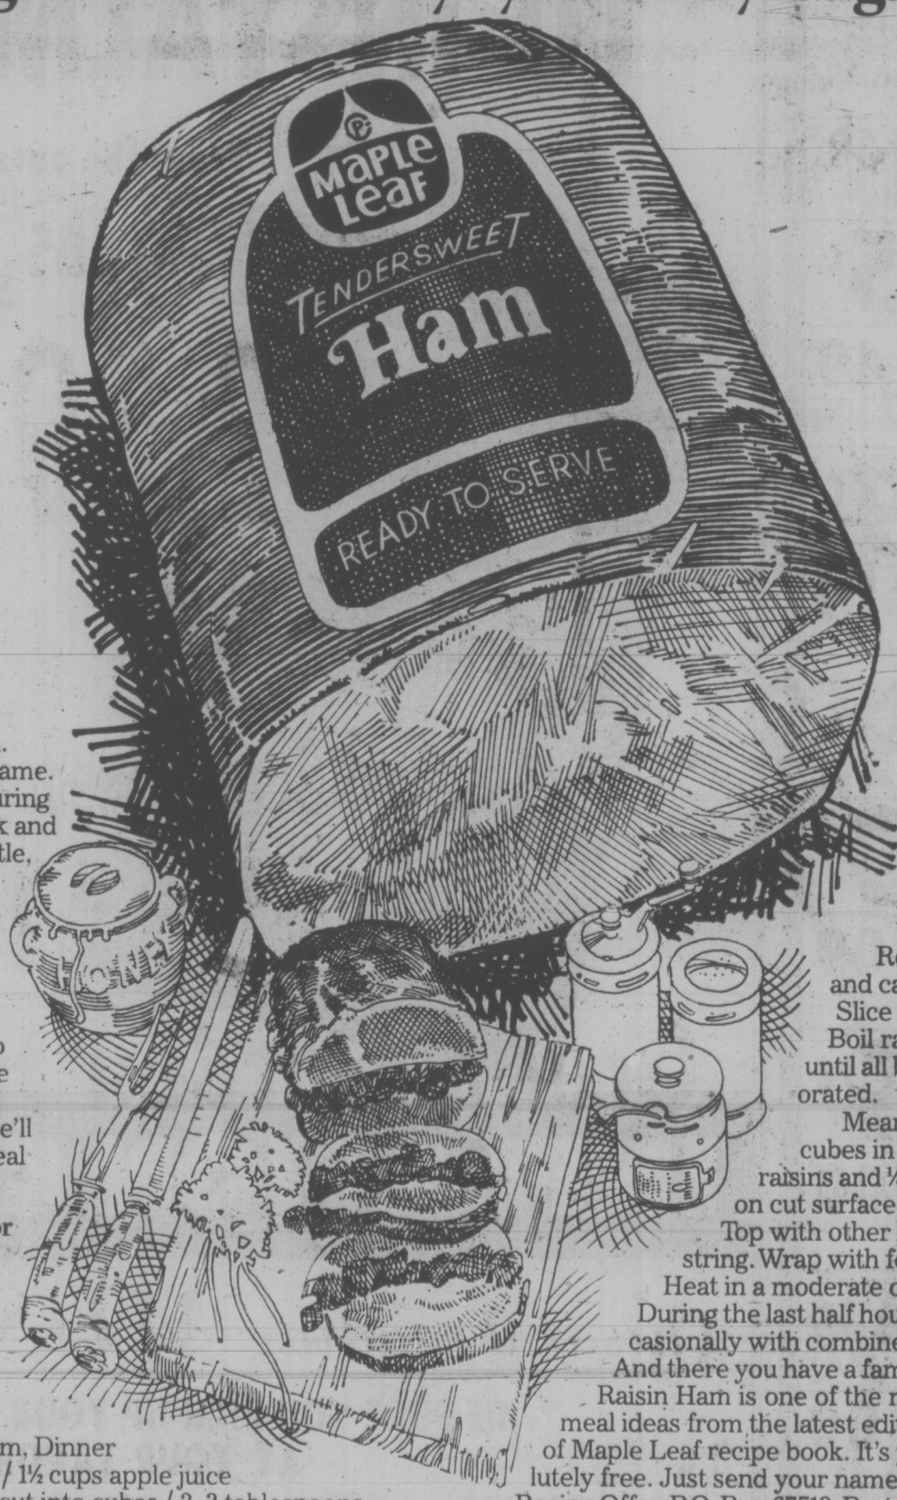
The committee is studying the submission.

Hudson was born in Victoria and graduated from Victoria High School. He attended Victoria College and in 1938 obtained his bachelor of commerce degree from the University of British Columbia.

He is chief executive officer and president of Burrard Dry Dock Company Ltd. of North Vancouver and Yarrows Ltd. of Victoria, known as the Burrard Yarrows Group.

75 cents says you'll buy our ham.

The gentle flavour says you'll buy it again.



Maple Leaf Tendersweet Ham. Tendersweet isn't just a made-up name. It describes our exclusive way of curing and smoking ham. The meat is pink and tender. The flavour is mild and gentle, like no other ham we know of.

Maple Leaf Tendersweet Ham is an excellent source of protein and thiamine, and a good source of niacin. A good reason to enjoy it often.

Clip the coupon below, now, so you'll remember to pick up a Maple Leaf Tendersweet Ham when you shop. Then send us the label, and we'll send you back 75¢. That's a good deal for trying a truly delicious ham.

A superb main course idea for Maple Leaf Tendersweet Ham from the Million Kitchens of Maple Leaf:

Raisin Ham:

Here's what you'll need: 2-3 pound Maple Leaf Tendersweet Ham, Dinner Style, ready to serve / 1 cup raisins / 1½ cups apple juice or white wine / 2 cups stale bread, cut into cubes / 2-3 tablespoons butter / 1 tablespoon dry mustard / 1 teaspoon ground cloves / 1 teaspoon ground ginger.

Glaze:
¼ cup liquid honey / ¼ cup brown sugar / 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce / 1 teaspoon dry mustard.

Remove the outside wrapper and casing from Maple Leaf Ham. Slice ham in two, lengthwise.

Boil raisins in apple juice or wine until all but ¼ cup of liquid has evaporated.

Meanwhile, lightly brown bread cubes in butter. Blend in seasonings, raisins and ¼ cup liquid. Spread mixture on cut surface of the bottom piece of ham. Top with other half of the ham and tie with string. Wrap with foil.

Heat in a moderate oven (350°F) for 1¼-1½ hours. During the last half hour, remove foil and baste occasionally with combined glaze ingredients.

And there you have a family dinner to remember.

Energy Glut to Aid 'Easy Riders'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A world-wide glut of energy and estimated yearly costs to B.C. of $985 million for imported crude oil in 10 years' time were two predictions made during Tuesday's opening day of a three-day conference of the Engineering Institute of Canada.

Liam Finn, dean of the faculty of applied science at the University of B.C., said that unless a co-operative international effort is made to ensure orderly development of new energy supplies, "a glut will result that will undermine our investments and the only beneficiaries will be the easy riders who make no commitment at all."

Finn said the government should develop additional domestic sources of oil and gas, set up an energy conservation program and find substitutes for the two fuels.

"Finding mor oil and gas is largely an engineering problem of exploring the Arctic and developing the tar sands in Alberta," he said.

Energy saved through a conservation program should be treated as a new supply and definite plans made for its use, he suggested.

He predicted the federal government will shortly announce an energy research and development program of between $200 million and $300 million a year.

Though there are environmental objections to nuclear power, he said that "sooner or later the imperative need for power will overwhelm the opposition and accelerated development (of nuclear energy) will occur."

Andrew R. Thompson, chairman of the B.C. Energy Commission, said that by 1985 shortfalls in oil production will cost the province $985.5 million. He based the figure on population projection, current shortfalls and international price levels.

He said an energy commission report forecast that growth cannot continue at the rate experienced during the last decade because the economy has matured.

"A determined conservation program could substantially reduce these rates of growth in energy requirements without implying any reduction in economy well-being," Thompson said.

He said the federal-provincial taxation dispute, which inhibited exploration last winter, must not be allowed to halt activities for another exploration season.

SOCIAL CHANGE

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C.'s gross energy needs could level out in 30 years at three times the current demand, B.C. Hydro chairman David Cass-Beggs said Wednesday.

But he told the western region of the engineering institute of Canada energy conference he is not sure that stabilization can be achieved without some form of social revolution.

Cass-Beggs said there is no intimate relationship between the power required by a society in the form of the oil, gas or electricity it requires and the power that society demands.

"To speak of limiting power demands in a competitive society is almost a contradiction in terms," he said.

"If we are to postulate a society in which power demands become constant we are saying in effect that we are looking to a society in which the threat of war is eliminated, one in which we will cease to expand armaments, a society in which we will not keep up with the Joneses, in which competition is eliminated as the basis of human relationships; a society that is based on human values of co-operation to meet human needs."

Cass-Beggs said 55 per cent of B.C.'s total energy needs now is provided by oil, 25 per cent by natural gas and 20 per cent by electricity. Given stabilization in 30 years at three times present use, the supply would be made up 18 per cent oil, eight per cent natural gas and 74 per cent electricity.

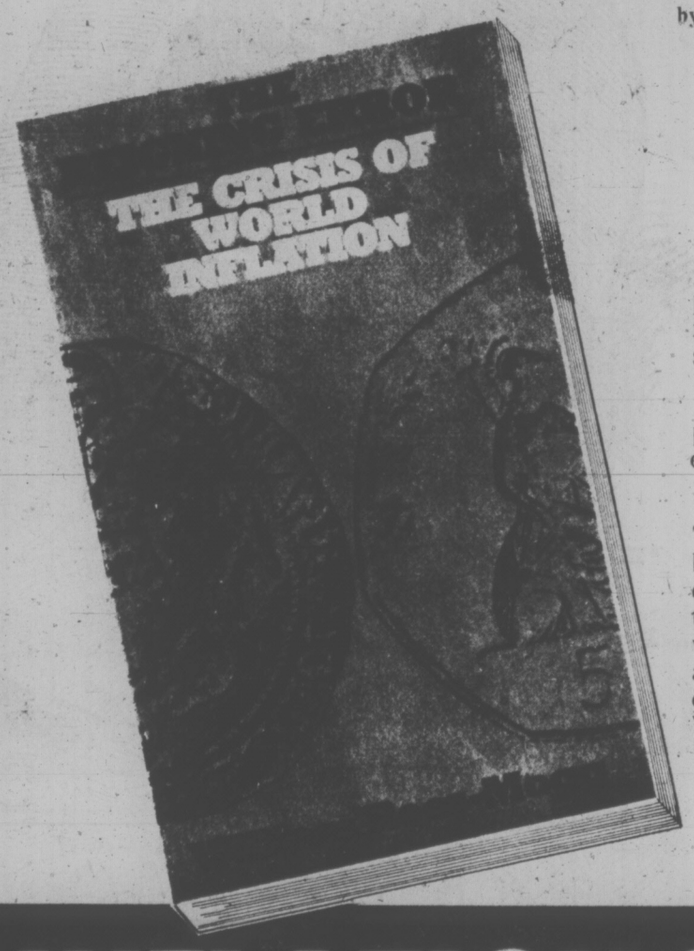
THE CRISIS OF WORLD INFLATION

exclusive!

10-INSTALMENT SERIES

From the outstanding book "The Reigning Error"
by William Rees-Mogg, Editor of the London Times



STARTS FRIDAY, APRIL 4th in THE VICTORIA TIMES

While such problems as unemployment, housing, pollution, and labor disputes may dominate public thinking from week to week, by far the greatest threat to our security, liberties and social structure is inflation.

Some economists would argue that we have already passed the point of control to prevent an economic collapse.

In view of the importance of this issue, the Victoria Times has secured serial rights for the controversial new book "The Reigning Error" by William Rees-Hogg, editor of The London Times. While readers may not agree with the outspoken views set forth in this important study, it will certainly challenge the minds of all persons concerned about Canada's present economic position. A condensation of this new book will be published in 10 instalments by the Victoria Times, commencing Friday, April 4th.

Wedding Ring Trial Clears One

VANCOUVER (CP) — One of five men charged in connection with an alleged immigration conspiracy was acquitted Tuesday on the instructions of County Judge William Trainor.

The judge directed the jury to acquit Amrick Singh Rai after his lawyer, Wallace Beck, had submitted that there was no evidence against him.

The crown is continuing the proceed against the remaining defendants: Harbishan Singh Rai, Jarnail Singh Sidhu, Peter Khan and Sucha Singh Sandhu.

It has been alleged by the Crown that they arranged "marriages of convenience" to affect the landed immigrant status of East Indian visitors to Canada.

LANDLORD FINED $150

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Landlord Harvey Dodds was fined $150 in provinical court Tuesday for failing to comply with an order issued by the provincial rentalsman to allow a tenant access to her rented premises.

A second charge of unlawfully altering the locking system on a door that provides access was dismissed for lack of evidence.

Market Slump Causes Sawmill Closure

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Auersperg, manager of the Eburne Sawmills Division of Canadian Forest Products Ltd. said Tuesday the mill will close for two weeks, affecting 415 employees. He said the closure was because of poor market conditions, which may necessitate further closures. The mill is scheduled to resume operations April 14.

No Foul Play

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP said Tuesday a baby boy whose body was found Sunday wrapped in a plastic bag, apparently was not deliberately killed. They said an autopsy determined the baby died at birth, but did not find a specific cause for the death.

Murder Remand

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Philip Joseph Garnot, 24, and Lloyd James Ambridge, 23, both of Prince George, were remanded to Thursday when they appeared in provincial court Tuesday charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment.

The charges were laid after Chris Solmonson, 25, died in hospital Monday. Police said he was beaten with a car jack and stepped on during a fight last week.

Shooting Death

VANCOUVER (CP) — Daniel Wayne Mcradu, 30, died in hospital Tuesday of a bullet wound received March 1 in a motel here. At the time of the shooting RCMP were looking for Mcradu in connection with a bank holdup last month in Burnaby. Police were told of the shooting by a telephone call from an unidentified woman.

PSAC Vote

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada voted 71 per cent Tuesday to reject the latest government contract offer. The members are employed at the airport, experimental farm and Baldy Hughes armed forces station.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mandatory use of seat belts was recommended Tuesday at the conclusion of a two-day conference on auto safety.

Transport Minister Bob Strachan told more than 300 delegates to the conference, sponsored by the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, that the government would take their recommendation seriously.

Delegates, who included representatives from government, police, safety groups and industry, were told that traffic fatalities had been reduced by 20 per cent and hospital admissions due to car accidents cut by 50 per cent in Australia, where seat belt use is mandatory.

In a speech, Strachan said financial costs alone are enough to warrant extraordinary measures to reduce the accident toll. He criticized advertsing of cars that stressed power and speed, and said it was a contributing factor to highway behavior.

Another recommendation was the introduction of direct insurance premium benefits to safe drivers and premium penalties against drivers who are involved in accidents or break laws.

The conference also recommended that drivers who repeatedly break laws should have their cars impounded, that the legal intoxication level be reduced to .05 per cent from .08 per cent blood alcohol, and mobile breath testing facilities be provided.

Another recommendation was that the minimum damage cost at which accidents must be reported to police be increased to $300 or $400 from $200.

Officers All Equal

OTTAWA (CP) — The leader of a union representing 1,200 federal ships' officers, pilots and engineers says there was no way he could agree with the government's avowed policy of regional pay rates for employees.

Robert Cook, president of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, told a Senate-Commons committee studying public service labor law that qualifications for members of his union are the same across the country.

"Under no circumstances can I understand how the same certificate is worth less on the East Coast than on the West Coast," Cook said.

RAP FOR HOSPITALS

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister Marc Lalonde took an indirect swipe Tuesday at hospitals which have not set up therapeutic abortion committees.

"They are public institutions and, in my view, should be providing services demanded by the public," he told Frank Philbrook (L, Halton) in the Commons.

Philbrook asked why "the majority of hospitals" still have not set up such committees to rule on abortion requests as provided under the Criminal Code.

Hospitals are under provincil juiarisdictin, nted Local jurisdiction, noted Lalonde before adding his opinion that a full range of services should be provided.

Turner Eyes Options To Offset Deficit

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner said Tuesday there are several ways Canada's expected trade deficit of $4 to $5 billion this year might be offset.

Turner reminded Conservative leader Robert Stanfield that Canada's provinces are no longer under any restriction that will prevent them from borrowing money in other countries.

He also noted that the exemption on withholding tax on profits by foreign subsidiary companies operating in Canada had been extended.

And he noted that the Canadian dollar is "floating."

During the period when Canada was building up foreign exchange reserves provinces and municipalities had been encouraged to do their borrowing in Canada, rather than importing foreign funds.

The intent of that restriction was to keep the Canadian dollar from being strengthened unduly by the inflow of money — something that would have increased the value of the Canadian dollar in relation to other currencies and reduced Canada's competitive position in trade.

Now, the shoe is on the other foot.

With a huge trade deficit looming, Canada must encourage capital inflows to sustain the strength of the Canadian dollar.

The withholding tax action is designed to encourage companies to re-invest earnings in Canada rather than repatriating the money, largely to the U.S.

An outflow of money at a time when Canada is experiencing a large trade deficit would further weaken the Canadian dollar.

Turner's comment that the Canadian dollar is "floating" was an implication that if cash inflows are not sufficient to offset the merchandise trade deficit then the Canadian dollar might weaken, relative to other currencies.

This would tend to make imported goods more expensive and consequently to reduce imports.

At the same time it would make Canadian goods cheaper in foreign markets.

When Can An Execution Become Humane?

HALIFAX (CP) — Many persons who say they are opposed to capital punishment actually are opposed only to hanging as a method of execution, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand says.

He receives many letters from people who preferred to see capital punishment by firing squad, and other letter writers said a gas chamber or a chemical injection was more humane, he said.

Allmand said he did not agree that one could claim execution is a deterrent to murder and at the same time recommend a more humane method. He himself is against killing in any form, he added.

'Serious' Senate Study

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate sent to committee Tuesday a bill that would make it illegal to degrade, mutilate, desecreate or insult the maple leaf flag.

"The bill has some very broad implications and its enforcement could have serious repercusions," said Senator Paul Yuzyk (PC-Manitoba).

Senator Yuzyk said the private members bill needs committee study so that "a greater understanding of the bill" can be gained.

The bill, drafted by Liberal MP Leonard Hopkins (Renfrew North-Nipissing East) would make it an offence — punishable by six months in prison or $500 fine, or both — to insult the flag. It already has received Commons approval.

Senator Yuzyk said he has heard from officials of the Civil Liberties League who wish to appear before the committee to criticize the bill.

3-Point Housing Plan for Veterans

OTTAWA (CP) — Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald Tuesday announced a three-part program designed to assist veterans get housing.

The program is designed to replace the expiring Veterans Land Act and opposition spokesmen in the Commons immediately condemned it as a disappointment.

Under the proposal, full details of which are yet to be determined, there would be assistance for the purchase of new and used housing and for construction of low-rental housing units.

The three parts:

—The veterans affairs department will provide a 10-per-cent grant toward the capital cost of low-rental projects designed primarily, but not necessarily exclusively for veterans housing.

—A grant of up to $600 a year, in addition to the CMHC's regular loans and interest-reducing grants to veterans who qualify to buy a house under the Assisted Home Ownership Plan.

—Veterans who otherwise would qualify for AHOP but who are childless can get the $600 grant but not the CMHC assistance. To qualify for this grant they must have a National Housing Act insured loan and must not have owned a house in the previous three years.

MacDonald said the program will make home-ownership possible for many veterans in the low income area. Administration of the program will be by CMHC with support from his department, he added.

Confidence Over Homes

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Commons approval of the government's housing subsidy bill has left Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson confident of achieving his goal of 210,000 new housing units this year.

"A lot of people, builders and the like, already have indicated they were waiting to move and were waiting for the legislation," he said Tuesday night following final House approval.

The bill is expected to receive Senate approval and routine royal assent before Parliament adjourns today for an 11-day Easter recess.

It is designed to increase Central Mortgage and Housing Corp funds for low-cost housing and to revise other federal housing programs to attract more private money into the mortgage market.

Danson said it should facilitate construction of between 30,000 and 35,000 housing units. He feels these will enable the industry to meet his prediction of a minimum 210,000 housing starts in 1975.

The Commons sat later than usual Tuesday night to give the housing bill third reading because the New Democratic Party introduced five amendments and insisted on a separate vote on each proposal.

Two of the NDP amendments would have scrapped or restricted government proposals to offer mortgage subsidies to builders of low-rental housing who agree to control rents for five to 15 years.

The amendments were defeated by a wide margin as the Progressive Conservative and Social Credit parties supported the government.

Danson's optimism was mirrored in the CMHC's annual report tabled earlier Tuesday in the Commons.

William Teron, the Crown corporation's president, saw hopeful signs in the housing market after the gloom of 1974.

"A softening in prices, or at least a levelling off, in late 1974 indicated that the sellers' market that predominated during the year was ending, and that prospective house buyers were once again prepared to shop with sharpened discrimination for the homes they want," Teron said in the report.

The sharp drop in housing starts last year to 222,123 from more than 268,000 in 1973 was due to reapidly-rising prices and mortgage interest rates and a slackening economy in the last six months of the year.

While private-sector housing starts were down last year, federally-financed construction rose slightly to 29,160 starts from 28,239 the previous year.

In a related development, the Canadian Council on Social Development in a brief to the Commons welfare committee said that more than one million Canadian families were inadequately housed.

Some houses were crowded, others lacked proper plumbing and many homes were in poor condition.

The federal housing budget should be reorganized to provide more aid for public and non-profit housing, the brief said.

BIGGER BITE

OTTAWA (CP) — The average buyer of a federally-financed home last year paid more of his income on housing than the average borrower a year earlier.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. said in its annual review of housing statistics, released Tuesday, that one-half of those getting federally-insured loans paid more than 27 per cent of their income on mortgage payments.

Less than a third of such borrowers were in that bracket in 1973.

These purchasers last year assumed an average mortgage debt of $23,800, up 12 per cent from the previous year. Their average family incomes rose only five per cent to $13,538.

DIEF MISSES ANNIVERSARY

Times News Services

OTTAWA — John Diefenbaker, because of doctors' orders, will not be able to attend the sitting of the Commons today marking the 35th anniversary of his election to parliament.

It was on March 26, 1940 that Diefenbaker was first elected to the Commons at the age of 45 after attempts in 1925 and 1926 without success.

In 1956 after several attempts, he was selected to be national leader of the Progressive Conservative party and achieved what was then regarded as the almost impossible task of turning out the solidly entrenched Liberals in 1957.

He ran another election in 1958 and won the largest majority ever piled up by a parliamentary leader in the house before falling to defeat in 1962. The Tories have not formed the federal government since.

Meanwhile, plans were announced in Saskatoon Tuesday for an 80th birthday party to honor Diefenbaker. It will be held at the Centennial Auditorium, Sept. 29 and feature a multi-media presentation of his life's highlights.

Confession to Taxman Good for Soul, Wallet

OTTAWA (CP) — This may be the time for those thousands of Canadians who have never filed an income-tax return, or who may have sent in a false one, to think about coming clean for the revenue department.

Confession can be good for the soul. It may also be a way to avoid the stiff fine, or even jail term, that can result from the tax investigator catching up first.

The revenue department knows there are thousands of potential taxpayers who do not show up on the tax rolls. And eventually it catches most of them.

Things like mortgages, income from investments and bank accounts, charge cards and auto and other licences tend to flush out the non-filers. There also are 350 tax investigators who specialize in checking on suspected tax evaders.

Tax evasion is deliberate non-filing with intent to deceive. Last year, the revenue department investigated 836 suspected cases, and eventually obtained court fines of $1,260,616 against convicted offenders.

But the tax man knows that not all non-filers are out to deceive him deliberately and there is a procedure for these people to make a voluntary disclosure. It also applies to those who have made a false return.

Over the years, thousands of cases have turned up of people who have never filed income tax returns, usually because they did not believe they had taxable income. Sometimes they are self-employed; in other cases, their employer failed to make the required deductions at source.

If they simply walk into the nearest of the 28 tax offices across the country and declare their non-filing status, little may happen. The revenue department promises: "If a taxpayer makes a reasonably complete voluntary disclosure related to those returns, he is permitted to settle his liability by paying the tax and interest due without penalty or prosecution."

Interest is assessed at six per cent annually. Provided there is no evidence of fraud, the revenue department frequently assesses taxes only for the four previous years.

Two points must be made, however. It is too late to choose the lenient voluntary disclosure route if you are already being investigated. And secondly, if the tax man detects past fraud or misrepresentation any time after disclosure, a stiff penalty may be added on top of the interest due.

If there is evidence of fraud, a penalty as high as twice the amount of past taxes owed may be charged upon summary conviction. For gross negligence — such as failing to report earned investment income for which you received T-5 forms — the penalty may be 25 per cent. And the taxes may be charged for as far back as 10 years, depending up circumstances such as the availability of records.

A taxpayer who feels his case may be a bit shaky under the critical eye of a tax investigator, even after making a voluntary disclosure, should consider seeing a lawyer beforehand. The revenue department may not advise this, but a lawyer can sometimes soften the blow.

Fishboat Toll Stands at 13

One fisherman has been saved and 10 are feared lost after two more fish boats capsized Tuesday, bringing to 13 the number of boats capsized or sunk since the herring season opened March 17.

James Tompkins is in good condition in hospital at Port Hardy after being rescued following the capsizing of the 62-foot seiner B.C. Producer eight miles northwest of Cape Scott, near the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

Tompkins was found clinging to the hull of the vessel.

A spokesman at the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt said there were five people aboard the B.C. Producer. Three bodies were picked up near the capsized boat and one was found trapped inside.

He said the B.C. Producer capsized in relatively calm weather.

Divers were to re-examine the hull of the 56-foot seiner Bravado today which also capsized Tuesday in stormy seas in Hecate Strait.

Six men are believed to have been on board. A body of one man was found near the capsized Bravado, which now has been towed into Moresby in Cumshewa Inlet. Another body was found trapped inside the boat Tuesday.

The PRCC spokesman said the Bravado's liferaft was still attached.

The United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, which booked men out for the Bravado, said the skipper was Rick Johansen.

Also aboard were crew members Guy Pellard, Ray Windle, David Hawryluk and Larry Azak and a Japanese technician whose name is unknown.

Gene Simpson, manager of the B.C. Packers plant at Port Edward, said the Bravado was empty when she overturned.

Four other persons are missing and 40 have been rescued from the 11 previous mishaps, most of which happened when the boats' holds were loaded with herring.

Cave-In Inquest: No Blame

A coroner's jury has recommended carpenters receive more instruction on shoring at construction sites and that when more than one company is involved supervision be increased.

The recommendation came at the end of a three-day inquest into the death of Dennis Gardner, 34, of 658 Hoy Lake, who was suffocated in a cave-in March 12 at a construction site on Fort near Cook.

The jury ruled Tuesday night Gardner, a carpenter employed by Dundurn Developments of Victoria, died accidentally.

Gardner and another carpenter, Christopher van de Water of 2510 Florence Lake, were constructing a framework for a footing for a new office block at 1112 Fort when an earthen wall gave way.

Gardner was buried under tons of blue-grey clay but yan de Water managed to crawl out of the 12-foot hole to safety.

Van de Water testified earlier he and Gardner had ignored a warning by contractor Derek Orchard not to enter the hole, and began to construct the framework from the bottom up, contrary to provincial government safety regulations, in order to get the job done by mid-morning coffee break.

Orchard told the jury he regretted he was not at the construction site at the time.

"If I had been they wouldn't have gone down there."

B.C. Said Leading 'Runaway' Wages

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — B.C. is in a state of wage hysteria unmatched in any other region of North America, C. J. Connaghan of Vancuver, president of the Construction Labor Relations Association of B.C., told the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday.

Connaghan described the state of industrial relations as "like a locomotive roaring down a mountainside with nobody at the stick."

Connaghan said until recently management felt the B.C. Labor Relations Board was working properly. He said "certain disturbing bureaucratic tendencies have surfaced, and these seem to be working to the detriment of management." He did not specify the tendencies.

The CLRA president said B.C. and Canada are heading for economic disaster unless governments intervene to halt "the current runaway on wage settlements and inflation.

"Where is the justification for wage settlements in B.C. 30 per cent higher than the rest of Canada?," asked Connaghan. "Where is the justification for higher wages in Canada than in the more productive work force in the United States?"

He said B.C. workers already enjoy wages and benefits equal to or greater than those available elsewhere and yet are demanding the highest settlement possible. He added that to support such demands the workers are prepared to shut down any employer who resists them.

"Unfortunately, governments have been contributors, rather than inhibitors," said Connaghan. "Ironically, we must now look to these governments as the last resort to bail the country out of its mess."

Connaghan said there is an urgent need for governments to sponsor a forum where labor and management representatives can examine what is happening in Canadian labor relations.

CLRA represents and handles contract negotiations for about 850 contracting companies throughout B.C.

A MESSAGE FROM OUR PRESIDENT

Because of the wide response to Radio Shack products in Canada, our sales have increased 71% over the past year.

Despite rising material and labour costs, Radio Shack DID NOT RAISE a single selling price in "Company" stores since issuing our 1975 catalogue in October. We have now decided NOT TO RAISE A PRICE at least through to June 1975 in these stores.

In addition, we will continue our tradition of periodic PRICE REDUCTION to make Radio Shack products even more affordable.

By holding the line against increases we help not only our customers but also our suppliers and our employees, actually thousands of people. It is our way of saying THANKS to you and them. And it's our way of saying to the country as a whole: we can and must fight inflation.

This applies to all 231 company owned and operated stores in Canada.

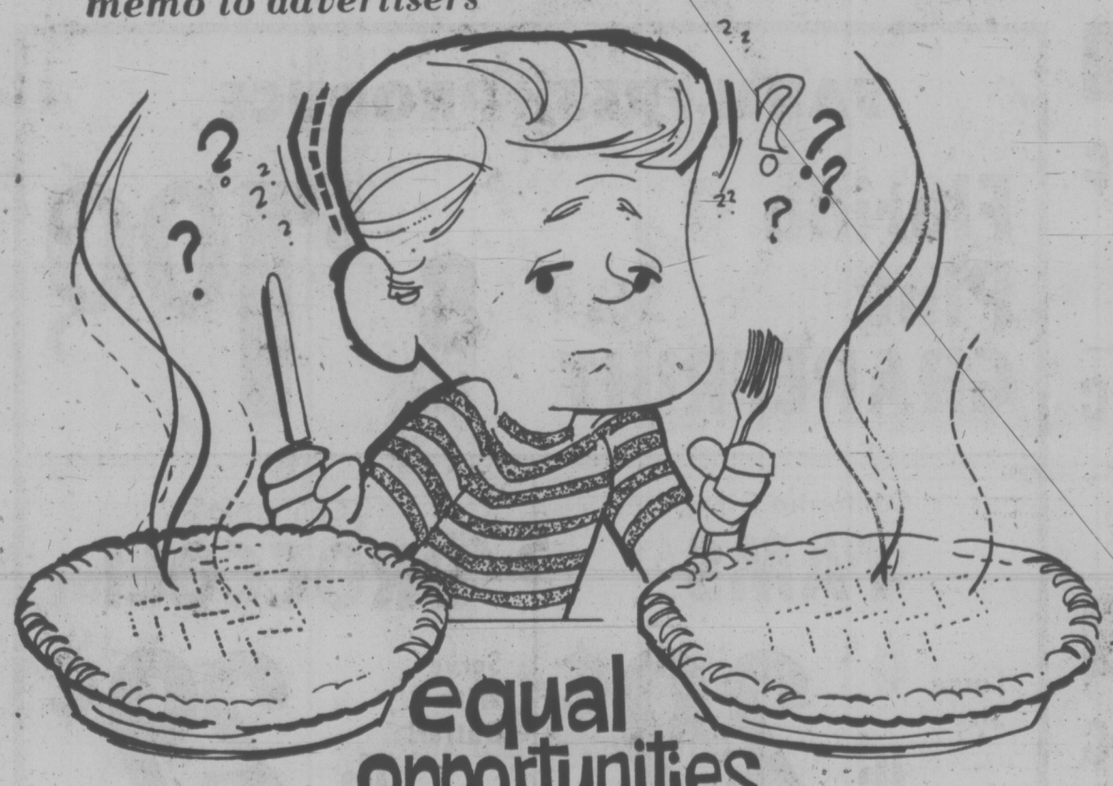
memo to advertisers



equal opportunities

With two seemingly equal advertising opportunities available, how would you decide which was to carry your sales messages?

We have a suggestion — take a few minutes to find out just how seemingly equal they really are.

Ask questions — how big is their circulation audience? Where do readers live? How much do they pay? And others.

Then ask for proof!

Ask to see a copy of their latest report from the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Equal opportunities? Be ABC-sure!

Minstrel of Many Talents

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

A genuine Scottish minstrel came to town Tuesday and triumphantly scooped into his sporan a moderate sized audience at McPherson Playhouse.

His name is Jack Whyte. He is a fairly new Canadian resident in Calgary. He has an exceptional bass-baritone voice, a great gift for storytelling and a strong aversion to Sassenachs.

Especially English Sassenachs. Are there any other kind? If there were any in the audience — besides myself — they must have winced at times but we liked him anyway.

His was a remarkable feat considering that he sustained for two hours a one-man show, self-accompanied on guitar, devoted to history, legends and music of Scotland, and that he held the rapt attention of the audience throughout.

Appearance and personality are in his favor. But it is the vocal quality, full and rich except at the top of his range where it becomes pinched, and his skill in spinning a yarn in verse that are his major assets.

Young Lochinvar, for example, was recited and it was a delight, vividly conjuring up images and a sense of his homeland. He has plunged deeply into it and into the mythology that is so colorful a part and so woven into the emotional character of the Celt.

Many of his songs are old ballads and not of a familiar variety. But they are all the more fascinating for that. Like the one based on an old riddle about strawberries growing in the sea and ships sailing in the forest that reveals a geological secret about that famed fishing spot, the Dogger Banks.

But he is still showman enough to provide the audience with more familiar items, such as Burns' My Love Is Like the Red, Red Rose, Eriskay Love Lilt, Morag's Wedding and The Bonnie Earl of Moray.

Musically speaking one could argue that Whyte's style makes mincemeat of the lyrical phrases of such as Red Red Rose but as a folk singing minstrel he is a great entertainer and if he returns to Victoria within the next few months he can expect a big reception.

His show was opened with several gracefully executed Highland dances by four girls and a piper from the Adeline Duncan Dance Studio.

Cuba-U.S. Trade?

MIAMI (UPI) — Premier Fidel Castro says Cuba would be willing to talk about resuming diplomatic relations with the U.S. if the trade embargo of his country is lifted, the Miami Herald reported today.

During a one-hour interview with Canadian newsman John Harbron, writing for The Herald, Castro was quoted as saying, "the first phase that should be made between the U.S. and Cuba should be the lifting of the embargo."

Asked if he would like relations between the two countries to resume, he replied, "when it does happen, we will treat it as a positive event."

Castro said the trade embargo "should cease before we can go into negotiations to solve the differences between Cuba and the United States, because the embargo is coercive action."

LONG BEACH TIDES TO LIMIT CAMPING

LONG BEACH — High tides over the Easter weekend will limit camping on Long Beach in Pacific Rim National Park.

Park superintendent Jack Holroyd said tides up to 13 feet will limit the space available on the beach.

He advised visitors to camp in the Green Point campground and to avoid the Long Beach area.

"The park will provide some room for self-contained trailer units in parking lots on a temporary basis, but services will be minimal because seasonal staff has to be hired," he said.

BRIDLE BITS

By PHIL MERRICK

Indications from all sources are that this year the horse show circuit is to be very active. Not only are there more, better and bigger shows planned, there are besides indications that competition will be very keen with many young horses coming out for their first year to challenge the seasoned campaigners.

In the Western Division local owners will be represented with horses from Leo Lange's stable, ably shown by his daughter Jane. This stable has at least two professionally-trained Quarter Horses ready. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Stevenson have the gelding Billy Cox that daughter Lisa has shown so successfully under both English and Western tack.

This stable also has a three-year-old colt that piled up halter points at the Quarter Horse Shows. It is understood this animal will be shown under saddle this season. Mr. and Mrs. Len Wakeman and their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Davis, Mr. and Mrs. M. Rimmer all have multi-ribbon winners in their stables and no doubt will be out to add to the number.

Eminently successful in the show ring for the last few seasons. Mr. and Mrs. W. Kernan's Arabian stallion, Sa'ika, should continue his winning ways. Mrs. Joan Dunbar, who recently re-located her Arabian Stud Farm on Central Saanich Road, after a few years in the Haney district will no doubt have a formidable show string at the Arabian shows. Deer-Leap Arabians at Metchosin, Mrs. June Simle, Mrs. Val Litster each showed young stock that did well last year so will be back to the competition this year. Cala Sona Arabians at Cobble Hill have been the source of some championship stock and this year should not be different.

Always a favorite with spectators, the hunters, shown over fences will continue to be a very competitive division. Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Carpenter have been acquiring young thoroughbreds over the last two or three years to develop for the hunter classes. This year will see some outstanding animals shown by this stable in the conformation section. The working hunter section, where conformation is not a factor and animals with blemishes and-or lack of quality and beauty do not lose marks, probably supplies the most spectator enjoyment.

Many horses shown for years in the conformation section finish up in the working hunter section when the result of lots of jumping starts to show up in joints and tendons.

Dream Whip, owned by Mrs. Audrey Ross and her two daughters, Pal Joey and Gigi owned and ridden by Mrs. R. G. Shanks have been on the show circuit for many seasons. All did very well last year and no doubt will continue to do so.

There seems to be marked interest in the jumper division this season. This no doubt inspired by Mrs. Bo Mearns' successful invasion of the eastern jumper circuit last summer with her mare The Flying Nun.

This year Mrs. Means will campaign the grey thoroughbred Misty as well as The Nun. Mr. A. Barrie with Mr. Bliss, Miss Pat Owen with Hasty Hug indicated by their performances they are ready for major competition. Missed will be Mrs. Tony Yonge's Sir Henry, retired with a lameness.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Olsen's daughter Karen rides her mare Deseree in open jumper competition with great success. Mr. Harold Getson has a young Anglo Arabian showing much ability and Miss K. Dryndelsen has two horses with plenty of experience. These will all contribute to the sport of show jumping in the coming season.

Mr. and Mrs. H. McDonald are to host an Arabian Schooling Show at their Twin Cedar Arabian Stables this side of Nanaimo on April 13. The covered arena will allow this event to go on rain or shine and provide good entertainment for spectators.

Oak Meadows Stables are offering a schooling show Sunday, April 6. Broadmead Stables are hosting a hunter jumper clinic Friday next through to Monday with Mr. Robert Woodington as guest instructor.

Pregnant 14 Months ...So She Claims people

LONDON — A woman has given birth after what she claims is the world's longest pregnancy — 14 months. Mrs. Jackie Haddock gave birth to a baby girl, Sarah Jane, breaking the previous record of 300 days by eight days.

OLYMPIA — Former Nixon aide John Ehrlichman has been disbarred by the Washington State Supreme Court because of his involvement in the Watergate scandal.

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Mamie Eisenhower, widow of former U.S. president Dwight Eisenhower, was admitted to hospital Tuesday with internal bleeding. Her condition is stable.

AUSTIN, Tex. — Robert Kleasen blames the Central Intelligence Agency for charges he sawed two Mormon missionaries into tiny pieces and tossed their remains into a slaughterhouse.

"I'm sure the CIA will disavow ever knowing me," said Kleasen, who fired three defence lawyers because they tried to prove he was insane. He says he is being framed because he defected as an undercover spy. Kleasen accused the FBI of planting evidence against him.

NEW YORK — An auction of stamps once owned by the son of the late Wall Street wizard Hetty Green sold Tuesday night for more than $1 million, said to be a record for a one-day sale in the United States and possibly in the world.

COBOURG, Ont. — The senior band of the Cobourg District Collegiate Institute ended 28 hours of play Tuesday and claimed it had broken the world mark of 27 hours and 10 minutes. Bandmaster Bill Ramsay, 46, the school's music teacher, stayed on the podium for the full 28 hours but the 58 instrumentalists in the band played in relays.

TRENTON, Ont. — Mrs. Gerald Perrin of Winnipeg is in a bit of a quandary.

Last month when she opened a 28-ounce can of King's choice tomatoes, canned by Graham Food Products Ltd. of Trenton, and found the product had deteriorated. So she packed the tomatoes and sent them off with a letter of complaint to Trenton. The problem is that Graham went out of business prior to 1960 and had not canned products for some time prior to that.

A NEAR MISS FOR ENVOY

ST. ANTON, Austria — Elliot Richardson, the U.S. ambassador to Britain, says he and his wife were buried briefly in a small avalanche while skiing in this Tyrolean resort but managed to free themselves and suffered no injury.

St. Anton is a ski resort near the Arlberg Pass connecting the provinces of Tyrol and Vorarlberg.

Stonehouse Secretary Arrested

MELBOURNE — Sheila Buckley, personal secretary to John Stonehouse, British Member of Parliament, was arrested tonight on her way to Melbourne, the attorney-general's department in Canberra said.

Mrs. Buckley, 28, who disappeared Tuesday in the Sydney area after an arrest warrant was issued by a Canberra magistrate, was being driven by police to Melbourne.

Mrs. Buckley, who arrived in Australia about a month ago, is being held on a provisional British extradition warrant alleging the theft of the proceeds of cheques totaling $55,000.

The extradition warrant charges that Mrs. Buckley, with Stonehouse, stole the proceeds of cheques drawn on the accounts of businesses connected with the British MP.

Mrs. Buckley is expected to be taken before a local magistrate in Melbourne Thursday. So is Stonehouse, on extradition charges of theft, fraud and uttering forged documents.

Message To Kurds: Surrender

TEHERAN (WP) — The message that the end of the Kurdish war against Iraq had come was carried to General Mulla Mustafa Barzani last week by the man who had been the principal conduit for aid to Brazani's Kurdish forces during the war — General Nematollah Nassiri, head of Iran's secret police.

"You can surrender to Iraq, or you can surrender to us," the top officer in Iran's feared Savak police network told Barzani in an emotional secret meeting at Barzani's mountain headquarters in Iraqi Kurdistan. "You have no other choice."

This order, which Barzani and his followers clearly see as an act of cruel and inexplicable betrayal by the Iranians, evidently has ended a six-year period of intrigue and deception that leaves Iran's Shad Mohammed Reza Pahlavi co-operating with the Baathist government in Baghdad that he had hoped to bring down through the Kurdish war.

Barzani appears to be genuinely baffled by the sudden Iranian reversal and by his failure to attract American support for the war against the Russian-backed Baghdad government. He is also exceedingly bitter, his closest aides say, although he will not publicly attack Iran, where he is likely to take refuge.

"Have the Kurdish people committed such crimes that every nation in the world should be against them?" the 72-year-old guerrilla commander asked in an interview inside Kurdistan last Wednesday night. "I don't like to use the world 'betrayal' but it seems the sides had their interests and the deal has been at our expense."

Barzani had received firm assurances from the Shah and from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, who played a still secret but major role in arranging the March 6 agreement between Iran and Iraq, that any deal would not be at the Kurds' expense, according to highly reliable sources.

For Barzani and his 100,000 armed followers, who fought the Iraqis to a standstill for a year, those pledges now seem fraudulent and the Iranian-Kurdish alliance broken.

Details of the secret history of the alliance, among the most tightly guarded relationships in the Middle East, are now beginning to emerge as disillusionment grips both sides.

Barzani appears to have been under no illusions about the Shah's commitment to Kurdish national aspirations. The Persian leader has refused to grant any autonomy to Iran's own large Kurdish minority and sent troops to chase Barzani into the Soviet Union in 1946.

Before the 1958 revolution brought radical Arab forces to power in Baghdad, Iran and Iraq actively co-operated in suppressing Kurdish nationalism. The Shah briefly resumed that co-operation in 1963.

But because of a chain of events beginning in 1970, the Kurds became convinced that the Shah had finally formed a firm marriage of convenience with them to oppose the Baathists and the Soviet Union, which borders Iran.

The chain that led eventually to last week's defeat for Barzani in the mountains of Northeast Iraq began to be forged when an Iranian-backed coup against the Baghdad junta failed, forcing the Shah to seek new allies against the Baath. It became stronger in 1972 with signing of a co-operation pact between Iraq and the Soviet Union, according to sources who say their livees would be in danger if their identities were revealed. The higher level of the Kurdish leadership supplied almost no details of the secret dealings with Iran.

The links bound the Kurds and the Persians tightly together in the past year as the Shah encouraged Barzani to continue a conventional war with the Iraqis by sending artillery units, a rapier surface-to-air missile battery and sagger anti-tank weapons into Kurdistan.

But the chain abruptly snapped some time after the Shah met with Sadat in Cairo Jan. 12, although the Kurds argue persuasively that they had no hint of an impending sell-out until the Shah and Baghdad's political strongman, Saddam Hussein, signed the March 6 accord that ended Iranian support for the Kurds.

Wine Imports Up

MADRID (CP) — A growing number of Canadians and Americans are developing a taste for Spanish wine, Spanish export figures show. Agence France-Presse said that of the eight million litres of bottled wine, worth about $10 million, exported by Spain in 1973-74, nearly half went to Canada an dthe United States.

Top Price In Esquimalt Lane Sale

An Esquimalt lane is being offered for sale at $24,800, although one estimate puts the lane's market value at only $13,510.

Esquimalt council's taxation committee has recommended the higher of two professional estimates be used as the asking price for the lane between Foster and Sturdee behind Esquimalt Road.

The recommendation came after council consulted the department of municipal affairs.

To establish a selling price for the lane, municipal engineer Mac Campbell asked Lansdowne Properties Ltd. for an appraisal.

When the municipal properties committee called the recommended $3.34 per square foot price too low, D. R. Coell and Associates was brought in as a second consultant.

The second estimate put the land value at $6.59 per square foot. The municipal affairs department told council to accept.

"The appraisal indicates a value per potential condominium unit," said municipal affairs spokesman T. F. Moore in a letter to council.

Application for purchase of the lane was made to council recently by Victoria firms Nova Industries and Cavbar Construction.

An Easy One For Police

Central Saanich police had no trouble posting a description of a vehicle stolen overnight Monday from a residence on East Saanich Road.

It was a large, one-ton truck, painted white with the word Cablevision on each side in brilliant orange letters and a big elevator bucket in the rear.

Police located it by 9 a.m., stranded in the middle of a farmer's field.

State Parade Appearance For Cadets

More than 500 Royal Canadian Sea Cadets and Navy League Wrenettes from British Columbia will march in the Washington State Apple Blossom Festival's parade in Wenatchee May 3.

The cadets and wrenettes will be from corps at Campbell River, Duncan, Nanaimo, Chilliwack, Kamloops, Kelowna, New Westminster, North Vancouver, Penticton, Port Alberni, Port Coquitlam, Richmond, Prince George, Vernon and Williams Lake.

Capt. Edwin Curtis of Vancouver, who organized a similar visit to the 1974 parade, says the 1975 contingent is one of the largest representation of any Canadian organization at an American event. Two hundred cadets and wrenettes attended the last parade.

One hundred of the cadets will be selected as escorts for the "princesses" from Washington and B.C. who will attend the festival's Royalty Ball.

The B.C. contingent will also feature in the parade at least three marching bands, a 30-member color guard and the vintage cannon and gun carriage belonging to the New Westminster sea cadet corps.

Chiefs Seek Land Rights Commission

The union of B.C. Indian Chiefs has called for the formation of a commission to formulate the general principles of a settlement on lands cut from Indiani reserves 60 years ago.

Philip Paul of Victoria, director of research for Indian Land Claims, said Monday the commission should be cut from Indian reserves 60 comprised on one provincial appointee, one federal member and two Indians.

The Indians want the return of 36,000 acres cut by a government commission from 22 reserves or the provision of alternative land of equal value.

"Money or other forms of compensation are secondary," Paul said.

Ford Rated Low

NEW YORK (AP) — Sixty per cent of U.S. citizens continue to give President Ford a low rating on the job he is doing, the Harris survey reported. In questioning a cross-section of 1,536 adults, the pollster reported that 67 per cent opposed Ford's economic program, and 83 per cent doubted that his anti-recession program would do the job.

Utility Rates Soar In U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) Electricity rates at the U.S.'s 15 largest utilities soared 61.3 per cent in the past 18 months and soon will be the highest in the world, a New York consulting firm reported Monday.

Already, National Utility Service Inc. said, rates at New York City's Consolidated Edison Co. are the highest of any single electricity producer in the world.

Another Northeast utility, General Public Utilities' Jersey Central Power and Light Co., raised its charges by the fastest rate in the last year and a half — 105.6 per cent, according to the National Utility Service study.

"If the trend continues," National Utility executive vice-president Sarnis Soultanian said, "the U.S. — which has historically been a cheap-energy country — may soon lose its competitive edge in world markets."

National Utility Service helps large users of electric power to reduce their costs and publishes periodical surveys on rate trends.

The figures included in Monday's study were for large, industrial-type users — which often are the cheapest because of volume discounts under typical U.S. rate structures.

But Soultanian said the survey results can be assumed to reflect residential rate patterns as well, and he called for an overhaul in the methods by which rates are computed.

"In the past, with cheap fuel, there was justification for sliding rates based strictly on volume, but we are no longer in a cheap and abundant energy era," he said.

Consolidated Edison's rates rose from $4.06 to $5.93 per kilowatt hour in 18 months. Rates at Pacific Gas and Electric of San Francisco are now the lowest of the largest 15 electric utilities — $1.60 per kilowatt hour, compared with $1.26 in mid-1973.

Relatively cheaper hydroelectric power is seen as a factor when compared with northeast firms, which consume oil and coal to generate power.

Over the 18-month period only two countries surveyed showed greater rate boosts than in the U.S. — Belgium, from $2.26 per kilowatt hour to $4.19 (35.4 per cent); and Italy, from $1.56 to $2.86 (33.3 per cent).

Rates rose by 61.1 per cent in Britain, with the South Wales Electricity Board posting the highest charges — $2.92 kilowatt hour, compared with $1.34 in mid-1974.

Increases were comparatively low in Australia (six per cent), with rates in Victoria State up to $1.97 from $1.92; the Netherlands (14.6 per cent), $1.98 to $2.27; South Africa (22 per cent), with charges in the City of Cape Town up from 96 cents to $1.56; Canada (23.3 per cent), with New Brunswick Electric and Power up from $1.38 to $1.54; France (23.1 per cent), with the Paris utility up from $1.75 to $2.18, and West Germany (34.6 per cent), where Hamburg rates jumped from $2.58 to $3.82.

Of individual utility firms, the electric producer in Berlin is second to Consolidated Edison in terms of the highest rates, followed by Belgium's national system.

Soultanian said one factor helping keep rate increases lower in South Africa is a reliance on coal reserves as a major source for producing electricity. In Canada hydroelectric generation keeps cost increases down, he pointed out.

CBC NEWS CLAIMED WASTEFUL

OTTAWA (CP) — Joe Clarke (PC—Rocky Mountain) said Monday the CBC news department is badly administered and money is being wasted on frivolous projects.

He told the Commons that the corporation spent $20,000 last year trying to find out whether the son of actor Errol Flynn was in Cambodia.

As a result of such expenditures, there was not enough money left to cover a major Canadian news story if one broke before April 1, start of the new fiscal year.

"It seems like a pretty sloppy way to run a Crown corporation."

A CBC spokesman said a free-lance journalist was hired last fall for a Cambodian assignment but his duties were broader than Clarke had indicated. Details were not available.

Model Pyramid Works Wonders

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Bruce Knapp says he recently got his 66th shave from a razor-blade and, with more help from his pyramid, will continue to get smooth shaves from it.

Mr. Knapp, granted the right by Everite Distributors of Toronto to sell model pyramids in Ontario, is one of an increasing number of persons who believe a model pyramid can work mysterious wonders.

He keeps his razor-blade under a model pyramid and said that keeps the blade sharp.

Model-pyramid research in Canada recently has attracted the interest of individuals and private groups, such as the 40 members of the Canadian branch of Huna Research Associates of nearby Lakefield.

Pyramid-power investigators said they know of no Canadian university or scientific agency researching the alleged wide-ranging abilities of pyramids to produce miracles.

Here are a few uses that some persons and groups say they find for the pyramid, constructed of wood, metal or cardboard:

—Model pyramids are hung over house plants in the belief the plants will grow faster and better.

—Pyramid-shaped tents are becoming popular among persons seeking improved meditation sessions.

—Model pyramids can be used to "mummify" (dehydrate without rotting) such foods as bread, fish and apples.

—Model pyramids promote faster healing and relieve such illnesses as colds, headaches and arthritis.

—Plants grow better in pyramid-shaped terrariums.

—Pyramids can be used to improve the taste of wines and water from stagnant ponds.

Mr. Knapp said in an interview that his son gave him a model pyramid last Christmas and it has won his respect.

The pyramid entrepreneur said he previously got only four or five shaves out of a razorblade but his 66-shave blade "is as good as the day I started."

Henry Everite, president of Everite Distributors, said pyramids should not be regarded only as a hobby.

"We need thousands of people to do research with pyramids," Mr. Everite said.

FOOD FROM WASTE

BIRMINGHAM, England (CP)—A British university research team has discovered a new process to convert effluent from food industries into animal feed.

The process can be used to convert the daily effluent waste from food factories, breweries, maltings, distilleries and vinegar works and other sugar or starch processing industries. A mould is formed by using a fermentation system and then the mold is dried and incorporated in a balanced animal feed.

The process has been pioneered at University of Aston here. The research team is led by Dr. R. N. Greenshields of the department of biological sciences, who first thought of the idea several years ago when he was working in the brewing industry.

In the process the effluent, which contains up to two per cent sugar solution, is adjusted by some slight addition of salts and then pumped into the base of a glass fermentation column. Mould is introduced in the form of the common aspergillus niger the black mould that sometimes forms on neglected food. By blowing air through the effluent a continuous mould growth is induced to a degree that the mould is carried over the top of the fermenter to pass over with the effluent to a separator vessel and extractor.

The original effluent can be released as waste with no further treatment. The mould is recovered as single-cell protein material with great potential as animal feed additive.

The project still is in the pilot stage of development but edible mould is being produced with a protein value of about 30 per cent. It is being substituted for fishmeal protein and fed to trout for nutritional evaluation.

The laboratory plant is being extended with plans to build further plants of up to 1,000 litres capacity.

Chicken in Every Pot

Tiny Bennett, a six-foot-six-inch professional outdoors writer has been cooking for close to 40 years and writing about it for newspaper readers for the last 18 of those years. He does all the cooking for his own family, and this includes making preserves, canning and smoking fish and meats.

Born in England in 1920, Bennett became a correspondent overseas for major news agencies after six years service in the British Army through World War II, and in his travels, he had the opportunity to discover some of the superb cuisines that he now includes in his writing on food.

Believing firmly that the role of a writer on food and cooking is to bring to readers quality home cooking based upon reasonable costs, he has created a new look in cooking columns, where costs to the family are carefully presented for all the meals covered. And believing that far too many people tend to ignore basic diet factors he also provides calorie intakes and vitamin contents of dishes, where these are needed.

Winner of 11 major outdoors and conservation writing awards, he has also published a number of books, including his Canadian best seller, the "Art of Angling."

By TINY BENNETT

The chicken has always been a symbol of good eating and a measure of prosperity. In the 16th century, Henri IV, the most beloved King of France, stated his intention to see there was a chicken in every peasant's pot every Sunday. And in the hungry 30's, many a politician stumping for an election promised a return to chicken dinners for all.

But today, thanks to mass-production farms, we take this fine domestic fowl for granted.

If there are those who complain that battery produced chicken lacks the flavor of free-ranging birds, at least in these days of high meat prices, they do provide an excellent and cheap form of protein that can be served in many ways.

No matter how chickens are produced, they have extremely high food values. Chickens are an excellent source of high quality protein, have a good niacin content, a fair amount of iron, and good news for the weight watcher, have a low calorie count.

A 3½ ounce serving of white-meat chicken minus skin and raw has 117 calories. When cooked by most methods, this still only comes up to 166 calories. Cooked dark meat without skin has 176 calories compared to raw beef counts of 257 for chuck, 144 for lean flank steak, 401 for rib roast and about 350 for good steaks.

These dietary factors are important, because chicken is one meat that just about everybody enjoys, there is little waste and several thousands of different ways it can be served.

As I write this column, I have a two gallon pot on the stove slowly simmering into a rich chicken stock from the carcass of a fowl, joined with a peeled onion, two scraped carrots, one small white turnip, two stalks of celery, plus seasoning. Being of the old school I added a pair of chicken's feet, scalded and skinned, for the rich flavor and jelly they add to either chicken stock or soups.

When the slow simmering has brought out every bit of goodness, I strain the pot carefully, remove the fat, clean the pot, return the stock and pop in a boiling chicken on special in my village 29 cents a pound. Given three hours of delicate poaching, I will have a double-strength chicken stock for soup making, plus a tender tasty fowl to slice and serve chilled with a good green salad.

This procedure is basic to good eating and economical homemaking. It takes up little time in preparation, wastes no food values (they are in the soup stock) and allows for the serving of a lunch of soup and chicken salad at less than 40 cents a head. And this is fine food, even if it is simple.

Having a supply of moist cooked chicken on hand allows for quick curries, Chinese style dishes, pot pies, A la King recipes and a score of tasty treats that are easy to prepare, take minimum kitchen time and provide a welcome relief from the usual roasted or deep fried chicken dishes, which I for one find boring after a while.

But while chickens are cheap and in good supply, there is no reason why they cannot be treated with respect and accorded the gourmet touch from time to time.

Every now and then I get the urge to come up with a special dinner treat, so out comes the brandy and the wine bottles. I heave everybody out of the kitchen and get down to making the delicious Coq au Vin.

For some reason I can't fathom, many homemakers are under the impression that Coq au Vin is a terribly difficult dish to prepare, when in fact it's quite simple and while it calls for brandy and wine, it is still a relatively inexpensive dish to serve.

While Coq au Vin is an established recipe, you would be hard put to find two that are identical. Some people prepare it in an oven casserole dish, I do it in a heavy-duty pot on top of the stove, but an electric skillet is just dandy too.

On one occasion when I had a dozen guests for dinner. I cut up a medium-sized, tender Tom turkey and it worked beautifully on the dish that I served as Tom au Vin. I use my own recipe idea for Coq au Vin using young game birds such as grouse and pheasant and one of my wildest variations was cooked in South Carolina, when as guest chef at the hunt club, I used 20 young doves cooked whole, in my style in a monster iron pot over an outdoor wood fire.

So don't be scared at the name of this gourmet dish, it is easy and fun to cook.

TINY BENNETT'S VERSION OF COQ AU VIN

Take young and tender fowl cut into pieces and brown in equal parts butter and the cooking oil of your choice — I prefer olive oil but other vegetables oils are fine. Season with a little ground salt and ground pepper and dash over all a smidgin of garlic powder. Cover and reduce heat then cook very gently for 10 minutes, turning fowl over at five minutes and covering again.

Pour three ounces of brandy into a cup and put the cup close to the pot so the brandy warms a little and, removing the pot lid at the end of 10 minutes slow cooking, pour it in all over the dish, then light with a kitchen match. Keep your face clear, the flames may jump high. Shake the pot gently and as the flames seem to reach their end, douse them under about half a bottle of young red wine and remember a wine has to be good enough to drink, if you intend to eat it. Then add chicken, or even beef stock to barely cover the cicken.

Add one tablespoon concentrated tomato paste, two mashed cloves of garlic, a couple of dashes of dried thyme and a crumpled bay leaf, re-cover the pot and simmer for 30 minutes. Then add small peeled onions browned in a skilled in butter with a handful of baby mushrooms, skim off fat, raise to a boil, cover again and cook until the fowl is tender and thicken the sauce with arrowroot . . . it takes only a dusting of arrowroot.

Serve with plain boiled potatoes, maybe green peas simmered in butter and chicken stock and crisped hot French bread or a big crusty loaf of Italian bread sliced, swabbed with butter mixed with garlic powder and then wrapped in foil and heated in a 400 degree oven for 30 minutes.

If chicken is peasant's food, well, cooked THIS way, I am a peasant.

YOUR TURN TO COOK: JOAN'S WHITE BREAD

By WINN CLARKE

(Today's reader recipe is from Win Clarke, 25 Armine Place. If you have a family or favorite recipe you would like to share, please send it to the Times Family Desk, 2621 Douglas.)

This bread recipe was given to me a number of years ago by a friend who now lives in Ottawa. It requires a longer baking time at a lower temperature and makes three fine loaves.

JOAN'S BREAD

5 cups lukewarm water
2 tbsn sugar (brown)
1½ tbsn melted butter
2¼ tspn salt
2½ tspn yeast
9½ cups flour

Mix water, sugar, melted butter and yeast in a bowl and let sit until yeast dissolves. Add salt then enough flour, about 6½ cups, to make a thick paste. (2 cups graham or whole wheat flour can be substituted for 2 cups of white flour.) Let sit for one hour then turn out onto floured surface and knead in remaining flour to make a soft, pliable dough. Let rise for one hour then punch down and let rise for another hour. Put in greased pans and let rise for an hour.

Bake at 325 degrees for one hour.

Flu Deaths Drop

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Influenza and pneumonia deaths in the United States fell below the epidemic threshold last week for the first time this season, the national Centre for Disease Control CDC reports. Out of 121 U.S. cities, flu activity is above the threshold in only 25 cities, the CDC said. They are in the Mountain and Pacific regions.

Don't Let Hams Baffle You

Whatever your tastebuds and your imagination tempt you to try, ham can dress up your holiday table elegantly. But at the supermarket counter, the wide variety of modern hams may baffle you a bit.

Basically hams fall into two categories, those that need cooking before you serve them, and those that don't. A ham marked "ready to serve" or "fully cooked" can be served without further cooking. The flavor is better though, if you heat it at 325 degrees F. until the internal temperature reaches 140 degrees F. This takes about 10 to 15 minutes per pound. Other hams may be labelled "cook and serve" or "cook before eating." Those must be cooked in a 325 degree F. oven to an internal temperature of 170 degrees F.

A true ham is one that comes from the hind leg of the hog. It has been cured and smoked. Curing is done by artery pumping. The brine is injected into the artery to penetrate the meat. Hams are then drained and smoked. Smoking gives the distinctive flavor. A ham may be sold whole or cut in half or even quartered. Slices may be cut out of the centre and sold as hame slices or ham steaks. The shank half, or lower part of the ham, has a smaller proportion of meat to bone and may cost less per pound than the butt half, the upper portion of the leg.

Upon purchasing, allow one-quarter to one-third pound per serving for boneless ham and one-third to one-half pound for bone-in ham. As soon as possible, store the ham, loosely covered, in the coldest part of your refrigerator and use within a week. Most canned hams should be stored in the refrigeratort until used. Check the label. Because cured and smoked meats deteriorate rapidly in flavor when frozen, it is recommended that they be frozen no longer than two months.

Ready-to-eat ham steaks are gaining in popularity because they can be prepared so quickly. Serve them without further cooking, or heat by panfrying, baking or broiling. Before cooking, snip fat edge to prevent curling.

To panfry, rub hot frypan with fat cut from meat. Brown over moderately high heat 1 to 2 minutes per side, turn and continue cooking over moderate heat 1 to 3 minutes per side for ½-inch steaks and 4 to 6 minutes per side for 1-inch steaks.

To bake, place meat on rack in shallow pan. Brush with oil or melted fat. Bake ½-inch steaks 60 minutes in middle of oven at 325 degrees F.

To broil, place meat on cold rack of broiler pan so that top of steak is required distance from heat. Broil according to timetable below.

Steaks can be brushed with a glaze and broiled 1 to 2 minutes more, if desired.
Steaks can be brushed with a glaze and broiled 1 to 2 minutes more, if desired.

For Easter dinner, Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada, suggest serving ham steaks with a currant-mustard sauce and sauteed apple rings. Panfry, broil or bake the steaks, pour sauce over and decorate with apples for superb spring fare.

CURRANT - MUSTARD SAUCE

1 cup red currant jelly
1 teaspoon dry mustard
2 teaspoons vinegar
2 tablespoons corn syrup

Combine ingredients. Bring to boil and stir until jelly is melted

Serve hot. Makes about 1¼ cups.

SAUTEED APPLE RINGS

2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon brown sugar
⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
3 medium apples, cored and cut in rings

Combine butter, sugar and cinnamon. Heat until mixture begins to bubble. Add apples and saute over medium heat until tender (3 to 4 minutes each side). Serve with ham, bacon or sausages. Makes 12 apple rings.

THICKNESS (inches)	DISTANCE FROM HEAT (inches)	BROILING TIME (minutes per side)

1	3	5 to 7
1½	4	6 to 8

It's nearly spring.
And suddenly you want a pretty shoe.

Irish Stew Made With Roots

By MARY MOORE

The root vegetables figure prominently in this delicious Irish Stew.

The success of it lies in trimming all fat from the lamb. The reason that lamb is low on the popularity scale is its fat content. My friend Bruce Miller is a farmer's son and calls it "woolly". It is our job as homemakers to remove such a prejudice by clever cooking and I hope today's Irish Stew does just that. I watched my guests taste this stew and was pleased pink with their praise.

IRISH STEW
(serves 6)

2 lbs. perfectly lean boneless shoulder lamb cut up (see below)
6 tbsp. flour,
1½ tsp. salt,
1 tsp. paprika,
1 tsp. curry powder,
3 c. hot water,
3 c. chopped celery,
3 large carrots cut in chunks,
3 large potatoes halved,
6 cooking onions,
1 pkg. fresh frozen lima beans.

Buy about 3 to 3½ lbs. shoulder lamb. Trim off all fat and bones to have 2 lbs. lean meat left. (If you cared to you could use the bones for a pot of Scotch broth.) Mix together the flour, salt, paprika and curry powder and dredge the meat throughly in them. Put a couple of pieces of edge fat from the lamb in a large pot to grease the bottom. When it is rendered remove scraps and discard them. Add floured meat to pan including all loose flour and brown it for 10 minutes, stirring.

Add water, cover and simmer 1 hour.

Now add all vegetables except frozen limas and cook covered until all are tender — about ½ hour. Add frozen limas and boil 5 ot 6 minutes longer.

NOTES: 1) You may have to add a little more water as much of it steams away; 2) You may want to thicken the broth a little. I have found instant flour to be a great convenience. It is more expensive than ordinary flour for thickening but the convenience of sprinkling it over the hot stew without any lumping is worth it; 3) You could add dumplings to this stew if you wish, after all vegetables are added.

Shoulder lamb, vegetables in succulent stew

DUMPLINGS

2 c. sifted flour,
4 tsp. baking powder,
½ tsp. salt,
2 tbsp. shortening,
2-3 c. milk.

Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening until size of peas with pastry blender. Quickly stir in milk just until all flour is moistened. Have stew boiling hard. Dip a silver serving spoon in the broth then use it to spoon six dumplings onto vegetables in boiling hot broth. COVER at once and cook on medium heat for 15 minutes. DO NOT PEEK or dumplings may be soggy.

Canned Tomatoes Better Than Late Bloomers

HILDA BEASTALL

Buying and preparing vegetables for one person's meals is a different proposition than for a group, but since the same need for good food exists the same amount of thought must go into the project. Quantities purchased will naturally be smaller, so one can often choose the best. Fresh produce will usually prove more economical for one person than either canned or frozen, with a few exceptions.

One important exception is buying canned tomatoes during winter when vine ripened locals are not available. Fresh tomatoes now are but a pale replica of those coming ripe from local plants in late summer, and tomatoes lose nothing by canning. They are still good vitamin value and there is no waste if used within 36 to 48 hours of opening, if kept in the refrigerator.

A 19-ounce can, at around 35 cents, used during two days in several ways for salad, soup, skillet, casserole and as tomato juice is a good buy for one person.

Today's recipes are all to serve one person. Almost any recipe given in these colums can readily be increased for more servings and decreased for less. Most quantities are not critical.

SKILLET OR FRYPAN TOMATOES

½ cup strained tomato pieces
1 tsp onion OR
½ tsp chopped mint
¼ cup chopped celery and leaves
1 Tbsp soy oil or soft margarine
¼ cup cooked brown rice
a little salt
1 Tbsp soy flour
1 Tbsp wheat germ

In a small frypan or saucepan having a lid, cook the celery and onion (if used) in the oil for a few minutes with gentle heat. Add tomato pieces (they will have some juice) and simmer, covered, for 10 minutes.

Add cooked rice (from previous day) mixed with mint, salt, soy and wheat germ. Stir all together in pan until thoroughly heated and thickening.

Serve on homemade wholewheat bun or lightly toasted slice of wholewheat bread topped with a slice of Cheddar cheese.

This is one generous portion for a complete lunch or supper dish. Lettuce or other green salad will round out the meal.

Cheese has increased in price unbelievably. The Cheddar type is still a better buy than packaged and sliced cheese. Some stores occasionally advertize Cheddar at a much reduced price. It then is a real bargain. Two or three of the smaller pieces (around 12 ounces each) will keep well in the top-of-refrigerator type freezing compartment. Wrap each piece in additional waxed paper or in foil, and date each one.

This is a great saving for one person; the cheese is on hand for any unexpected need, and often will be enough to last until the next advertized special.

Mushrooms and eggplant may not figure regularly in your menu, yet each has a definite place in meals, especially those with little meat.

Together they contribute some protein, and appreciable amounts of vitamins and minerals; mushrooms are the more valuable food. Both add flavor, texture and variety to many dishes.

EGGPLANT-TOMATO LUNCH

½ cup diced eggplant
1 Tbsp chopped onion OR
½ tsp chopped mint
1 Tbsp soy oil or soft margarine
½ cup strained tomato pieces
1 Tbsp grated Cheddar cheese
1 Tbsp wheat germ
few grains salt

In a small frypan or saucepan, with a cover, heat the oil. Add diced eggplant and onion. If mint is used, add it later. Cook for five minutes covered, over gentle heat.

Add tomatoes (canned) and cook five minutes longer.

Have ready a thick slice of wholewheat bread or a split wholewheat bun.

Mix wheat germ and cheese together. Add salt to tomato-eggplant mixture and spoon over the bread; sprinkle with wheat germ and cheese.

The following recipe for omelette is another complete meal to serve one. The spinach cooks down to about a quarter cup. The macaroni can be cooked in a double-quantity for later use.

Mushroom Omelette

2 cups fresh spinach
½ cup brown mushrooms
2 Tbsp soy oil or soft margarine
½ cup skim milk (from powder)
1 Tbsp wheat germ
1 large or 2 small eggs
1 Tbsp grated Cheddar cheese
¾ cup cooked macaroni OR
½ cup cooked brown rice.

This recipe needs a flat frypan or skillet, and also needs a lid. If no covered frypan, make the same recipe into scrambled egg. You will get the same values but the dish will look different.

Wash the spinach thoroughly, removing coarse and broken stems. Put into pan with oil; cover with lid; simmer gently until wilted.

Add the washed, dried, and coarsely chopped mushrooms. Simmer for 10 minutes, covered. Check and shake to prevent scorching.

Beat the egg, or eggs, a little with the milk; pour all over the spinach and mushrooms. Replace lid.

With lowest possible heat, cook gently until set; not more than about three to four minutes.

Turn out on top of heated cooked macaroni on a heated plate, sprinkle with the cheese and enjoy. If you have a spoonful of canned tomato on hand, serve it on the side. You will have a great meal for around 45 cents.

Cultivated mushrooms do not need peeling. Wash or wipe with a clean cloth. Take a thin slice from the stem end. Buy them from an open display so you get just the amount you want. Most stores get a fresh supply every two days at most. Mushrooms sell now at 99 cents for a pound, with an occasional special at a lower price. A quarter pound will make two or three servings with other vegetables, eggs or cheese. The nutrition they add is in a very digestible form.

Keep mushrooms in a flat open dish for no more than 36 hours.

Always check value against price. Nothing is a bargain unless it has quality and is what you want and need.

TV Suspect In House Fire

GANGES — Assistant fire chief Les Wagg of Ganges says an instant-on television set was among several possible causes being investigated for a fire which destroyed the home of Wilfrid Taylor on Robinson Road March 17.

Several fires in Greater Victoria last year were blamed on malfunctioning instant-on television sets.

Test Your Knowledge of Carbohydrates

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By DR. JEAN MAYER

The one place that sugar seems to be plentiful lately is in the news. So much has been said by commentators and food editors about sugar and the carbohydrates that you probably feel you are quite well-informed. Well, how much do you really know? Here's a 10-question quiz, with the answers below.

1. Just what is a carbohydrate?

2. Which of these four foods contains carbohydrates? a) milk, b) apricots, c) soybeans, d) molasses.

3. Which of these statements is true? 1) When you eat sugar, it is burned off as energy, while starch turns to fat on the body. 2) Starch has more calories than sugar, so it takes more exercise to get rid of it. 3) It takes longer to digest starches than sugars.

4. The body breaks down all carbohydrates into one particular form. This substance, with fat, is the principal source of the body's energy, and the only source of energy for the brain. What is the carbohydrate byproduct?

5. North Americans now get about 40 per cent of their calories from carbohydrates. Is this considered an ideal percentage?

6. True or false: A low-carbohydrate diet is also generally a high-protein diet.

7. Assume you consume the average North American diet. How many pounds of refined sugar do you think you ate last year? How much corn syrup did you consume? How many calories do you think this represented?

8. Whole grain flours as well as whole grain cereals have nutrients that are not found in enriched white flour products. Why? And what are the nutrients?

9. What energy-producing nutrient do the following foods have in common besides carbohydrates? Wholegrain rice, white bread, walnuts, sesame seeds, skim milk, avocados, broccoli.

10. Some carbohydrate foods have a component we cannot digest, yet this ingredient is necessary for good health. What is it? Why do we need it?

Now, check your answers:

1. If you said a carbohydrate is either a sugar or a starch, you're right. If you added that they range from very simple molecules, in the sugars like glucose (sugar of the blood), fructose (the sugar found in fruit), sucrose (ordinary beet or cane sugar) and lactose (milk sugar), to very complex ones, such as starches or cellulose, made up of hundreds of units of glucose, you get an A plus. (Cellulose, incidentally, can be digested by cows and other ruminants, but not by people.)

2. All four of them contain carbohydrates. Milk contains lactose, apricots have fructose, soybeans contain complex starch and molasses has sucrose, like white sugar.

3. Only statement 3 is true. Whether you burn off the calories as energy or store them in fat, depends only on whether you eat no more than you need. And all carbohydrates have four calories per gram, or 120 per ounce. It's true that starches do take a little longer to break down, but that's because they are more complex and, therefore, take a bit longer to digest.

4. The energy-supplying substance is glucose.

5. There is no ideal percentage. People in underdeveloped countries often get about 80 per cent of their calories from carbohydrates in grains, and most of their protein also comes from the grains. In general, the less carbohydrate you eat, the more fat you consume. A high level of dietary fat is often undesirable, because it raises blood cholesterol.

6. False. Almost all of our common "protein" foods except those that also contain carbohydrates, such as dried beans, also have most of their calories as fat. What you inevitably end up with on a low-carbohydrate diet is a high-meat — therefore a high-fat — diet.

7. Everyone in your family each averaged about 115 pounds of sugar last year, and 15 pounds of syrup. That works out to be 500 empty calories a day.

8. The more highly the grain is milled, the more nutrients are milled out. Most white flour has an "extraction rate" of 70 per cent, which means that 30 per cent of the grain has been discarded along with it, a substantial loss of vitamins and minerals. Only a few nutrients are returned by enrichment. Milling at an 80 per cent extraction rate would still give up good bread and flour that would be "off white" in color but with significant retention of B vitamins, vitamin E, and trace minerals.

9. Protein is the answer, surprisingly. Milk protein is complete; the others have incomplete protein. But when a combination of such foods is eaten at the same meal, they combine to make complete protein.

10. Roughage. It is the cellulose component of whole grains and cereals and some vegetables and fruits. Through its irreducible bulk, the indigestible component seems to promote intestinal regularity, by getting the food to pass faster through the system, and is now thought to help prevent diseases of the large intestine.

For the many readers who want to keep off weight, Dr. Mayer has compiled his "10 sure Ways to Take Off Pounds." For a copy of this practical booklet, write to "Weight Control," Dr. Jean Mayer, in care of this paper and enclose 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope.

Custom-Made Casseroles Simple Dish

Nothing is simpler than custom tailoring your own casseroles — you can make them as plain or as fancy as you like, using leftovers and other staples.

Here's how to go about it without a recipe. Combine a protein food, a starch food, a fruit or vegetable, a liquid and some seasonings. Bake in a dish at 350 deg. F. until hot and bubbling and serve. Could anything be easier?

Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada, suggests the following proportions for each ingredient to make a casserole:

—3 cups protein food such as canned or cooked beef, pork, fish, poultry, beans; or 6 eggs.
—2 cups starch food such as cooked rice, potatoes, macaroni or noodles.
—2 cups canned, frozen or cooked vegetables.
—2 cups liquid such as gravy, cheese, cream or tomato sauce, or one 10-oz. can of condensed soup plus ¾ cup of water, milk or bouillon.
—Seasonings: Your choice of salt, pepper, Worcestershire sauce, soy sauce, catsup, spices, herbs or packaged seasoning mixes. You can also add ½ cup bread crumbs as a topping.

Jot these proportions down and keep in your recipe file box for quick reference. It is your passport to a world of casserole creations.

These two recipes are complete main dishes. Serve them with a salad and dessert to satisfy hearty appetites.

TURKEY NOODLE CASSEROLE

½ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons fat
¾ cup chicken bouillon
1 10-ounce can condensed cream of celery soup
1 cup (4 ounces) grated cheddar cheese
Salt and pepper
3 cups diced cooked turkey
2 cups cooked broad noodles (4 ounces uncooked)
1½ cups peas
½ cup buttered dry bread crumbs

Saute onion in fat until transparent. Add bouillon and soup and stir until smooth. Add cheese and stir until melted. Season to taste. Add turkey, noodles and peas. Turn into greased baking dish. Sprinkle with bread crumbs. Bake at 350 deg. F. until bubbling (about 30 minutes). 6 servings.

Hot Sandwich Time-Savers

When it looks like the family's evening schedules are bent on keeping you in the kitchen for hours, it's time to plan a new kind of dinner. It should be a meal that can be hot and fresh for each family member regardless of the hour at which he sits down at the table. And, with interest in saving energy — both cooking fuel and your own — it should be a dinner that doesn't need lots of preparation nor holding in the oven or on the range for hours.

Hot sandwiches are a great solution for those evenings and are even easier when made with canned meat spreads. The sandwiches can be prepared ahead of time, wrapped well and refrigerated. Then, except for broiling, toasting, or grilling, dinner is ready in a moment's notice.

Delicious hot sandwiches to try are Deviled Ham Bunwiches made with deviled ham, tomato slices, French fried onion rings, and grated cheddar cheese.

DEVILED HAM BUNWICHES

1 4½ ounce can deviled ham
¾ cup grated cheddar cheese
4 hamburger buns, lightly toasted
½ cup canned French fried onions
4 tomato slices

In a small bowl, mix deviled ham and ¼ cup cheddar cheese. Spread this mixture on bottom halves of hamburger buns. Top each sandwich with French fried onions, tomato slice, and remaining cheese. Place on broiler rack 5-inches from heat and broil until cheese melts and is lightly browned. Close sandwiches with bun tops. Makes 4 sandwiches.

BARBEQUED CHICKEN SANDWICH

1 4¾ ounce can chicken spread
¼ cup barbeque sauce
3 tablespoons chopped celery
1 tablespoon chopped onion
4 hamburger buns, lightly toasted
8 green pepper rings
½ cup grated cheddar cheese

In a small bowl, combine chicken spread, barbeque sauce, celery, and onion. Spread mixture evenly over bottom halves of hamburger buns. Top each sandwich with pepper rings and cheese. Place under broiler 5-inches from heat and broil until cheese melts and is lightly browned. Close sandwiches with bun tops. Makes 4 sandwiches.

Roast Turkey With Stuffing

½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped celery
⅓ cup butter
7 cups coarse bread crumbs
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper
1 tsp. savory
1 6 to 8-lb. B.C. turkey half

Saute onion and celery in butter until soft and toss with bread crumbs and seasonings. Place in a casserole dish. Rub turkey half lightly with salt and rub skin with butter. Skewer skin to cut edges to prevent shrinking. Place turkey on a rack in a shallow pan. Bake at 325 degrees F. for 2½ to 3 hours (or until meat thermometer registers 185 degrees F.) Bake stuffing for last hour of cooking time. Stuffing may be placed under turkey half on foil with the edge of the foil covering the cut edge of turkey. Baking time for stuffing in this case is also 1 hour so turkey must be removed from oven, stuffing added and then returned to oven.

Yield 12 to 16 servings.

Oriental Meat Balls

Meat Balls:
1½ pounds ground beef.
1 beaten egg.
1 teaspoon salt.
⅛ teaspoon pepper.
¼ teaspoon ginger.
Sauce:
½ cup chopped onion.
1 cup diagonally sliced celery.
2 tablespoons fat.
1 cup beef bouillon.
1 tablespoon soy sauce.
2 tablespoons sugar.
½ teaspoon ginger.
2 tablespoons cornstarch.
¼ cup vinegar.
1 14-ounce can peaches, drained and chopped.
½ cup syrup from peaches.

Mix all ingredients for meat balls and shape in 1¼-inch balls. Bake 35 minutes at 325 deg. F. To make sauce, saute onion and celery in fat until onion is transparent. Add combined remaining ingredients except peaches and meatballs. Stir and cook until thick and clear. Add peaches and meat balls. Cover and simmer 10 minutes. Serve over rice, noodles or potatoes. 6 servings.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 35-year-old woman (old enough to know better) and my husband is 43. We were both married before. I never had children, but my husband has one son, Junior, who is 20.

About a year ago, my stepson and I began to get playfully affectionate, and to make a long story short, before we knew it, Junior and I ended up in bed together. We have a tremendously strong physical attraction for each other which we can't seem to control. We take advantage of every opportunity to be together — sometimes two and three times a day. Junior goes to college and lives at home, so it's ideal.

We know it's wrong, but we can't stay away from each other. My husband doesn't suspect anything, but he's already commented on the marked change in our sex life. (I'm "too tired" much of the time.)

I can't afford to go to a psychiatrist, and our minister is my husband's drinking buddy, who can't keep his mouth shut when he's half lit. I don't think anyone can help me, but I keep hoping. What's the solution, Abby? Trapped

DEAR TRAPPED: You need professional counselling, and so does Junior. Your local Mental Health Association can help you. In the meantime, Junior should move out of the house and you should do some volunteer work if your household duties aren't keeping you sufficiently busy. You are on a collision course with disaster. Detour, before it's too late.

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago, my husband and I and a friend were walking our dog in the woods near our house. We all saw, but pretended not to see, a young couple making love in the bushes.

Although we weren't close enough to recognize the youngsters, they couldn't have been more than 16 years old. Ever since then, I've been perplexed about what I should have done. Of course it's too late now, but the best I have been able to come up with would be to have said: "Okay, kids, break it up. We will close our eyes and count to 50, and then you had better be gone."

What would you have done? Perplexed.

DEAR PERPLEXED: I'd have counted to 100, and then recited the Lord's Prayer.

DEAR ABBY: An organization of which I am a member conducted a raffle to raise funds. The first prize was a $6,500 automobile. The second prize was a TV-stereo-radio combination, which sells for around $3,500 and the third prize was a trip for two, which would have cost around $2,000.

When the drawing was held, the holder of the first number won the trip, which was really the third prize. The second ticket holder won the $3,500 prize, and the last ticket holder won the first prize. This surely did not seem fair to me.

In a drawing of this kind, shouldn't the first ticket drawn be the first prize, and so on?

All members have agreed to accept your decision as to which way is correct. Confusion.

DEAR CONFUSION: There is no "correct" way. Prior to the event, you should have decided in which order the numbers would be drawn for the prizes.

When the third prize is given first, the suspense builds with each successive drawing — which adds to the excitement of the occasion.

DEAR ABBY: You said that when a young, beautiful girl marries a man who is old enough to be her father, he is usually very rich — or famous.

Well, you're dead wrong. I am 15 and my husband is 49, and as for his being either rich or famous — forget it. We live on a farm and barely have enough money to pay our bills.

"Dumb chick," you might say. Sure, I could have maybe married some 20-year-old kid who wouldn't give a darn about me or the kids. My husband takes real good care of me and our two sons, who are 1½ years and three weeks old.

I think you owe me and a lot of other young girls an apology.

—Satisfied

DEAR SATISFIED: If I offended you, I'm sorry. I said "usually," which allows for some exceptions, but I never expected to hear from so many exceptions.

OIL POLICY PROBE URGED

OTTAWA (CP)— Imperial Oil Ltd. Monday suggested the National Energy Board take a second look at its oil export formula, saying it discourages investment in additional production capacity.

In a lengthy brief to the board, the company said producers are unlikely to spend money developing additional capacity unless they see a market for their product.

"Imperial is concerned that the complex inter-relationship of demand and developed production was not fully appreciated," the company brief says.

There is currently a surplus in oil production capacity, but it will decline rapidly unless the companies are encouraged to make additional investments.

The amount of oil produced from the pools in the western provinces is a key element in security of supply for the next 10 years, it adds.

Last fall, the board ruled that export volumes would be based on producibility from western fields rather than estimates of reserves.

Because of declining production at the time, it ordered exports cut by 100,000 barrels a day to 800,000 barrels effective Jan. 1.

The Imperial brief was filed with the board in preparation for hearings next month that will set allowable export levels for 1976.

Export cuts had resulted in production controls on oil wells by provincial agencies, the company said. It was unlikely new investment would be added unless operators see some hope of being allowed to bring teh additional wells into production.

Imperial made no suggestions of what changes it would like to see in the formula, but left little doubt it felt a review is warranted.

"The incentives created by the export formula is insufficient to justify the installation of any facilities to maintain surplus production," the company said.

The brief suggested the board clarify its policies with respect to the amount of surplus producibility desired, whether it should be immediately available or just potential, and whether production additions will be recognized in establishing future export levels.

5 HUSBANDS DIE, VAMPIRE BLAMED

JAKARTA (CP) — A vampire has been blamed for the deaths of the five successive husbands of an attractive 25-year-old woman living in South Sumatra, Agence France-Presse reported.

All five husbands died of acute anemia less than a month after their marriage.

The girls' parents finally consulted a local medicine man who concluded that she was possessed by a nagasjatingarong, a sort of vampire, which had sucked the blood of the unfortunate husbands.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Quite frequently, one perceives that he is in a hopeless contract. In these circumstances, he has two options: either to resign and go on to the next deal, or to look around for a line of play that might change impending doom into victory.

In today's deal, our South declarer found himself in an apparently hopeless contract. But he came through with flying colors.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ 6 5 3 ♥ A J 10 2 ♦ A K ♣ A 9 8 3
WEST ♠ Q 10 9 4 ♥ K 4 3 ♦ 9 6 3 2 ♣ 7 4		EAST ♠ J 8 ♥ 9 7 6 ♦ J 10 8 7 5 ♣ Q J 6
	SOUTH ♠ A K 7 2 ♥ Q 8 5 ♦ Q 4 ♣ K 10 5 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♥	Pass	4 ♦	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♣.

North was optimistic in his bidding, resulting in the arrival at a very poor slam contract in clubs. As it turned out, however, North's bidding made a hero out of South.

Looking at the four hands in the diagram, it is difficult to figure out how South could avoid the loss of both a spade and a trump trick. Yet South made 12 tricks—and the defenders could not have prevented him from so doing.

On West's opening trump lead, the three was played from dummy, East put up the jack, and South won the trick with his king. Next came a low heart, dummy's ten being finessed successfully. The South hand was then re-entered via the spade ace, and another low heart was led, dummy's jack winning. The heart ace was now cashed, everybody following suit (as West's king fell).

The trump ace was then played, leaving East with the high queen, after which the board's ace and king of diamonds were cashed. Next came a spade to South's king. A trump was then led, putting East into the lead.

With no spades remaining, East had just become the victim of an end play: he had no choice but to lead a diamond, since he had no other suit left. On the diamond lead South tossed away the deuce of spades, and ruffed the trick with dummy's remaining trump. On the high deuce of hearts, South discarded his remaining low spade. Thus his only loser was a trump trick.

Of course if East had possessed a third spade, South would have gone down, since in this case East, upon winning his trump trick, would have had a spade to lead. Declarer could then have attributed his defeat to circumstances beyond his control.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Thursday, March 27

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Lie low. Wait and observe. Be positive concerning legalities of any proposition. If you begin something you could discover that you are in "over your head." Thus, don't start — unless willing to be pressured. No one is going to hand you anything on proverbial silver platter.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be aware of implications in Aries message. Do what you do in complete, lusty, dedicated manner. If you are lukewarm in approach, you lessen odds for success. Be vital, dynamic and willing to finish project. Aries, Libra persons will play prominent roles.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Strive for freedom to move, to create, to imprint personal style. Yes, be selfish! You do have a life of your own to live. Others must be made aware of that obvious fact. One who is stubborn, temperamental and affectionate will finally make necessary concession.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Trust hunch — learn by teaching. Rise above petty annoyances, gossip. Family members, after display of temperament, will again be your ally. Aquarian is in picture Accent is on home, property, basic values, security.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis is on emotional responses. Logic now tends to be pushed aside. Forces are scattered. If you don't know what to do, do nothing. Pot of gold may be in sight, but it is at a distance. Patience and persistence continue to be requisites. Don't talk away dream.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take special care to protect cash flow. Full Moon emphasizes that part of chart related to finances, payments, collections. Aquarius and Scorpio could play significant roles. Refuse to give up something of value for mere promise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Full Moon in your sign stresses finality, ability to know where you are and why — and where you want to go. Conditions do not remain same. Lack of stability, however, is only temporary. You can successfully ride wth the tide.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Low-profile approach is best — don't stir up the natives. Harmony, especially at home, is more important than usual. Taurus, Libra could be in picture. BE a comparison shopper. count your change. Mistakes could occur — at your expense.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Avoid basing actions on impulse. Give logic equal time. Full Moon position coincides with friendships under pressure. Means you could get caught in middle of lively dispute. Maintain objectivity without appearing indifferent. If you don't know, say so — in warm, caring manner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Responsibility could multiply. Be ready to bob and weave. Find ways of achieving goal without ruining health. Older individual is in your corner, will share benefit of experience. Another Capricorn could figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Communications could be garbled. You know what should be done — but getting green light could present a problem. One who has overall view is striving to impart special message. Be receptive. Aries, Libra figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 13 - March 20): Push in all stops. Means restraint is order of day. Money is involved — some expenditures are cancelled due to budgetary considerations. You find that one "with power" is interested in your views. Be confident enough to display material, to show that you can economize without sacrificing quality.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are concerned with law, medicine and theatre. October will be important— the year is one during which you prepare, plant seeds. Last year your lifestyle changed due to domestic adjustment. Now you go through emotional adjustment. Aries, Libra persons play key roles in your life. You are inventive, dramatic and temperamental.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 6788 for the game today. One 6, one 7, and two 8's. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation of factorial symbols. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also powers and roots (no extra digits). For example, 87—8+6 is a solution for 85.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 106. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Dawn Borland and children wish to express our deepest thanks and appreciation to the Management and staff of Woodwards, to the Penn. Baseball Assn., the pallbearers who were members of the Sidney Pony League. Also the boys of the league who expressed their respect by attending the service; and all the people who offered their condolences, those who sent flowers, and made donations to the Heart Fund. Also to Mrs. Hazel Phillips who sang so beautifully and Ursula Thomas, organist. To all who tried so hard to help at the hall. A very special thanks to Rev's Robert Sansom and Peter Parker and all our friends and relatives who have been so good and helpful during our time of need. — Dawn Borland and children.

Sincere thanks to all the friends who sent the beautiful cards, floral tributes and prayers, offered in memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Fernande McDonough. Her faith, vitality and love of life was a joy to all who were associated with her. Special thanks to the pallbearers, Father Costello and McCall Bros. for their quiet and faithful service. — Marie, Gerald, Pat and families.

To all the good C Bers of Victoria who signed the cards and gave so generously to the memorial for my husband the "Red Rooster," my humble and heartfelt thanks. He enjoyed C.B. and our little coffee breaks and would have been most proud to be so well remembered. Good numbers to all. — Mother Hen.

ON BEHALF OF ALL MY FAMILY, I would like to thank the staff of Mt. Tolmie Nursing Home for the exceptional love and care they extended to our Mother, Mrs. Povah. We truly appreciate it. And a special thanks to Dr. Stirling for his attentiveness. Mrs. Joyce Little

9 IN MEMORIAM

BAYNE — SYDNEY, R. D. IN Loving memory of Sydney R. D. Bayne, who passed away March 26, 1972 in the Veterans Hospital, Victoria, B.C. Ever remembered and sadly missed by his wife Dolly.

SIMS In loving memory of Percy C., who passed away March 26, 1972.
More and more eachday we miss him;
Friends may think the wound is healed;
But they little know the sorrow
Lies within our hearts concealed.
—Fondly remembered by wife and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

For Plants: Dressing of Wood Ash

If you have been doing any burning of shrub and tree branches, you will be surprised at the amount of ash and charcoal produced. Don't consider this as waste but as salvage to use in improving the garden soil.

During the next two to three weeks several kinds of shrubs are due for spring thinning, cutting out or cutting back. Each kind is treated according to its needs and growth habits. The amount of branch and twig material may be considerable in a small garden of shrubs and it must be disposed of by some means.

We use waste scrap paper and cardboard to start the small bonfire we are allowed in the municipalities until the end of April. A small fire frequently is safer than one huge fire. The ash combined with the wood ash is all useful.

One or two precautions must be mentioned, apart from keeping the fire small and not leaving it while smoke or embers can be seen.

A fire should not be lit where the warm air rises among branches of trees or shrubs. Buds of flowers or of leaves are likely to be scorched before they open, or the warmth may encourage their premature opening only to be frosted the first cool night or wind-burned on a day of low humidity.

A second precaution is to avoid using the same spot in the garden for frequent bonfires, unless it is a prepared site never required for cultivation.

The reason for this is that frequent burning of the topsoil destroys not only the bacteria in the soil but also the fibre, or humus. As we know, it is particles of humus that hold soil moisture around the roots of the plants we grow.

One light burning will do little damage to the soil if we remove most of the charcoal and ash to other areas, adding fresh soil from the compost heap to mix with the topsoil which has been scorched.

Ashes and bits of charcoal can be scattered thinly in any part of the garden but not used in heaps in any one place.

Many plants respond favorably to a side dressing of wood ash. Dianthus, the genus of carnations and pinks, is one group.

Vegetables rows, as the seedlings become established, will benefit from having a dusting of wood and paper ash alongside. Pieces of charcoal may repel slugs on their way to a tender feast.

The roughness and dryness of charcoal around certain plants most susceptible to slug damage in spring should be tried as a safe precaution.

The larger charcoal pieces have another use, that of drainage in the bottom of a terrarium (glass jar, an aquarium or a fish bowl) where it prevents the small water reserve from becoming stagnant and cloudy.

Cacti and other succulent plants are safeguarded from danger of occasional overwatering if broken pieces of wood charcoal are mixed with the potting soil, especially at the bottom of the pit. The wood must be completely charred through and capable of being broken down to the size of split peas.

Incompletely charred wood develops a fungus growth as the soil bacteria begin to work on its disintegration. It is likely that some stage of the fungus is harmful to cultivated plant roots rather than beneficial. Unused charcoal goes to the compost heap for more breaking down.

A last minute note before the holiday weekend: if no rain occurs many shrubs will need at least a misting over with water. The dry air coupled with wind is taking moisture from the leaves of evergreen shrubs faster than their roots can replace and transmit to leaf surfaces. Shrubs such as camellias, rhododendrons, pieris, skimmia, laurel, aucuba, conifers, heathers and others will suffer drought. Water them too.

Fraud Scheme Judgment Near

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP)—A complex trial involving international fraud, hints of Canadian Mafia strongarm tactics and the eventual falling-out among alleged thieves is drawing to a conclusion.

For days now Judge Bernard Gillis has been reviewing the evidence produced in more than four months of testimony.

Since Nov. 6 the jury of eight women and four men have heard testimony in connection with a scheme to defraud the Royal Bank of Canada of $500,000.

In the dock are six men, including two Montrealers whom the Crown has termed "strong arm men" sent from Canada to keep an eye on the involved transactions in Dublin and London and then take the proceeds back to Canada.

"There have been suggestions of Mafia connections," says Michael Worsley, Crown prosecutor, "and the Crown does not dispute that."

Unbeknown to the jury, one of the Canadians—Ronald St. Germain, a prosperous Montreal accountant—also is charged with conspiracy to murder Frank Brockley, 45, one of the men now on trial with him.

St. Germain, 32, Toronto lawyer Hamilton Martin Douchart, 35, and David James Stevens, 28, of Glasgow, will appear on the murder conspiracy charge at the conclusion of this case, which will go to the jury as soon as the judge finishes his summing up.

The other Canadian in the dock is John Sullivan, 31, a real estate agent and son of a prosperous Montreal property dealer. He says he came to London at St. Germain's invitation to act as adviser on a property deal and that it was only after his arrival that he was pressured into a role in the fraud plot.

He testified that in London St. Germain claimed a "contract" had been issued on his (Sullivan's) life but that St. Germain had bought it for $5,000. If Sullivan did not cooperate in the fraud, he said, St. Germain threatened to have the contract re-issued.

Sullivan's wife has testified in support of this contention and said she believes she was shot at in a train out of London's Victoria Station last May. She said there was what appeaed to be a bullet hole in the glass, but she left the scene before police arrived to investigate.

In essence, the Crown's case is that the six conspired to issue a forged Royal-Banks cheque which was cashed in Dublin, processed through the account of a wealthy client of lawyer Ivan Kelly and then transferred to a branch of Barclay's Bank here. Kelly has since pleaded guilty and is serving a prison term. His family has alleged that attempts were made against his life in prison by Mafia interests.

The others were arrested at the bank in November, 1973, when they returned there to pick up the last payment of the total.

Most of the money, however, never was recovered.

The Crown alleges that once in Brixton prison St. Germain and lawyer Douchart concocted a "phoney defence," the evidence of which was found in Douchart's briefcase when he was arrested on the murder conspiracy charge at London airport en route to Canada.

St. Germain, who has declined to testify, contended in a statement that he was involved in a complex deal concerning property and rights to the television program and that he was legitimately collecting money owed him by William McCallum, 42, a London businessman also in the dock.

The others — all of whom have pleaded not guilty — are Mathew Drysdale, a business partner with McCallum, and Eugene Lastowiecki, 45, of London. The Crown says these two played minor roles but were aware of what was going on.

Brockley told police the three Canadians threatened to throw him out of a lofty hotel window if his British partners in the scheme did not soon untangle problems with Barclays Bank and get the rest of the cash.

U.S. Passes Compromise Aid Bill

WASHINGTON (WP) — Both the House and Senate have approved a $3.7 billion comprise foreign aid bill that includes slightly over $1 billion in aid for Middle Eastern countries and $440 million for post-war reconstruction in Indochina.

The bill does not deal with the administration's controversial request for $522 million in military aid for Cambodia and South Vietnam. Though the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has approved a bill to give $82.5 million in military aid to Cambodia, action by the Senate and the House on that measure has been put off until after the Easter recess.

The foreign aid bill, which now goes to the president for signature, passed the House by an eight-vote margin, 193-185 and passed the Senate by voice vote later in the afternoon with only a few senators on the floor.

100 Pilots Quit Forces

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 100 of the 669 pilots trained in the armed forces between 1968 and 19773 have left the forces, the Commons learned.

Defence Minister James Richardson said in a written reply to Douglas Neil (PC — Moose Jaw) that 561 of the 669 pilots trained in that period are still in the forces.

The peak year was 1969, when 223 were trained, 195 of whom are still in the services. In 1973, 40 regulars and eight reservists were graduated as pilots. Fourteen of them are no longer in the forces.

Cost of pilot training in the current fiscal year is $26.6 million.

QUIET BOUNCER A HANDY MAN

HAMILTON (CP) — Ollie Krupica, 25, is a quiet man who dresses conservatively for his job and speaks in such a low tone that you have to strain to hear him.

But he is a handy man to have around when trouble strikes.

Mr. Krupica, who came from Czechoslovakia six years ago, is six feet tall, weighs 210 pounds and practises karate at the black-belt level.

He is a bouncer at a downtown nightclub. Occasionally, he is called upon to deal with persons who cause trouble.

"I like to stay in the background and not interfere unless it's absolutely necessary," Mr. Krupica said in an interview.

"Then I will try to persuade those concerned that it's better to cool it. Mostly, they see reason and everything ends all right but sometimes you get the guy who doesn't want to be friendly."

What happens then?

Mr. Krupica said two men who were asked to leave returned two nights later looking for trouble.

"They were politely asked to leave at least half a dozen times," Mr. Krupica said. "They refused so I asked them to step into a lobby.

"One of them immediately swung at me. I knocked him down. He reached into his pocket and because I have had knives pulled on me before, I applied a kick to his solar plexus.

"It was over, really, for the other guy didn't offer too much trouble."

On another occasion, a fan in a long overcoat visited the nightclub.

"When I approached to speak to him he turned his back and then came round to hit me with a baseball bat."

"It caught me on the head but didn't knock me down. So I took the bat off him and whacked him with it a few times."

Apart from his nightclub duties, Mr. Krupica has a part-time job as a driver and soon hopes to make it full-time.

When he first came to Canada he did a bit of amateur boxing and toyed with the idea of becoming a professional wrestler. But he gave it up.

"It's too rough," he said.

Effluent Plan Dies

COURTENAY — Sea Terrace Properties Ltd. of Victoria, has withdrawn its application to the Pollution Control Branch for permission to dump 80,000 gallons of effluent daily in the Strait of Georgia at Bates Beach, near Courtenay.

The developer was planning a 300-home subdivision with the sewage outfall proposed for an area between two public parks.

Residents protested and the Comox-Strathcona Regional Board requested the Pollution Control Branch to shelve the application until a complete study of the area had been made.

COLD-SPREADING VILLAIN ASPIRIN?

WASHINGTON (WP) — Use of aspirin to relieve cold symptoms may help spread the disease to others, a team of University of Illinois scientists has discovered.

Because they found a sharp increase in "virus shedding" — spread of cold viruses — by students fed aspirin, they urged doctors to "re-evaluate" the common use of this painkiller to ease the discomfort of colds and other virus infections.

Aspirin, they suggested in the current Journal of the American Medical Association, may help spread cold viruses in two ways.

It may suppress the body's normal defence mechanisms to let viruses multiply at a high rate. And, because aspirin makes those with colds feel a bit better, it may encourage them to stay on the job or go out in public, rather than staying home where they won't infect others.

Brezhnev Meeting

MOSCOW (AP) — French Premier Jacques Chirac had a lengthy meeting in the Kremlin with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev on a wide range of subjects, French sources said. Chirac was to sign a communique winding up his official visit which began last Wednesday.

Summer Job Office Open

Students looking for summer employment with the provincial government under the Work-In-Government program can apply to the employment programs branch on the fourth floor at 716 Courtney.

The central referral service has been set up so that students may apply at one location only, instead of filling in application forms at each government department.

Applications will be forwarded by the referral service to all appropriate departments for consideration.

Grit Seeks Nomination

DUNCAN — Jev Tothill, 46, Cowichan Valley Region Board director, a resident of Cowichan Bay, will seek the Liberal Party nomination for the Cowichan-Malahat riding in the next provincial election. The Cowichan-Malahat Liberal Association will hold its nomination convention April 23 at the Tzouhalem Hotel in Duncan.

Arab Cohort Held

KARLSRUHE (AP) — A West German man has been seized under suspicion of having helped Arab terrorists prepare a bazooka attack on an Israeli airliner at Orly Airport in Paris on Jan. 13, the federal prosecutor announced Monday. The rockets overshot the El Al jetliner and struck a parked Yugoslav plane and an airport building, wounding three persons.

Seal Hunt Protests Mount

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The annual seal hunt now under way on the east coast provokes more protest mail to the Canadian Embassy here than any other issue.

The mail averages 800 letters a year, an official said, and is currently running at four or five letters each day.

"It far outstrips anything else," the official said.

Canada's efforts to explain why the seal hunting is allowed and to prove that the killing is "humane" have failed to stem the criticism.

Canada's "harvest" this year is 90,000 seals.

The embassy has a two-page form letter in which it attempts to do this, saying that the seal hunt "is part of our management and conservation system."

"Controlled cropping or culling of the seal population is necessary," it says. "Without it, the imbalance of nature could be catastrophic."

But U.S. conservationists don't agree. Nor do school children who see a film about the seal hunting in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and off the coast of Newfoundland and Labrador.

The film is being distributed to U.S. schools by a group called the International Foundation for Animal Welfare, a Canadian-based organization with its U.S. office in Bay Village, Ohio, near Cleveland, according to the Embassy.

"Apparently it is quite bloody," the official said. "The kids express their disgust at the spectacle they've seen."

One of the points the embassy letter makes is that "the hunt is conducted in the most humane way possible," using a "government-approved club or bat."

"A firm single blow to the paper-thin skull of the seal pup provides a painless and instanteous death," the Embassy letter says.

This year much of the ire of public opinion has turned on Norway, a partner with Canada in the annual seal hunt.

But the Norwegians claim their role is much smaller than that of Canada.

"The total quota this year has been set at 150,000 animals, of which 60,000 have been allocated to Norway and rest to Canada," Norwegian embassy press counsellor Harald Svancoe Midttun wrote in a recent letter to the New York Times.

He said that Norway's sealing fleet consists of 10 "comparatively small" boats.

The U.S. does not participate in the seal hunt on the east coast and has a law prohibiting Americans from killing seals or importing sealskins.

The Canadian embassy letter, however, says that the annual seal hunt is "of significant economic importance" and "helps to sustain the life of many communities at a time when income from other seasonal occupations is negligible."

DECEIT, LIES USED IN RCMP QUIZZINGS

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Mountie always gets his man — apparently even if it means using brainwashing, lies, deceit and sexism.

In a 39-page manual used by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police's training and development branch in Ottawa, officers are instructed to use a variety of techniques to break down a suspect.

They are told to start questioning with everything that is "legal and right." But, if this fails, "I suggest the Marquis of Queensbury rules go out the window and the interrogator must open up his bag of tricks," the book's preface says.

The booklet written by Calgary police inspector A. B. Roberts, was introduced in the Commons Tuesday by conservative member David Macdonald. Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said he would investigate it.

Macdonald, who charged the interrogation methods led to a "perjured information base," said he had an affidavit from RCMP headquarters that the manual was being used.

"To have this book as procedure for our national police is repugnant," he said.

The manual covers a wide variety of techniques, including brainwashing, which it says is designed to make the subject feel "completely foresaken and forgotten."

Once the suspect "is at the lowest depths of despair," after long hours of isolation and questioning, the interrogator is instructed to start "the heaven and hell technique." The prisoner then is offered comforts such as coffee, cigarettes, or an opportunity to see family and friends.

In emphasizing the heaven and hell possibilities, the booklet reminds the reader of the persuasive powers of such men as Adolf Hitler, John Wesley and Billy Graham.

The manual also includes various known police methods such as planting officers in cells, building a "pyramid of lies" to break down an alibi and promising that a secret deal can be made.

But it makes a special point of dealing with sex offenders and women suspects and stereotypes persons according to physique to determine what approach the officer should employ.

Officers are told they can gain confidence with sex offenders by telling them either

Fight to the Death, Thieu Tells Men

Times News Services

SAIGON — South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Theu today commanded government troops to stand and fight to the death at their present positions.

Reading an order of the day over the radio, Thi

Thieu, reading an order of the day over the radio, said the Indochina war had reached a final, decisive phase.

"Starting today, fellow soldiers, you must at all costs interdict the enemy advance over your actual position and our actual front," he said.

"You must mobilize all your initiative and ability to destroy as many enemies as you can and to counterattack strongly."

North Vietnamese troops, meanwhile, captured the former imperial capital of Hue today and advanced toward isolated Da Nang, the last government bastion in upper South Vietnam.

Sources said a North Vietnamese armored column rumbled into Hue and the last government troops surrendered South Vietnam's third largest city without a fight.

Communist rockets bombarded Da Nang this morning, threatening the start of a giant American air and sea evacuation of one million persons from the refugee-swollen city.

Communist gunners ringing the city fired a barrage of 14 rockets at the Da Nang air base, killing six persons and wounding 34. Most of the victims were civilians.

Civilian-piloted, stripped-down American jetliners packed with refugees were to begin flying 10,000 persons a day to Cam Ranh Bay, a U.S.-built base on the central coast.

But U.S. ships will carry the bulk of the refugees from Da Nang, the second largest city in South vietnam, to the cam Ranh sand dunes along the South China sea.

The most spectacular plans for evacuation called for the use of a Boeing 747 jumbo jet stripped of every amenity — seats, toilets, gallies. Officials hope to jam as many as 1,200 to 1,600 persons aboard each flight for Cam Ranh.

On the political front, deposed vice-president Nguyen Cao Ky emerged from political retirement today to lead a meeting in Saigon of officers and politicians opposed to Thieu.

Meeting behind closed doors, the group was discussing a proposal for Thieu to cede power to a National Salvation Front of moderate and radical opposition groups, informed sources said.

2 Quit to Protest Food Council Bias

Two consumer representatives have resigned from the B.C. Food Council and accused it of being weighted in favor of agricultural interests.

In a letter to Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich this week, Ada Brown and Ruth Lotzkar of Vancouver, members of the Consumers Association of Canada, said it would be jeopardizing their integrity to remain on the provincially-funded council.

The women said it was impossible to have the consumer viewpoint even considered at council meetings and membership in the group was weighted in favor of agricultural-related interests.

"However, our major concern was related to the lack of action and direction of the council," said the letter.

The women accused the council of refusing to tackle issues in depth or to take any investigative action in the food industry.

They "seriously questioned" the impartiality of council chairman Maurie King, associate deputy minister of agriculture.

The food council was often asked to rubber stamp ideas initiated by the department, they told Stupich.

The two consumer representatives had expressed their concern about the council last fall and in February Stupich himself chaired a meeting of the council at which time he said problems seemed to have been solved.

But the two women said no significant changes have been made as a result of that meeting and expressed disappointment that Stupich had accused them of deliberately causing confrontation.

"You seem to have failed to understand that to truly represent the consumer interest, particularly at a time when food problems and prices are major public concerns, we must question and challenge decisions and practices which do not appear to be in the public interest."

The council was set up by the provincial government to consider problems in the food industry, make recommendations to the government and conduct their own investigations. The membership is chosen from organizations with involvement in every facet of the food industry.

Wailing Arabs Mourn Faisal

Times News Services

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Thousands of wailing Arabs mobbed the coffin of assassinated King Faisal, 69, before the world's richest monarch was buried in an unmarked grave today. (See obituary page 12.)

It was the only public portion of the simple funeral rites prescribed by the puritanical Wahabi sect of Islam.

A radio announcer reported Faisal's brother King Khaled burst into tears as he prayed over the body, starting a chain reaction among the audience.

There was no official word on the fate of Faisal's assassin, who the Saudi radio said earlier was a mentally deranged nephew of the king. Some Beirut newspapers said Faisal's bodyguards killed him. Others said he was arrested and would be beheaded in public after the funeral.

Saudi Arabia applies the Koranic law of the Sharia, which calls for murderers to be beheaded. Trials in the kingdom are brief and devoid of many of the legal touches of the West.

Radio Riyadh said the assassin gunned down his uncle during court ceremonies marking the birthday of the prophet Mohammed.

The radio said the American-educated prince walked the length of Faisal's palace in Riyadh, greeted the monarch with kisses on both cheeks, pulled a revolver from beneath a robe and fired three shots into the king.

Palestine guerrilla chieftain Yasser Arafat was standing at King Faisal's side when the monarch was assassinated, the Palestinian news agency WAFA reported today.

"It was the will of the Almighty that Palestine was the last to see the king and the first to bid him farewell," said Arafat.

Acquaintances in Berkeley said the accused assassin dropped out of the University of California in 1973 because of "scholastic difficulties" and was "worried about returning home in disgrace."

Two years before, he had

CLRA Seeking Picket Removal

The Construction Labor Relations Association applied late Tuesday to the B.C. Labor Relations Board for removal of pickets from three construction sites in the area.

The association has asked the board to order Canadian Union of Public Employees pickets removed from the James Bay Plaza, Spectrum community secondary school and the Juan de Fuca Ice Arena.

Board registrar Ron Bone said the application is being investigated, but no hearing has been set.

Oil Nations Said Short Of Cash

LONDON (Reuter) — Several Middle East oil-exporting countries are running short of ready cash, bank sources here report.

Some of the smaller Persian Gulf countries have even sought bridging loans on the international capital market to pay for their ambitious development programs, oficals say.

The problem is that falling demand for oil and the need to extend customer credit, for up to 90 days in some cases, to avoid further production cuts has thrown budgets out of balance.

Oil states are cashing part of the short-term certificates of deposit on the international capital market into which they channelled vast sums of surplus oil revenues after the five-fold increase in prices.

Bankers said they had previously expected the oil producers to renew almost all these certificates as they matures.

The oil-exporting countries find that inflation has made their bills, particularly for industrial goods, much higher than they expected a year ago, the bankers said.

NEWS BRIEFS

More Geneva Talks?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today the U.S. soon will contact the Soviet Union to prepare for resumption of the Geneva peace conference on the Middle East.

Describing the situation as "a moment of potentially grave danger," Kissinger told a news conference the U.S. was engaged in a total reassessment of its approach.

Kidnap Deal Near

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Southern Yemen bowed to a new French plea tonight and agreed to give shelter to the kidnappers of France's ambassador to Somalia.

The move paved the way for the release of the envoy, kidnapped Sunday night as he was leaving church services.

$150,000 Extorted

MONTREAL (CP) — Three men extorted $150,000 from a downtown Bank of Montreal branch Tuesday after holding the bank manager's wife and another woman hostage in their home, police said.

Indians Picket On Land Claims

Native Indian representatives converged on the legislature Tuesday to pressure the government for action on the settlement of claims on cut-off Indian reserve lands.

They met opposition leaders, talked with Atlin NDP MLA Frank Calder, picketed outside the building and sat in the house while opposition members questioned the government on their behalf.

The Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs has given the government an April 1 deadline to change its policies on the question of cut-off lands.

If they don't hear from the government by that date, more militant action is planned and could involve highway blockades and sit-ins.

Union spokesman Adam Eneas, of the Penticton Band, said his people are growing more militant as they become increasingly frustrated about government inaction on 36,000 acres of cut-off lands.

"It is difficult to keep them under control," he said. "There is always the possibility of bloodshed."

The union has proposed a tripartite commission be established, with one provincial, one federal and two Indian representatives. The commission would establish general principles for settlement and then work out details of individual land settlements for the 23 different bands involved.

In the legislature, Human Resources Minister Norm Levi said he was not prepared to deal with ultimatums but a lengthy meeting between cabinet ministers and the Indians was held earlier this month.

Those communications with cabinet will continue, said Levi, but he will not recommend a meeting between the Indians and a full cabinet group before April 1.

Levi also said he would comment on the merit of the cut-off lands claims.

Oppostion leader Bill Bennett, who questioned Levi in the house, said earlier his party has had a series of meetings with the union on the question of cut-off lands.

"As a government," he said, "we would be prepared to meet in negotiations with the Indians.

"We told them we couldn't guarantee them a settlement if we were government because that would be decided in negotiation," said Bennett.

The problem with the NDP government is they made a lot of promises beforehand, said Bennett, and now have not delivered. The Socreds will not make the same mistake, he said.

MISSED PLANE

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — B.C. longshoremen will take an extra day to return to work because officials in Ottawa serving legislation on the union missed a plane.

The 4,000 men at 11 ports were to be back on the job Tuesday night but instead will go back Thursday at 8 a.m.

The emergency legislation, rushed through parliament Monday night was to have arrived in Vancouver Tuesday morning.

But by noon Tuesday still hadn't arrived.

"Anyone can miss a plane," explained Gerard Bertrand, assistant secretary to the cabinet and the man in charge of getting the legislation out to the longshoremen.

Union leaders had refused to order their membership to obey the legislation and return to work until they had studied the document.

However, one union spokesman described the legislation as "very repressive', leaving 'everyone of us liable to prosecution."

Broadbent to Run For Leadership

OTTAWA (CP) — Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, said today he has decided to seek the NDP leadership despite an announcement two months ago that he would not be a candidate.

Casa Loma Probe Sought by Gov't

The provincial government has requested an RCMP investigation into the construction of the controversial Casa Loma housing development in Burnaby, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Tuesday.

The RCMP commercial fraud section has been asked to look into charges of irregularities made by one of the sub-contractors in the complex purchased by the government for $3.17 million for senior citizens' housing.

Macdonald's announcement was lauded by Liberal leader David Anderson as "marking the turning point."

"At last there's some sort of an inquiry into Casa Loma. It's quite a breakthrough," said Anderson who in February asked Macdonald about the charges by one of the subcontractors.

Anderson said Neville Barnard, of N.B. Electric Ltd., had written to the attorney-general's department asking for an investigation into certain alleged fraudulent actions which took place in development of the complex, by Casa Loma Ltd.

The attorney-general, in the house, said Barnard charged there was preferential treatment among lien-holders and claimed some funds were spent on other premises and charged to Casa Loma.

"I don't order investigations without evidence," said Macdonald, adding that Barnard has admitted he has no evidence to back up his charges.

"But I've asked the commercial fraud section to look into it."

Macdonald said Barnard could seek civil remedies but they would have to be considered separate from the RCMP investigation.

Last month Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson drew opposition fire on the government's purchase of the complex.

Since then representatives of 40 subcontractors who were paid off as low as 42 cents on the dollar have launched an action in the B.C. Supreme Court.

Home Ownership Plan Most Popular as Tax Shelter

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Most Victorians buying registered home ownership savings plans are using them as a tax dodge rather than being concerned about buying a house, according to a spot check by the Times.

The program was designed by Ottawa to help couples or young single people put aside $1,000 a year to a maximum of $10,000 towards buying a first home.

However, the regulations finally agreed upon by Parliament were so broad that anyone could participate as long as he did not have real estate in his or her name during 1974 or in 1975.

This meant that executives who had previously put their house in the wife's name became eligible for a tax saving although in reality they already have a house.

The $1,000 put into the plan can be deducted from taxable income. If both husband and wife are working and neither owns real estate they can each put in $1,000 per year. There is no tax advantage for a wife to contribute if she has no taxable income.

"Most of the people taking out these plans are middle aged or older who are using them for a tax advantage," said Hamish Manson, manager of the Victoria branch of Canada Permanent Trust Co.

"A few of these people are renting but many have a husband or wife who already own a home."

Allan Mactier, trust development manager for Royal Trust Co. in Victoria, said the average couple taking out the plans were in their thirties and well aware of the tax advantages.

E. T. M. McBride, manager of the main Victoria branch of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, said a tax shelter was the main goal of those taking out plans at his bank.

"This is due in part to the fact that most young people just don't have $1,000 to set aside. Maybe next year after they have had time to save money they will be in a position to participate."

The bank and trust company spokesmen agreed that while the plans were mainly being used as a tax shelter this year, the situation might change in 1976.

"Older people are more aware of the importance of exploring every avenue of tax saving," McBride said.

"It is a matter of education. I expect there will be more young people taking out a plan next year."

The money collects an annual interest and the principal and interest can be withdrawn tax-free at any time as long as the cash is used to buy a house or furniture.

Once the money has been withdrawn, however, the contributor can not begin a new plan.

Deadline for contributing this year is March 31.

Clerical Salaries 'Unfair'

Clerical workers are discriminated against in salary scales and the provincial government should take the initiative to grant higher wages to staff, B.C. cabinet members were told Tuesday.

The Business and Professional Women's Clubs of B.C. and the Yukon met Premier Barrett and other cabinet members and presented a 10-page brief with five requests.

Clerical jobs require a high level of dexterity, responsibility and initiative, said the association which represents 26 organizations, but the salaries they receive do not reflect those requirements.

Comparing clerks with laborers, the brief said laborers, who have no special training or skill, receive an average of $4.52 to $6.06 an hour from school boards, while clerks receive between $3.81 to $4.73 an hour.

The public service now recognizes the principle of equal pay for comparable work, said the brief, and so the government should lead the way for private business to correct unfair salary scales.

Among the other recommendations of the group, is a request for adoption of a provincial funeral act.

The act they envision would allow for "the right of self disposition, planned in a calm and rational state of mind."

It would eliminate much of the expense and protect consumers from deceptive trade practices.

—To implement a province-wide emergency number of "911".

The women's group also urged the government:

—To support the inclusion of a bill of rights into the British North America Act.

—To place the women's bureau of the department of labor into the human rights branch.

7-Day Debate Ends

After seven days of debate, often punctuated by Premier Barrett's growing impatience over what he termed stalling tactics, estimates on the premier's office finally were approved Tuesday in the legislature.

The Socreds resisted to the end. James Chabot (Columbia River) put forward a new series of questions for the premier to answer but Barrett had left the house.

Committee of supply chairman Gerald Anderson (NDP-Kamloops) proceeded to call for a vote on the estimates despite Chabot's protests that his questions were unanswered. He urged a delay until Barrett returned.

Chabot was overruled in this request and in another that the sitting be adjourned.

The vote on the estimates then followed.

Earlier, Barrett threatened to change the rules of debate because of the difficulties of having his office's estimates put to a vote.

"I'm seriously considering a debate schedule for every minister so they will be able to do their duty and answer opposition questions," said Barrett, charging the opposition was trying to thwart democratic proceedings by filibustering debate.

The government may set an allotted time on estimates so every mininster can be heard, if the opposition continues its irresponsibile tactic, said Barrett.

"I'm enjoying the opportunity of pummelling the opposition. I've never had such frequent opportunity to let them expose themselves."

Brunt of his attack was aimed at the Liberal party which has dominated much of the debate on the premier's office extimates by attempting to introduce discussion on natural gas export price increases.

But debate on Barrett's office estimates died late in the afternoon and moved on to other estimates in the finance department.

All the finance department estimates were passed fairly quickly during the evening sitting and Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich had his department's estimates passed within 12 minutes — one of the shortest debates on record.

MISSILES PROTESTED

A group of church members met with the NDP caucus Tuesday to express concern about the Trident missile base in Bangor, Washington.

The six delegates, from different religious denominations, presented a brief expressing concern about four separate issues.

The first involved the location of the long-range undersea missile system just 60 miles south of Victoria.

"We are alerting church people to write for federal protest but we're also here to urge the B.C. government to make formal protest on its own part," said the brief.

On provincial plans for developing the northwest sector of B.C., the brief urged the government to insure full public discussion and consultation with people in the north before any plans are undertaken.

The group urged the caucus to be as open as possible about all the development plans.

The brief also called on the government to provide full public funding to subsidize the operation of government and non-profit housing programs for low income people, and urged the NDP to become actively involved in negotiations to settle the Indian cut-off lands claims.

Two-Year Time Limit Set To Launch Damage Suits

Legislation which extends the time limit in which B.C. residents can launch legal suits for damages to two years from one was introduced in the legislature Tuesday by Attorney - General Alex Macdonlad.

"The Limitations Act," said Macdonald, "is another effort to make the law of B.C. understandable to the people of B.C."

New legislation, he said, is an effort to codify limitations on many sections of the law.

Previous law is one of the most obscure and archaic areas of law in B.C.

"You can't sue a doctor if you let so many months go by; you can't sue a municipality unless such and such a time goes by," he said. "That's what we're talking about, statutory bars, after which you can't maintain your lawsuit.

"It's all very well to say that ignorance of the law is no excuse but that's the way it's been, so the only answer . . . is to make law understandable."

Lawsuits will be allowed after a uniform two years and special extensions will be provided in certain areas.

Amendments to other acts which allow conformity include the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority Act, 1964, the Credit Unions Act, the Families' Compensation Act, the Minimum Wage Act and the Official Guardian Act.

Additional legislation introduced by the attorney-general enables a public trustee to take control of an estate to prevent dissipation of assets for a patient in a small community health centre.

Man Jailed For Raping Nun

NEW YORK (AP) — A Bronx man has been sentenced to up to 25 years in jail for raping an elderly nun in a convent corridor as she returned from evening mass.

The rapist, Samuel Kelly, 22, is a previously convicted felon and must serve at least 12½ years of the rape sentence before becoming eligible for parole.

A jury convicted Kelly of threatening the nun, aged 63, with a butcher knife, raping her and then gagging her with her veil.

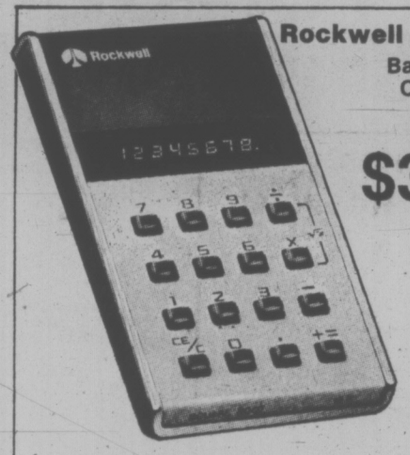
"The Answers"

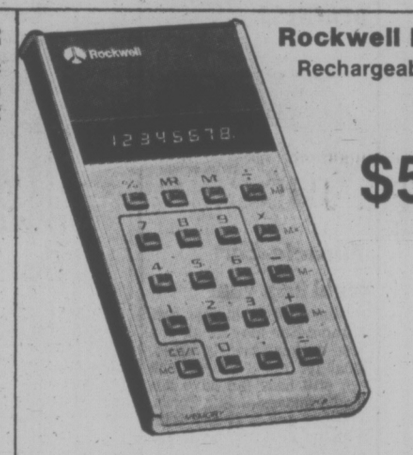
Willson's introduces the answers with a versatile new line of electronic calculators from Rockwell

Rockwell



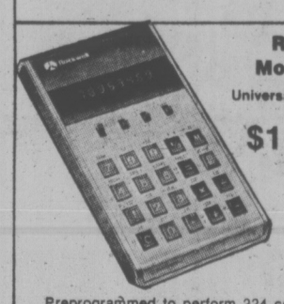
Rockwell Model 12R
Basic Electronic Calculator with Square Root
$34.95

Particularly useful for household calculations — from balancing the checkbook to checking school assignments and counting calories — this economical calculator is ideal for everyday figuring. It has: • Addition, subtraction, multiplication, division, square root. • Algebraic logic (enter 5-3=, receive answer 2). • Floating decimal (positions decimal point automatically). • Repeat function (a timesaver for consecutive calculations repeating the same number). • Duel clear entry/clear key. Battery operation. • AC adapter included. • Lightweight, just 5 ounces. • Carrying case (Model 205R) is also available.



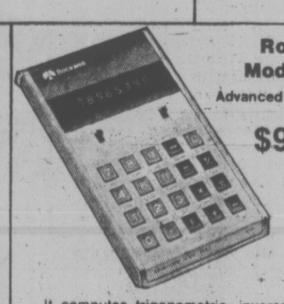
Rockwell Model 21R
Rechargeable Calculator with Memory and Percent
$59.95

Its addressable memory and percent key make this model especially handy for figuring income tax, commissions and all calculations involving percentages. The automatic mark-on and discount are of great value to retailers. And the addressable memory allows simultaneous performance of separate calculations which can later be intermixed. The 21R features • Addition, subtraction, multiplication, division and percent. • Fully addressable memory (allowing m+, m−, m×, m÷, mc and mr operations). • Overflow protection with wrap-around decimal. • Automatic constants. • Repeat function. • Duel clear entry/clear key. • Rechargeable batteries, AC charger and vinyl carrying case included.



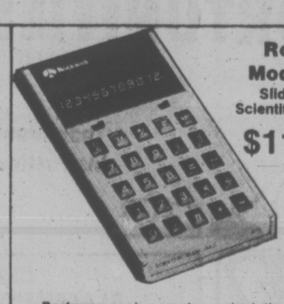
Rockwell Model 51R
Universal Converter
$119.95

Preprogrammed to perform 224 conversions involving U.S., metric and imperial units of measure (feet/meters/nautical miles/etc.). It can be user-programmed for special problems. There is no limit to the number of conversion factors the 51R can handle. And much more: • Addition, subtraction, multiplication, division. • Two addressable memories. • Fraction calculations. • Two-place or floating decimal selection. • Automatic constants. • Repeat function. • Dual clear entry/clear key. • Extra-large display. • Rechargeable batteries, AC charger and vinyl carrying case included.



Rockwell Model 61R
Advanced Slide Rule
$99.95

It computes trigonometric, inverse trigonometric, logarithmic and inverse logarithmic functions and calculates roots, powers, reciprocals and sum of the squares. It also has: • Extra large 8-digit display. • Addressable memory. • Automatic floating decimal. • Degree/radian mode selection. • Memory/display exchange. • Automatic constants. • Register exchange. • Sign change. • Constant pi. • Duel clear entry/clear key. • Rechargeable batteries, AC charger and vinyl carrying case included.



Rockwell Model 63R
Slide Rule with Scientific Notation
$119.95

Performs such complex calculations as factorial computations, degree/radian conversions, parenthetical operations, exponent capabilities for working in scientific notation. It features: • Extra-large 12 digit display with scientific notation (dynamic range 10^{-99} to 10^{99}). • Fully addressable memory. • Two levels of parenthetical operations. • Enter exponent key for scientific notation. • Degree/radian mode selection. • Memory/display exchange. • Automatic constants and repeat function. • Register exchange and sign change. • Factorial • Constant pi. • Duel clear entry/clear key. • Rechargeable batteries. • AC charger and vinyl carrying case

WARRANTY

Electronic calculators from Rockwell are warranted to the original purchaser for a period of one year from the original date of purchase — under normal use and service — against defective materials or workmanship. If the machine fails within 90 days of purchase Willson's will replace it on return.

AA Plans Weekend Rally

Up to 400 people are expected to take part in the 21th annual rall yof Alcoholics Anonymous, to be held at the Westwind International Motor Inn at Langford over the Easter weekend.

The rally will feature two public meetings, Friday evenigns and Sunday afternoon, although the public can attend any meeting during the three-day program.

Among associated groups taking part are Alanon and Alateen.

Alanon family groups help a problem drinker's family adjust to lead more normal lives. Alateen helps young people, aged 12 to 20, cope with problems caused by drinking habits of parents, relatives or friends.

The open meeting Friday evening at 7 p.m. will be based on the rally theme, "The Joy of Livng," while the public meeting Sunday at 1:30 p.m. deals with "As Others See Us" and will include clerical, medical and legal speakers from the community.

The first meeting Friday, from 2 to 4 p.m. is on the topic: "There is a Solution." Speakers will be from Port Alberni.

Alanon and Alateen meetings will be held Saturday, at 10 a.m., 1:30 and 3:30 p.m. and Sunday at noon.

Council Quiet on TV Bid

Pacific Rim Broadcasting Ltd., a Vancouver-based group which is one of the applicants for the last remaining televison channel in the Vancouver-Victoria area, requested but didn't receive a commitment of support from Victoria city council on Tuesday.

However, after the delegation had left the caucus meeting Ald. Mike Young remarked that the group's plans for local news coverage and programming were a big improvement on the submission of another competitor for Channel 10, Ten Television Ltd.

Use of the channel will be awarded by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission following a public hearing in Vancouver next month.

Among the parties interested in obtaining the channel for Victoria-based stations, are the CBC and the B.C. government, but the federal cabinet announced last week no special consideration would be given to either.

Pacific Rim spokesman Seymour Epstein told council his group's transmitter would be in Vancouver although Victoria programming via cable would originate from studios in the Empress Hotel, and within the first five-year licence period the company would install full transmitter service in Victoria.

The station's philosophy would be to "try to be an alternative station," with strong Canadian content in peak viewing hours but also providing many good programs from Commonwealth and European countries that are now not available for Canadian viewers.

After Epstein had stressed some of the advantages the station would offer to local advertisers, Mayor Peter Pollen said it was a fallacious assumption that businessmen want more advertising opportunities.

"I say this as a plea — for God's sake save us," he added. "It's not just back-to-back (commercials) any more; I saw six in a row the other night."

"That's why they call it Channel 6," quipped Ald. Malcolm Anderson.

Council finally agreed Ald. Young should draft a letter to the CRTC, asking that the commission give serious consideration to the applicant providing the best Victoria coverage.

Average Paycheque $191.62

OTTAWA (CP) — Average weekly earnings for about 4.2 million workers rose by 3.6 per cent in January to $191.62, Statistics Canada reports.

The average for January wage figures to discount sea-January, 1974.

The consumer price index was up five-tenths of one per cent in January and it rose 12.1 per cent during the 12 months to January.

Statistics Canada adjusts wage fitures to discount seasonal factors and on a seasonally-adjusted basis there was a 1.6-per-cent rise in January.

The highest actual average is for construction workers, up 11.2 per cent in January to $267.01.

WATER SUPPLY ENOUGH

A water availability study of the Dean Park area of North Saanich shows a 113-house development project planned for the area is compatible with existing water supplies.

North Saanich council will likely consider final approval for the subdivision at its April 7 meeting.

The whole subdivision plan, to be developed by Dean Park Developments Ltd., includes a 600-acre site which stretches north from Dean Park on East Saanich Road and west from the federal agriculture department's research station.

The 113-houses are only the first phase of the development plan.

Final approval on the project was withdrawn until the completion of the water study.

INJURIES UP 12%

On the job injuries in B.C. last year resulted in 1.5 million days lost from work, according to recent figures released by the Workers' Compensation Board Tuesday.

The WCB's annual report listed 145,908 work injuries during 1974, a 12.9 per cent increase over 1973.

Claims for which first payments were made in 1974 totalled 56,124, a 10.7 per cent increase over the previous year.

Total expenditures for those claims amounted to $79,920,126 and 89 per cent of those funds went to men.

Enforcement of accident prevention regulations is a major activity of the board and 24,668 inspection reports were filed last year containing 44,417 orders for the correction of unsafe working conditions.

A total of 228 accident investigations were undertaken and penalty assessments were levied against 230 employers.

6 All-Party Committee Heads Named

Five NDP MLAs and one Soered member were elected chairmen of six all-party legislative committees Tuesday.

Alex Fraser (SC-Cariboo) will be chairman of the Public Accounts and Economic Affairs committee and Roy Cummings' (NDP—Vancouver Little Mountain) was elected secretary.

Heading the environment and resources committee is NDP backbencher Bob Skelly (Alberni) and Gay Lockstead (NDP—Mackenzie).

Chairman of the transport and communications committee is Harold Steeves (NDP—Richmond) and Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst is secretary.

Others elected are: Carl Linden (NDP—Delta) chairman, municipal affairs and housing, Karen Sanford (NDP—Comox) secretary; Rosemary Brown, chairman of health education and human resources, Peter Rolston, secretary; Colin Bableman, chairman of labor and justice committee, secretary, Rosemary Brown.

Chairmen are paid $1,000 plus a per diem rate to cover travelling expenses.

NOBLE . . . bit like a war

JUVENILE DELINQUENTS

Not Punks But Casualties

Hanged by a commitment to persevere.

Sounds like a quirk of justice, but that's just how John Noble feels.

It's a hell of a mouthful, but right now Noble is executive director of social services and income security for the B.C government's Department of Human Resources.

And before that job, after coming from his native Scotland in 1966, he was director of the Island Youth Centre at Brannan Lake, near Nanaimo, for seven years.

Now the centre is in the news, as it has often been before, of course, because of the exploits of a few runaways and the recent outcries of Duncan Mayor Kenneth Paskin.

Paskin laid the blame on the department of human resources and on minister Norm Levi after some youths, said to have been from the centre, stole a car recently and were involved in a high-speed chase by police. But that was only one incident among several involving juveniles in the Cowichan Valley during recent months.

Levi, under heavy pressure in the house all last week because of Brannan Lake and the question of what he did with a $200 campaign donaton, manages a wry smile and says: "Has there been trouble there lately?"

"Kids have been running away from there for 20 years, it's no new phenomenon," adds Levi, who says that it comes down to the issue of whether there should be a place where kids can be locked up.

"At no time in 20 years and under any government, as far as I am aware, has there been a locked prison fo rjuveniles in B.C.," says Levi.

It's obvious Mayor Paskin thinks there should be since he has been threatening to file criminal charges against Levi for contributing to juvenile delinquency in allowing youths to "escape."

Although there has been no locked prison, as Levi says, there was a "security wing" in the old days at Brannan Lake which, according to both the minister and Noble, was pretty frightening.

Then, behind the doors of their locked rooms, many boys tried to slash their wrists or hang themselves with their belts.

"The trouble with containment is that you condition a kid for a life in prison," says Noble. "Records show that a kid who has been locked up continues in a life of crime."

"I'm not opposed to containment," adds Noble, "I'm just opposed to the way containment has been used. I'm opposed to its over-use for kids who don't need it."

Opened in 1954 with 128 youths, Brannan Lake was supposed to hold a maximum of 150. But there was a constant battle with overcrowding, with often as many as 220 boys there from all over the province.

In 1969, the department

changed the setup so radically to incorporate a community care-type system that the name was changed to Island Youth Centre. However, and this has created a little confusion for both the news media and the public, the junior high school within the premises retained the name Brannan Lake and is now administered by the Nanaimo School District. And it is staffed by principal Frank Murphy and six teachers who are not responsible to the human resources department.

The youth centre became something completely new. No longer was it a dumping ground for the courts where "kids were sent by court order and just turned up at the door in a police car." It became a place where social workers could refer youths.

And it no longer catered to the whole province. It became a centre with a capaity of only 48 youths in residence — 12 in the reception and assessment building run by Tom Williams, 16 in the Vancouver Island youths' program handled by Joe Sasvari, and 20 in the program for youths from the Lower Mainland, run by Joe Alexis.

Students from both the youth centre and from outside attend the Brannan Lake School.

To understand the centre, you have, says Noble, to understand the kids.

"Juvenile delinquents are from families where parents are in conflict on how to bring up the kids. Many of the kids are not deterred by punishment — they're hooked on punishment. They have been told all the time, by parents and by police, if you do this . . . then you will go there.

"These are kids where the only guaranteed thing is punitive rejection. They run away from the centre to go home and pretty soon they run away from home, too.

"The public gets an impression over the years that running away is a continuing problem. If only people would realize that if they cleaned up juvenile delinquency in their own areas, they wouldn't have runaways from Brannan Lake.

"To my mind, nobody has come up with an answer to juvenile delinquency. It's a problem of our urban society and it's one that won't be solved by our institutions.

"It's a bit like a war the stretcher-bearers can save a few casualties, but you can't save them all. Unfortunately, the public doesn't see them as casualties but as punks."

John Noble pauses to smile a sad kind of smile.

"You know, a lot of people say we should send the kids off into the bush somewhere but it's unrealistic. You have to have staff working with them — and staff doesn't want to live in the bush — and there has to be access to medical and psychiatric services. People just want them to be far away from them, out of sight out of mind. It doesn't matter what they are doing.

"We could have a very nice program for the mayor of Duncan and the mayor of Nanaimo and the mayor of everywhere," says Noble with another smile, "simply by not taking the kids who are persistent runaways."

LEVI
. . . nothing new

"Yes, if we took only those who had no history of running away, everyone would be happy with Brannan Lake. But no one would be looking after the difficult kids. The whole emphasis, the pressure from the news media and from the community, is on us to say 'No' to the kids who really need us, who really need help.

"We have committed ourselves to take difficult kids and to persevere with them, even if they run away and get into trouble again.

"And it's that commitment we've been hanged with."

Gunman Hits Drugstore

A slim, gaunt man in his early 20s this morning held up Morley's Five Point Pharmacy, 1273 Fairfield, the second armed robbery in Victoria within 15 hours.

Pharmacist Clare Morley, who was in a back room talking to a friend, said the purple-jacketed man entered the store at 10:30 a.m. and presented a note to a clerk.

The note read he had a gun and ordered her to hand over the money in the till.

There was no one else in the store at the time.

No gun, howvr, waes produced.

Morley said the girl momentarily balked and the man, who appeared nervous, told her to hurry up and fill a bag he was carrying.

Morley said there was about $366 in the till at the time.

Morley said he caught a glimpse of the man as he left the store and chased him down Cornwall to Carnsew where he lost him.

Within minutes Victoria police were on the scene and began a search of the area but at noon had no suspect in custody.

The robbery was the second in Victoria in the past 15 hours.

On Tuesday night a man between 18 and 20 held up Oxford Foods, 271 Cook, and fled with $410.

Police said the man, who wore a wide-brimmed black felt hat and dark clothing, entered the store shortly before 7:30 p.m. and after five minutes shopping went to the counter with about $3 worth of goods.

He handed the cashier Anna Louie $4 to pay for the items. When she opened the till he looked around furtively and then produced a six-inch hunting knife placing it against her right shoulder.

Police said he told her not to make a move or say anything as he reached over and took the bills from the till.

When he pulled away with the money, the cashier screamed for help.

Three customers rushed to the front to see the robber run off. As he went out the door he brushed against a man who was about to enter. The man chased him down Cook and caught him by the coat.

The suspect turned and still brandishing the knife warned the man to let go, which he did. The robber escaped down a back alley between Oxford and Chapman.

Leak, Log Disrupt Ferry Runs

A leak and a log caused temporary disruption of the B.C. ferry service today.

The Sechelt Queen left Long Harbor on Salt Spring Island this morning on her normal run through the Gulf Islands to Tsawwassen but had to drop her passengers off at Swartz Bay.

A ferry spokesman said she had buckled a plate during heavy weather on Tuesday and this would be repaired alongside at Swartz Bay.

The Tsawwassen, scheduled to be on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen run today, was diverted and was due to take on the 4:40 p.m. sailing from Long Harbor.

The Queen of Saanich was put info action to help fill the gap but the noon sailing from Swartz Bay and the 2 p.m. trip from Tsawwassen had to be cancelled.

The Queen of Nanaimo had just set out on her 7:15 a.m. run from Horseshoe Bay to Nanaimo when a log became jammed under her hull near the propeller.

She was forced to return to Horseshoe Bay, where the log was cleared and she was able to carry out her 11:45 a.m. sailing.

Ministers Agree With Parents Children Pawns in Dispute

Fifty concerned mothers gathered at the Legislative Buildings Tuesday to protest the continuing labor dispute constricting Greater Victoria schools.

Mothers led by Sharon MacBain, 1679 Kisber, met Education Minister Eileen Dailly and Labor Minister Bill King to press for provincial government intervention.

Dailly and King agreed that children were the pawns in the five-week old dispute, but said responsibility for coming to some agreement rests with the school board and Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, bargaining for school custodians.

King said the government had offered the assistance of an industrial inquiry commissioner, but the employers turned it down.

He said the government feels deep concern for the school students and suggested mothers take their demonstration to school trustees and the union.

"The government cannot be used as a tool to settle every dispute," said King, urging the two parties accept the responsibility and reach some settlement.

Settling the strike is beyond the power of the government said Dailly. She said the only option open to her is to refuse grants to school boards, a route she is unwilling to follow.

The delegation asked the government to outlaw such future strikes.

"We don't care about management or the union," said Mrs. MacBain, who has four children in school. "We just don't want the children used as pawns."

Admitting she was nervous, Mrs. MacBain said 166 parents had indicated support for provincial government intervention.

"Let's pass a law that this can't happen in our schools," she said, requesting that some measure be taken so schools could be open from 9-11 a.m. and 1-3 p.m.

The majority of schools are open three hours each day, but 17 without heat are limited to one-hour.

King, responding to Mrs. MacBain said compulsory arbitration was adopted in Australia and now that country "has a sorrier record than us."

Dailly said there is no point in electing trustees to local school boards if she is expected to make all decisions.

The mothers then drove to Greater Victoria school board offices, where they crowded into the board room for a 45-minute meeting with community relations officer Bill Stavdal.

The group was told district superintendent Jake Longmore was too busy to talk to them, Mrs. MacBain said.

The mothers repeated their demand that regular classes be somehow resumed, but Stavdal told them he could make no promises.

"You're asking me policy questions that are going to have to be decided by the board," he said.

He said the situation regarding the strike is changing daily, particularly with Tuesday's court injunction limiting picketing.

"We can expect changes in the bargaining situation very soon," he said.

Stavdal met with two groups of concerned parents the same afternoon.

All will be invited to present their concerns to the board at its special meeting Thursday evening, he said.

About 25 irritated parents confronted Local 382 officers at the Union Centre Tuesday afternoon demanding a return to full school days.

Union vice-president Bob Cunningham told them if they didn't want another strike in nine months — when a new contract would expire — they had better take the matter up with Education Minister Dailly, Labor Minister King or Premier Barrett.

Chamber Finds Jobs For Young

Victoria Chamber of Commerce announced today it will co-ordinate two new government programs that could provide summer employment for several hundred young people in the Victoria area.

Robert Harvey, chairman of the chamber's educatoin and youth committee, said Victoria has been selected as a pilot project for a new federal government program that will provide three weeks employment this summer for 50 young people.

In addition, the chamber will co-ordinate a provincial government program to place young people in small businesses or farms in the Victoria area for two months this summer. There is no limit to the number who can be hired under the provincial program.

Harvey said the projects will be co-ordinated with the schools and Canada Manpower.

The chamber's role will be to locate employers in the district who are willing to hire the young people and then to assist with placing the students in appropriate jobs.

Announcement of the two programs was made to a meeting of chamber directors today.

The federal program will provide three weeks work at jobs selected by the young people in the 14 to 19 age bracket.

The federal department of manpower will pay 50 per cent of the wage cost up to $500 with employers paying the other 50 per cent.

One aim of the federal program is to demonstrate to young people the value of education in preparation for work. The government program is designed to discourage students from dropping out of school.

Canada Manpower and school counsellors will screen potential students for this program.

The provincial government program is designed to locate summer jobs for those who might have difficulty finding them on their own. The high rate of unemployment among young people is a factor in restricting the program to that age group.

The total number of young people hired will be limited only by the number of jobs available for them. In most cases these will be new jobs created because of low cost to the employer.

The provincial department of labor will pay 50 per cent of the salary to a maximum cost to the department of $300 per student.

The chamber has been asked to screen potential recipients of the jobs according to a priority list established by the provincial government.

Police Sketch Abductor

Saanich police Tuesday issued composite drawing of a young man who abducted a 17-year-old Saanich girl last Thursday and forced her to commit an indecent act.

The drawing was prepared by newly-appointed RCMP composite artist Cpl. John Faux, from the description provided by three witnesses.

The man is described as 5'10" tall, medium build, with a Fu Manchu style moustache, and between 19 and 25 years of age.

He abducted the girl as she and a friend were jogging along Tillicum near Burnside at 9:45 p.m..

Police said the man, believed to be named Marty, approached them driving a "dirty red" Toyota.

He forced one of the girls into his car at gun point. The other girl, age 16, managed to get away and hid in some bushes.

The man drove the girl to the rear of Spectrum Community School, 3814 Carey, where he stripped her and tried to rape her, police said.

He then drove to her to Marigold elementary school, and did the same thing, then after forcing her to commit an indecent act, took her back to where he had picked her up, and released her.

He threatened to kill her on both occasions, police said.

"The girls noticed he had a slightly protruding mouth, very soft voice and excellent diction," said Detective David McGregor, heading the investigation.

Police said they think the man is driving a 1973 to 75 dirty red Toyota two-door Corona with defroster wires in the back window, baick but clean interior and bucket seats with high backs.

An attempted abduction of a 16-year-old Esquimalt girl occurred at 9:30 that same evening in the Tillicum - Gorge area.

Fix Lights, CUPE Urged

Victoria Chamber of Commerce today called upon the Canadian Union of Public Employees to repair traffic lights despite the current strike-lockout.

Chamber transportation committee chairman Ron Campion said motorists face a severe hazard because some lights are not operating.

He said the left-hand turn signal at Douglas and Hillside, the left-hand turn signal at Hillside and Cook and the traffic light at the corner of Douglas and Finlayson have not been repaired due to the labor dispute.

"I am sure that a fatality or any accident for that matter caused by these signals not being operational due to the strike would weigh heavily on someone's conscience," Campion said.

The chamber directors voted unanimously to send a letter to the union requesting that repairs be made to the lights.

DECEIT, LIES USED IN RCMP QUIZZINGS

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Mountie always gets his man — apparently even if it means using brainwashing, lies, decit and sexism.

In a 39-page manual used by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police's training and development branch in Ottawa, officers are instructed to use a variety of techniques to break down a suspect.

They are told to start questioning with everything that is "legal and right." But, if this fails, "I suggest the Marquis of Queensbury rules go out the window and the interrogator must open up his bag of tricks," the book's preface says.

The booklet written by Calgary police inspector A. B. Roberts, was introduced in the Commons Tuesday by conservative member David Macdonald. Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said he would investigate it.

Macdonald, who charged the interrogation methods led to a "perjured information base," said he had an affidavit from RCMP headquarters that the manual was being used.

"To have this book as procedure for our national police is repugnant," he said.

The manual covers a wide variety of techniques, including brainwashing, which it says is designed to make the subject feel "completely foresaken and forgotten."

Once the suspect "is at the lowest depths of despair," after long hours of isolation and questioning, the interrogator is instructed to start "the heaven and hell technique." The prisoner then is offered comforts such as coffee, cigarettes, or an opportunity to see family and friends.

In emphasizing the heaven and hell possibilities, the booklet reminds the reader of the persuasive powers of such men as Adolf Hitler, John Wesley and Billy Graham.

The manual also includes various known police methods such as planting officers in cells, building a "pyramid of lies" to break down an alibi and promising that a secret deal can be made.

But it makes a special point of dealing with sex offenders and women suspects and stereotypes persons according to physique to determine what approach the officer should employ.

Officers are told they can gain confidence with sex offenders by telling them either

ALTA. VOTES

EDMONTON (CP) — Albertans choose today from 293 candidates and six political parties in a provincial election but they will upset tradition as old as the province itself if they decide to switch governments now.

Before the Conservatives first gained election in 1971, the average life span for uninterrupted rule by a governing party in Alberta had been 22 years.

Fight to the Death, Thieu Tells Men

LEGACY FROM PAST is enjoyed by the grandchildren of the man who gave two truckloads of daffodil bulbs for Beacon Hill Park. Leah and Joey, children of Mr. and Mrs. John Howroyd of 4308 Houlihan, savor the March sunshine and the blooms their grandfather, the late Joe Howroyd, made possible in 1957 with the gift from his bulb farm on Shelbourne. Times News Services

SAIGON — South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu today commanded government troops to stand and fight to the death at their present positions.

Thieu, reading an order of the day over the radio, said the Indochina war had reached a final, decisive phase.

"Starting today, fellow soldiers, you must at all costs interdict the enemy advance over your actual position and our actual front," he said.

"You must mobilize all your initiative and ability to destroy as many enemies as you can and to counterattack strongly."

North Vietnamese troops, meanwhile, captured the former imperial capital of Hue today and advanced toward isolated Da Nang, the last government bastion in upper South Vietnam.

Sources said a North Vietnamese armored column rumbled into Hue and the last government troops surrendered South Vietnam's third largest city without a fight.

Communist rockets bombarded Da Nang this morning, threatening the start of a giant American air and sea evacuation of one million persons from the refugee-swollen city.

Communist gunners ringing the city fired a barrage of 14 rockets at the Da Nang air base, killing six persons and wounding 34. Most of the victims were civilians.

Civilian-piloted, stripped-down American jetliners packed with refugees were to begin flying 10,000 persons a day to Cam Ranh Bay, a U.S.-built base on the central coast.

But U.S. ships will carry the bulk of the refugees from Da Nang, the second largest city in South vietnam, to the Cam Ranh sand dunes along the South China sea.

The most spectacular plans for evacuation called for the use of a Boeing 747 jumbo jet stripped of every amenity — seats, toilets, gallies. Officials hope to jam as many as 1,200 to 1,600 persons aboard each flight for Cam Ranh.

On the political front, deposed vice-president Nguyen Cao Ky emerged from political retirement today to lead a meeting in Saigon of officers and politicians opposed to Thieu.

Meeting behind closed doors, the group was discussing a proposal for Thieu to cede power to a National Salvation Front of moderate and radical opposition groups, informed sources said.

2 Quit to Protest Food Council Bias

Two consumer representatives have resigned from the B.C. Food Council and accused it of being weighted in favor of agricultural interests.

In a letter to Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich this week, Ada Brown and Ruth Lotzkar of Vancouver, members of the Consumers Association of Canada, said it would be jeopardizing their integrity to remain on the provincially-funded council.

The women said it was impossible to have the consumer viewpoint even considered at council meetings and membership in the group was weighted in favor of agricultural-related interests.

"However, our major concern was related to the lack of action and direction of the council," said the letter.

The women accused the council of refusing to tackle issues in depth or to take any investigative action in the food industry.

They "seriously questioned" the impartiality of council chairman Maurie King, associate deputy minister of agriculture.

The food council was often asked to rubber stamp ideas initiated by the department, they told Stupich.

The two consumer representatives had expressed their concern about the council last fall and in February Stupich himself chaired a meeting of the council at which time he said problems seemed to have been solved.

But the two women said no significant changes have been made as a result of that meeting and expressed disappointment that Stupich had accused them of deliberately causing confrontation.

"You seem to have failed to understand that to truly represent the consumer interest, particularly at a time when food problems and prices are major public concerns, we must question and challenge decisions and practices which do not appear to be in the public interest."

The council was set up by the provincial government to consider problems in the food industry, make recommendations to the government and conduct their own investigations. The membership is chosen from organizations with involvement in every facet of the food industry.

Oil Nations Said Short Of Cash

LONDON (Reuter) — Several Middle East oil-exporting countries are running short of ready cash, bank sources here report.

Some of the smaller Persian Gulf countries have even sought bridging loans on the international capital market to pay for their ambitious development programs, officials say.

The problem is that falling demand for oil and the need to extend customer credit, for up to 90 days in some cases, to avoid further production cuts has thrown budgets out of balance.

Oil states are cashing part of the short-term certificates of deposit on the international capital market into which they channelled vast sums of surplus oil revenues after the five-fold increase in prices.

Bankers said they had previously expected the oil producers to renew almost all these certificates as they mature.

The oil-exporting countries find that inflation has made their bills, particularly for industrial goods, much higher than they expected a year ago, the bankers said.

NEWS BRIEFS

More Geneva Talks?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today the U.S. soon will contact the Soviet Union to prepare for resumption of the Geneva peace conference on the Middle East.

Describing the situation as "a moment of potentially grave danger," Kissinger told a news conference the U.S. was engaged in a total reassessment of its approach.

Kidnap Deal Near

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Southern Yemen bowed to a new French plea tonight and agreed to give shelter to the kidnappers of France's ambassador to Somalia.

The move paved the way for the release of the envoy, kidnapped Sunday night as he was leaving church services.

$150,000 Extorted

MONTREAL (CP) — Three men extorted $150,000 from a downtown Bank of Montreal branch Tuesday after holding the bank manager's wife and another woman hostage in their home, police said.

Indians Picket On Land Claims

Native Indian representatives converged on the Legislature Tuesday to pressure the government for action on the settlement of claims on cut-off Indian reserve lands.

They met opposition leaders, talked with Atlin NDP MLA Frank Calder, picketed outside the building and sat in the house while opposition members questioned the government on their behalf.

The Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs has given the government an April 1 deadline to change its policies on the question of cut-off lands.

If they don't hear from the government by that date, more militant action is planned and could involve highway blockades and sit-ins.

Union spokesman Adam Eneas, of the Penticton Band, said his people are growing more militant as they become increasingly frustrated about government inaction on 36,000 acres of cut-off lands.

"It is difficult to keep them under control," he said. "There is always the possibility of bloodshed."

The union has proposed a tripartite commission be established, with one provincial, one federal and two Indian representatives. The commission would establish general principles for settlement and then work out details of individual land settlements for the 23 different bands involved.

In the legislature, Human Resources Minister Norm Levi said he was not prepared to deal with ultimatums but a lengthy meeting between cabinet ministers and the Indians was held earlier this month.

Those communications with cabinet will continue, said Levi, but he will not recommend a meeting between the Indians and a full cabinet group before April 1.

Levi also said he would comment on the merit of the cut-off lands claims.

Opposition leader Bill Bennett, who questioned Levi in the house, said earlier his nett, who questioned Levi in the house, said earlier his party has had a series of meetings with the union on the question of cut-off lands.

"As a government," he said, "we would be prepared to meet in negotiations with the Indians.

"We told them we couldn't guarantee them a settlement if we were government because that would be decided in negotiation," said Bennett.

The problem with the NDP government is they made a lot of promises beforehand, said Bennett, and now have not delivered. The Socreds will not make the same mistake, he said.

Casa Loma Probe Sought by Gov't

The provincial government has requested an RCMP investigation into the construction of the controversial Casa Loma housing development in Burnaby, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Tuesday.

The RCMP commercial fraud section has been asked to look into charges of irregularities made by one of the sub-contractors in the complex purchased by the government for $3.17 million for senior citizens' housing.

Macdonald's announcement was lauded by Liberal leader David Anderson as "marking the turning point."

"At last there's some sort of an inquiry into Casa Loma. It's quite a breakthrough," said Anderson who in February asked Macdonald about the charges by one of the subcontractors.

Anderson said Neville Barnard, of N.B. Electric Ltd., had written to the attorney-general's department asking for an investigation into certain alleged fraudulent actions which took place in development of the complex, by Casa Loma Ltd.

The attorney-general, in the house, said Barnard charged there was preferential treatment among lien-holders and claimed some funds were spent on other premises and charged to Casa Loma.

"I don't order investigations without evidence," said Macdonald, adding that Barnard has admitted he has no evidence to back up his charges.

"But I've asked the commercial fraud section to look into it."

Macdonald said Barnard could seek civil remedies but they would have to be considered separate from the RCMP inyestigation.

Last month Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson drew opposition fire on the government's purchase of the complex.

Since then representatives of 40 subcontractors who were paid off as low as 42 cents on the dollar have launched an action in the B.C. Supreme Court.

Wailing Arabs Mourn Faisal

Times News Services

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Thousands of wailing Arabs mobbed the coffin of assassinated King Faisal, 69, before the world's richest monarch was buried in an unmarked grave today. (See obituary page 12.)

It was the only public portion of the simple funeral rites prescribed by the puritanical Wahabi sect of Islam.

A radio announcer reported Faisal's brother King Khaled burst into tears as he prayed over the body, starting a chain reaction among the audience.

There was no official word on the fate of Faisal's assassin, who the Saudi radio said earlier was a mentally deranged nephew of the king. Some Beirut newspapers said Faisal's bodyguards killed him. Others said he was arrested and would be beheaded in public after the funeral.

Saudi Arabia applies the Koranic law of the Sharia, which calls for murderers to be beheaded. Trials in the kingdom are brief and devoid of many of the legal touches of the West.

Radio Riyadh said the assassin gunned down his uncle during court ceremonies marking the birthday of the prophet Mohammed.

The radio said the American-educated prince walked the length of Faisal's palace in Riyadh, greeted the monarch with kisses on both cheeks, pulled a revolver from beneath a robe and fired three shots into the king.

Palestine guerrilla chieftain Yasser Arafat was standing at King Faisal's side when the monarch was assassinated, the Palestinian news agency WAFA reported today.

"It was the will of the Almighty that Palestine was the last to see the king and the first to bid him farewell," said Arafat.

Acquaintances in Berkeley said the accused assassin dropped out of the University of California in 1973 because of "scholastic difficulties" and was "worried about returning home in disgrace."

Two years before, he had

CLRA Seeking Picket Removal

The Construction Labor Relations Association applied late Tuesday to the B.C. Labor Relations Board for removal of pickets from three construction sites in the area.

The association has asked the board to order Canadian Union of Public Employees pickets removed from the James Bay Plaza, Spectrum community secondary school and the Juan de Fuca Ice Arena.

Board registrar Ron Bone said the application is being investigated, but no hearing has been set.

Broadbent to Run For Leadership

OTTAWA (CP) — Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, said today he has decided to seek the NDP leadership despite an announcement two months ago that he would not be a candidate.

MISSED PLANE

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — B.C. longshoremen will take an extra day to return to work because officials in Ottawa serving legislation on the union missed a plane.

The 4,000 men at 11 ports were to be back on the job Tuesday night but instead will go back Thursday at 8 a.m.

The emergency legislation, rushed through parliament Monday night was to have arrived in Vancouver Tuesday morning.

But by noon Tuesday still hadn't arrived.

"Anyone can miss a plane," explained Gerard Bertrand, assistant secretary to the cabinet and the man in charge of getting the legislation out to the longshoremen.

Union leaders had refused to order their membership to obey the legislation and return to work until they had studied the document.

However, one union spokesman described the legislation as "very repressive', leaving 'everyone of us liable to prosecution."

Home Ownership Plan Most Popular as Tax Shelter

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Most Victorians buying registered home ownership savings plans are using them as a tax dodge rather than being concerned about buying a house, according to a spot check by the Times.

The program was designed by Ottawa to help couples or young single people put aside $1,000 a year to a maximum of $10,000 towards buying a first home.

However, the regulations finally agreed upon by Parliament were so broad that anyone could participate as long as he did not have real estate in his or her name during 1974 or in 1975.

This meant that executives who had previously put their house in the wife's name became eligible for a tax saving although in reality they already have a house.

The $1,000 put into the plan can be deducted from taxable income. If both husband and wife are working and neither owns real estate they can each put in $1,000 per year. There is no tax advantage for a wife to contribute if she has no taxable income.

"Most of the people taking out these plans are middle aged or older who are using them for a tax advantage," said Hamish Manson, manager of the Victoria branch of Canada Permanent Trust Co.

"A few of these people are renting but many have a husband or wife who already own a home."

Allan Mactier, trust development manager for Royal Trust Co. in Victoria, said the average couple taking out the plans were in their thirties and well aware of the tax advantages.

E. T. M. McBride, manager of the main Victoria branch of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, said a tax shelter was the main goal of those taking out plans at his bank.

"This is due in part to the fact that most young people just don't have $1,000 to set aside. Maybe next year after they have had time to save money they will be in a position to participate."

The bank and trust company spokesmen agreed that while the plans were mainly being used as a tax shelter this year, the situation might change in 1976.

"Older people are more aware of the importance of exploring every avenue of tax saving," McBride said.

"It is a matter of education. I expect there will be more young people taking out a plan next year."

The money collects an annual interest and the principal and interest can be withdrawn tax-free at any time as long as the cash is used to buy a house or furniture.

Once the money has been withdrawn, however, the contributor can not begin a new plan.

Deadline for contributing this year is March 31.
